MISS NINA LOUISE BENSON, Auburn, N. Y.: "Through the pages of THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW some months back my attention was called to Huneker's 'Life of Chopin,' and your comments on the book awakened my interest in it, as it was new to me. I have sent for a copy and have no greatly enjoyed it that I write now to ask you if you will be so kind as to give me, through your pages, some information regarding the clever, intriguing author, Mr. James Huneker."

James Gibbons Huneker, author of "Chopin, Man and Musician," is a Philadelphian by birth, but has been engaged in journalistic work in this city for about fifteen years. He was formerly the music critic of The Recorder newspaper, now defunct, and is at present engaged in the same work for The New York Sun. His first book, "Mezzo-tints in Modern Music," attracted wide attention in this country and Europe. Mr. Huneker began life as a pianist and was for years a professor in the National Conservatory of Music. He is still an excellent player, and his acquaintance with the piano music of which he writes is acquired by study at the instrument. He has catholic literary taste and is widely read in French and German literatures, as well as in English.

OLIVER B. JOHNSTON, 58 Putnam Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.: "Will you please, through your query column, tell me what the origin and true meaning of the letters 'O. K.' is? I am a reader of the great NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW, and have received much valuable information from the query columns."

Walsh's "Handy-Book of Literary Curiosities" says that it is plausibly held that in early colonial days the best rum and tobacco were imported from Aux Cayes, in San Domingo, and hence the best of anything came to be locally known as Aux Cayes, or O. K. The term passed into general use in the Presidential campaign of 1828, when the supposed illiteracy of Andrew Jackson, the Democratic candidate, was the stock in trade of his Whig opponents. Seba Smith, the humorist, started the story that Jackson indorsed his papers "O. K.," under the impression that they formed the initials of "Oil Korrect."

"A. B. S.," New York City: "Will you kindly name a small atlas, such as will be useful to a student who is weary of reading in literature and history of places that are no names. One is desired that is large enough to include all places likely to arise in ordinary reading, as well as including historical maps"?

The "Universal Atlas," Dodd, Mead & Co., $3.

JOHN PRENDERGAST, 150-156 Carnegie Hall, New York: "In reply to inquiry by Mr. J. O'Rorke: I am very much alive, thank you, and glad of it. I wish your correspondent would drop in here some time, and observe our work. Like others he might come to scoff and remain to pray. 'What's in a name,' that he does not know the object of my mission? I suspect. Though not yet a household word, my labors are sufficiently known on both sides of the Atlantic. It is my desire, however, to be recognized in my present undertaking as a thought, a force, and a voice only. I have certain obligations to fulfill, which can be most effectively accomplished in this way alone, and I shall demonstrate again the fallacy that nothing of moment can be achieved without ostentatious display, a great name, or a fortune back of it. The new century brings new powers of unfoldment. Let us use them for an exalted purpose, and work silently. Silence is golden."

Wanted and to Exchange.

Mrs. RICHARD L. RENINETZ, 44 Crescent Road, Madison, N. J.: "I wish to secure, through purchase or exchange, Collins's and Butler's histories of Kentucky."

W. P. WALLACE, Oswego, N. Y.: "I wish to dispose of or exchange for other books the following: Lossing's 'War of Independence,' 1847; Sparks's 'Life of Washington,' 1839; 'History of American History,' 1835; Knapp's 'United States,' 1834; 'Picturesque America,' 1872; original forty-eight parts; 'Picturesque Europe,' 1877, twenty-seven parts; Goldsmith's 'Vicar of Wakefield,' with life of author by Johnson, 1828; another edition of same, 1827; Bunyan's 'Pilgrim's Progress Versified,' by George Burder, Burlington, N. J., 1807, and Bunyan's 'Life and Death of Mr. Badmao,' London, 1698."

GUSTAV FLEISSNER, 246 East Fourth Street, New York City: "I have for sale and to exchange a large number of magazines, including The Review of Reviews, Scribner's, Munsey's, Atlantic Monthly, Godey's, Nickel, Harper's, McClure's, Century, Cosmopolitan, Blackwood's, Bachelor of Arts, Parisian, and North American."

W. S. BOURLAND, 420 Market Street, San Antonio, Texas: "Wanted, the following, for which I will pay a moderate price: 'Who's Who in America,' 1899; Forbes's 'Barracks, Bivouacs, and Battles'; 'Through the Cannon Smoke' and 'Soldiering and Scribbling'; 'Daily News War Correspondence of the Turco-Russian War'; Freeman's 'Historical Geography of Europe,' two volumes; Fitchett's 'How England Saved Europe,' four volumes, and his 'Fights for the Flag,' and Ditolla's 'History of Civil Wars in France,' Dublin, 1760. I have for exchange the following: 'Documentary History of the American Constitution,' and its several amendments, Washington, 1894, two volumes, linen cloth."

J. B. WARREN, 481 Alexander Street, Rochester, N. Y.: "I have for sale one copy each of the Roycrofter's 'Journal of Kahoteth,' 1895, and 'Song of Songs, Which Is Solomon's,' 1896, and will dispose of them to the highest bidder. I am desirous of securing other (and earlier) Roycroft books."

JOHN PHIN, 442 Fifteenth Avenue, Paterson, N. J.: "Wanted for cash or exchange, Shakespeare's works, variorum edition, twenty-one volumes, 1821; Staunton's fecsimile of the first folio edition (1623) of Shakespeare's works, and Walker's 'Critical Examination of the Text of Shakespeare.'"

The Rev. W. E. DARRACH, Ambler, Penn.: "I will give a fair price for any of the following: Cheap 12mo edition of Parkman's works, Dorn Clark's 'Saying the Catechism,' Oliver Byrne's 'Logarithms and Calculus,' published by the Appletons; Hackley's 'Algebra,' and elementary work on Calculus, Doctrine of Annuities and Interest by Bailey."

Appeals to Readers.

JOHN PHIN, 442 Fifteenth Avenue, Paterson, N. J.: "Can you or any of your readers tell me where to find a poem called 'The Redemption of Labor'? It was published about twenty-five or thirty years ago."

E. B. GLOVER, The Chestnuts, Lakewood, N. J.: "Will some one kindly tell me where I can secure a copy of a poem published about a year ago, entitled 'Priestess of Humanity,' and beginning:

In my hands I hold your future of unprofitable days,
All the arts that you profess are at my call;
Your learned historian now has come to sing my praise,
Your great artist yields to imperious thrall?"

MISS MAUDE FLORENCE BELLAR, 601 East Broad Street, Columbus, Ohio: "Will any of the readers of THE SATURDAY REVIEW who takes a deep interest in genealogy kindly give me any information relative to the history or descendants of Hugh Knox, clergyman; born in Ireland in 1733, died at Santa Cruz, West Indies, in 1790, and William Knox, British politician; born in Ireland in 1732, died at Ealing, England, in 1810? Also, of the history and descendants of the person mentioned in Lippincott's Biographical Dictionary as follows: 'Boller or Bellere, pronounced ba-loir; a Flemish typographer and writer; published at Antwerp a number of elegant editions of the classics; died in 1595?' The least information or clue will be gratefully received and valued, and if correspondents will give address I will be pleased to thank them through personal letters."

SILVANUS J. MACY, Chilmark, Avon, N. Y.—"I have a dictionary with the title page partially destroyed. It was purchased by my father in 1828. The printer was E. Williams, New London, Conn. Can any one inform me who was the author?"

BOOKS THAT ARE BOOKS.

A Surprised Foreigner Finds a Real Poem.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

I read with interest the harsh, but apparently conscientious, criticism of "Cynique" in THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW of last Saturday. I was delighted, too, to find a paper in your city (I am a foreigner) broad enough to surrender valuable space to plain talk such as that contained in the article in question. It would be extremely difficult, if not impossible, for a lover of literature to find space in a London publication for the expression of an opinion about the popular English writers of to-day such as your correspondent offers in your paper. This, I suppose, is due to the fact that authors have so many friends in the newspaper offices. I heartily agree with "Cynique's" contempt for the novelists and dialect writers of these days. I cannot, however, agree with his estimate of Mr. Stedman, Mr. Bret Harte, or Mr. Thomas Bailey Aldrich—I am not familiar with all Mr. Stoddard has written. All of these gentlemen, especially Mr. Aldrich, have written many things that will live. They are rated in Great Britain very highly.

Neither have I the gloomy view for the future of poetry that "Cynique" seems to have. Here, for instance, is a poem which I saw and cut from a recent issue of The New York Dramatic Mirror; a nobler composition than this it has never been my privilege to read in all my wanderings through poetic literature. I have never heard of this name, and, no doubt, it is a pen name assumed for the time by either Mr. Aldrich or Mr. Stedman to attack the Theatrical Syndicate. However, no unknown writer could have accomplished this magnificent Byronic broadside. If this is the work of either of these gentlemen, how can "Cynique" withdraw from the position he has taken?

BROADWAY.
(A. D. 2000.)

This is the famous way where trod the men
Who entertained the world so long ago;
Where foul Greed elbowed Art into the street,
And dragged it thro' the gutters to its grave;
Where lechery with greed went hand in hand,
And honor bid its face for very shame;
Where high endeavor vainly strove to live;
Where virtue sold itself for gold and place;
Where modest worth, with shy, averted eyes,
Passed noiselessly along, with only dreams
And treacherous hope for unsubstantial friends,
While brazen mediocrity and crime
Went up and down with Oriental airs,
And calculating eyes, and sneering lips,
Which curled in new-born scorn about their fangs,
As worth and honor, innocence and pride,
Before them moved, and hoped 'gainst hope to win.
In spite of scorn and fangs, a little space
Within the vast theatre of the world.

Come, let us sit beside that fountain there!
Beneath that blossoming hawthorn, and converse
About this old road and the death of art.

'Twas here it died, you say? But, then, methinks
That art, like nature, is a deathless thing.
And yet 'tis dead these five and eighty years?
How sad; how very sad! What killed it? Greed?
Shameless greed and lechery and crimes
Against the Church, the home, and God and man.
But the criminals in hades howl and bowl,
And will howl there until the last lone star
In yonder blue burns into viewless dust.
They had their day, and it was dark and long
For art and art's dear children. They did build
A house that fell upon them; forged a sword
Which had to their surprise a double edge.
And they were crushed and cut by their own work;
But they killed art before they slid to hell.

Oh, yes, the road's now beautiful, because—
Because sweet, royal nature makes it so,
And it is never touched by greedy crime.
Where we sit now a tavern one time stood;
Along this noiseless way the roar of trade
Went booming from one morning to the next,
And all the sides were thick with monstrous piles
Of brick and mortar, granite, wood, and steel.
Where now we see but groves and trees and flowers,
And hear the larks and nightingales send songs
From mellow throats far up to mellow skies.

Let's journey up the island: we may see
A man or woman ere we reach its end.

What is this battered, tattered, worn out thing—
This sexless ape that chuckles at itself,
When all the groans it ever caused are still?
Its gaping shoes show twisted, sockless feet;
Its hair sprouts thro' the roof of its old hat
Like grass in Autumn thro' a hill of dirt;
Its hands are knobby tragedies; its eyes
Glare from their sunken sockets like twin coals
Left 'mid the ashes of a miser's stove:
And as it shuffles by with mumbling words,
And yellow claws extended for our alms,
We think of what it was when it killed art,
And answered to the hall of: Greed! Greed! Greed!

No Books Like Current Ones.

To The New York Times Saturday Review:

All recent literature is not poor trash. There never was an age more prolific with the pen and more productive of pleasant and profitable reading than our own. The poets of the age are numerous, all passably good, and in not a few examples equal to any who have gone before, certainly superior to such men as White, Pollock, Cowper, Campbell, if not to authors of an earlier period, Johnson, Dryden, Pope, &c. The capacity for appreciation of poetry in adults is dulled by familiarity in early life with Byron, Moore, Goldsmith, Gray, Dryden, Pope, Tennyson, Whittier, Longfellow, Bryant, Halleck, and Poe, and by the effects of experience in trying to make a professional or mercantile success of one's self. If we should read our modern poets with the original freshness of the primitive mental stage of our existence, we should consider them remarkable products of genius.

As to writers of fiction—the modern ones are superior to those of the past, as any reperusal of the ancients will show. They do not soar to heaven nor delve into hell; they do not describe the tortures of the human mind and heart under adverse conditions, for that has already been done by prominent writers in the earlier years of the last century.

Literature of whatever kind is healthier in its character and tone than it ever has been. We live in an eminently sane period. Morbid conditions of life have been described ad nauseam. The demand is for works which show us healthy human beings living amid the natural elements which constitute life. We seek relaxation of nerve and get such in the perusal of the delightful literature of the day. The average products of the human mind to-day in the realm of light literature are equal, if not superior, to those of any prior period if we judge them with an unjaundiced condition of the brain. There are sensational stories that appeal to feverish souls, but they are not equal in number or quality to such "poor trash" as "Richard Carvel," "Janice Meredith," and "David Harum." If one seek salacious literature he can find it to satiety, but if he seek the pure and sweet he can find our public libraries well stocked.

Our successful and popular writers take their characters from the homely life of the common people. They deal not with prodigies of profligacy. There is no taste on the part of the reading public for works such as those of Victor Hugo, George Eliot, Thackeray, and Dickens. Science has cleared the brains of people and destroyed the taste for the gruesome. Satire is displeasing. The mind of the period is serious and earnest, and enjoys best stories which deal with life as it may be found in the dwellings of the respectable. How numerous are the books that deal with the early period of our American life, the Colonial, and how greedily they are read. But enough. What I have written is prompted by the billous remarks of one Cynique in THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW of Jan. 5.

Why Recent Books Are Read.

IDLER, Jersey City Heights, writes to THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW: "In THE SATURDAY REVIEW of Jan. 5, in an article headed 'All Recent Literature Poor,' Cynique writes: 'Learn to know the language moderately well, steal the ghost of an idea from some real author, long since dead, dilute it with resma of inky swash, a few lurid pictures, a weird crazy cover design—and the book will sell! * * * Of the alleged novelists now alive, there is not one deserving serious consideration, while their books are poor trash.' But even Cynique, who makes his statements in the most positive way, and whose assertions belong to the class called sweeping, may be mistaken. It is not the 'ghost of an idea diluted with inky awash and lurid pictures, bound in a weird, crazy cover,' but rather the indorsement of the literati, in many cases printed on the paper cover that attracts purchasers. Ask for 'Eben Holden,' then why not buy it, when it has been assigned a high place by Howells, Rossiter, Mary Wilkins, Secretary Long, Harriet P. Spofford, and Amelia E. Barr? 'Janice Meredith,' 'David Harum,' and all the others were indorsed by equally well-known literary authorities. Every one will concede that there is a great deal of trash on the counters in every bookstore. But the average reader does not buy books haphazard. He waits for the opinion of those qualified to judge, and when their adjectives are all in the superlative degree, concerning the new book, he invests his money, believing that he is getting a good article. Intelligent readers are not so easily caught by brilliant covers or oddities of printing as Cynique supposes. If the book sells, why not lay it to the door of the literary men and women who permitted their indorsement to go all over the country, rather than to the 'feverish demand of the people for something sensational, something odd,' &c. 'Let the mantle fall where it belongs.'"

Carlyle and His Cat.

In a hitherto unpublished letter of Mrs. Carlyle, written to her maid Jessie, which has just been printed in London, there is an amusing reference to Carlyle and his cat. Says Mrs. Carlyle:

"That cat! I wish she were dead! But I can't shorten her days, because, you see, my poor, dear, wee dog liked her. Well, there she is! And as long as she attends Mr. C. at his meals (she doesn't care a sheaf of tobacco for him at any other time,) so long will Mr. C. continue to give her bits of meat and driblets of milk, to the ruination of carpets and hearthrugs! I have over and over again pointed out to him the stains she had made, but he won't believe them her doings. And the dining-room carpet was so old and ugly that it wasn't worth rows with one's husband about. Now, however, that nice new cloth must be protected against the cat abuse. So what I wish is, that you would shut up the creature when Mr. C. has breakfast, dinner, or tea, and if he remarks on her absence, say it was my express desire. He has no idea what a selfish, immoral, improper beast she is, nor what mischief she does to the carpets."

AMERICAN BOOKS.

Why Booms in Particular Books are Possible—Women, Not Men, the Ones Who Read Them.

From The London Daily Telegraph.

"Three hundred thousand copies of Mr. Blank's new novel are now in circulation"—this is an announcement to which we are accustomed nowadays in regard to American books. How it must excite the envy of the English author, whose works have done very well if 20,000 copies are sold, and are remarkably successful if the demand reaches 50,000 copies! And yet these books of marvelous circulation in America, with few exceptions, fail to attract English readers to any notable extent. It is true that a highly popular English work does not necessarily achieve success across the Atlantic, and, further, that a book by a British writer which meets with little favor over here may in America be very well received. These are characteristics of the differences between the English and American book markets which awaken interest, and with a view to elucidating the problems a representative has made inquiries of gentlemen able to speak with authority on both sides of the question.

The first point was to discover why American books boom so enormously. This is answered by the immense population with which the American publisher has to deal. When a book "catches on"—not necessarily because it is of great merit—there is a market of book buyers incomparably vaster than the English author can appeal to. Are the Americans book readers? Decidedly the answer is, yes. Not the American man; he is too full of business to find time for books. But women, and especially girls, read with avidity. America is now in an enthusiastic state of culture. Her women and girls are studying eagerly, and have formed literary, debating, and self-improvement societies everywhere. The Chautauquan movement for girls' education—something on the lines of our home-reading leagues—has hundreds of thousands of enthusiastic young women in its ranks. A small town of 2,000 inhabitants will sometimes have four ladies' societies for reading and general culture. This is a point directly bearing on the booms which have recently been seen in connection with historical romances such as those of Mary Johnstone, the American Winston Churchill, Edward Caskoden, and others. For the young American girl reads these novels, not so much for their own merits, but in the belief that she is thereby adding to her stock of information. There are, of course, books which succeed for other reasons. The most notable recent triumph is "David Harum," which has in twenty months circulated over half a million copies. This is ascribed to the fact that the central figure, an embodiment of shrewdness, humor, and kindliness, is such as almost every American village and townlet produces, and people always love to read an idealized description of something or somebody they know. Like the perennial American play, "The Old Homestead," "David Harum" went home to the hearts of the people, and it is the exception proving the rule that the men do not read books, for the keenest business men could be seen on the cars devouring it in place of their usual light magazine fare.

But with the opportunities for booms, the cute American publisher naturally adopts somewhat different methods to our own. He does not depend on libraries to take a certain number of most of his books. He aims for the book-buyer. His volumes are produced with a smaller margin of profit, the cost of production is greater, and he looks to an occasional boom to compensate him for the deficiencies on the unsuccessful books. It follows, therefore, that publishing is much more speculative than in England, and small firms "go under" in far greater numbers than they do here. When a book "catches on" hopefully, the publisher "booms it for all it is worth." His newspaper advertisements, his posters, his catch-lines would be regarded by staid English houses as verging on the tricks of the mountebank; but they do their work. Books, too, are dealt in as an ordinary article of commerce. The "dry goods stores," such as Wanamaker's, take them in large quantities, and get, of course, great reductions. Then, again, when a book is booming, a jobber will secure a huge edition, and trust to his energy and advertising enterprise to dispose of it. The American publisher has also a device little used here. He sends copies broadcast to men of prominence in the public eye, and invites their comments. The celebrities are generally quite willing to comply, for they are not insensible to the personal advertisement attaching to notices in the newspapers and on boardings that "Mr. So-and-So says that Mr. Blank's new novel is the finest romance he has ever read." A novel, "Eben Holden," which has been selling recently "over there" at the rate of 17,000 copies a day, has a long list of laudations from notable persons to back it. There is something to be said, too, for the pioneer spirit of the American people. They like to "discover" authors, and that is why so many booms take place with the first books of young authors.

As to literary merit, the American novel, on the average, does not equal English fiction. The transatlantic novelist aims at freshness, brightness, originality of plot, and leaves style in the second place. Take half a dozen representative examples of English novels of this season, and you will find them well written but with hackneyed themes. It is an encouraging fact, however, for American literature that among the best-selling books, running into hundreds of thousands of copies, for a long time past have been those of James Lane Allen, one of whose chief merits is his admirable literary style.

But why do not successful American books succeed in England? The reply is that they deal for the great part with matters that are unfamiliar and uninteresting to English readers. The local color does not attract us. The same characteristics answer the question why English books do not command favor in America, although the cases are not exactly parallel. For the American understands English life better than the Englishman knows American life. But just as the English novel reader does not care, for instance, for romance of early days in Virginia, the scene of much fiction of deep interest to the American, so the latter is but feebly attracted toward tales of the seventeenth or eighteenth century in England. In like manner a story located in India or the colonies appeals to us, but what do these countries mean to an American? He has not the living interest which, in one way or another, is sure to touch each of the English readers of the book.

It is a noteworthy fact that America is now chiefly dependent for her literary wares on native authors. Mr. James McArthur, formerly editor of The American Bookman, assured our representative that he had taken the pains to keep a record of the best selling books according to the information supplied to his journal. Whereas a few years ago English authors monopolized the list, now American writers have taken their place. This is, to a great extent the result of the Copyright act.

There is a considerable demand, nevertheless, for good editions of our classic authors. Tennyson, Ruskin, Meredith, the Brownings, George Eliot, and others whose names will readily occur are very popular. It is said, by the way, that there was a large sale for the poems of Owen Meredith, (Lord Lytton,) owing to a confusion between his name and that of the novelist, George Meredith. A considerable quantity of our expensive art books are bought by transatlantic purchasers. America does not produce them to any great extent, for the best artists and the best art works are over here or in Europe. It must be said, also, that it is doubtful whether the wealthy Americans who purchase these volumes buy them for love of art or to study them. It is more probable that they acquire them to place in their drawing rooms, a fashion which has died out to a great extent in England.

The question was recently raised in a publishing journal whether the Americans did not excel us in the manner of producing books. Our representative met with a fairly general consensus of opinion that they did. "There is more originality and thought in their format," said a well-known English publisher, backing up his assertion by producing half a dozen American books at random from his shelves. "They spend more time and money on a book than we do. They will give $20 for a cover design, and another $20 to the man who produces the brasses (stamps) to impress it. If we give a sovereign for the design and another for the brasses, we think we are doing the thing stylishly." It is, of course, true that some English firms pay close attention to the format of their books; but the average cover is meaningless or vapidly sensational. The American book cover conveys an impression of thought, and probably is in itself an admirable advertisement of the contents of the book. On the other hand, it may be observed that an English publisher recently stated that he had produced a book which he would match against anything of its kind in America, and he had only sold four copies of the edition!

Profits, as we have said, are smaller in America than here. Paper, ink, printers' wages, binding, every item is more expensive. And the books are actually sold a little cheaper. For the equivalent of our 6s. novel is the one-dollar-and-fifty-cent novel, which is apparently the same thing. But, as a matter of fact, the American book buyer only pays 3s. 10d. where the English gives 4s. 6d. In spite of this, the American publisher appears to supply, on the average, a better-produced book. Evidently an occasional boom is necessary to explain how he makes it profitable.

"It is not always an easy task to weave historical facts into a successful and entertaining novel, but Knox Magee, in his recent work, 'WITH RING OF SHIELD,' has succeeded admirably, for he holds his readers from the first chapter to the last. He has written a most satisfactory and absorbing story; full of action, it teems with stirring episodes. Written somewhat in the vein of Charles Major's delightful novel, 'When Knighthood Was in Flower,' the style and incidents are decidedly more vigorous and the characters are all distinct, strong and individual."—*The N. Walter Scott When Six Years Old.

From "Letters and Memoirs of Her Own Life," by Mrs. Alison Rutherford or Cockburne.

I last night [Nov. 15, 1777,] sup'd in Mr. Walter Scot's. He has the most extraordinary genius of a boy I ever saw. He was reading a poem to his mother when I went in. I made him read on. It was the description of a shipwreck. His passion rose with the storm. He lifted his eyes and hands. "There's the mast gone," says he; "crash it goes, they will all perish." After his agitation he turns to me. "That is too melancholy," says he. "I had better read you something more amusing." I preferred a little chat, and asked his opinion of Milton and other books he was reading, which he gave me. Wonderful indeed one of his observations was how strange it was that Adam, just new come into the world, should know everything! "That must be the poet's fancy," said he, but when he was told he was created perfect by God Himself, he instantly yielded. When he was taken to bed last night he told his aunt he liked that lady. "What lady?" says she. "Why, Mrs. Cockburne, for I think she's a virtuoso like myself." "Dear Walter," says aunt, "what is a virtuoso?" "Don't ye know? Why, it is one who wishes and will know everything." Now, Sir, you will think this a very silly story. Pray, what age do you suppose this boy to be. Name it now, before I tell you. Why, twelve or fourteen?—no such thing. He is not quite six years old. He has a lame leg, for which he was a year in Bath, and has acquired the perfect English accent which he has not lost since he came, and he reads like a Garrick.

The January number of The American Illustrated Methodist Magazine opens with an article about the training of naval apprentices at the Newport, R. I., station. The writer is Dr. Cassard, Chaplain in the United States Navy. Another article deals with a name which has been brought recently before the educated world by the revolution of the centuries. The writer of the "Seasons" finds appreciation in "James Thomson's Bicentenary." Pictures are presented of the Manse at Ednam, near Kelso, where he was born, of Jedburgh Abbey, where he attended school, and of other places associated with his memory. The same number also contains an illustrated article, giving the story of how "Home, Sweet Home," was written.

BISHOP POTTER NOT A CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR.

Says He Has Another Mission in Life to Perform.

Thinks the Chief of Police Should Be a Military Man—Beer as a Coffee House Beverage.

Bishop Potter called at the Fifth Avenue Hotel last evening to see a friend. While standing at the clerk's desk he was asked about the movement started to nominate him for Mayor of New York on the anti-Tammany ticket. Bishop Potter smiled. He said:

"I am a clergyman. I have another mission to perform in life."

"Thomas C. Platt has stated this afternoon that you might be ineligible?" was suggested.

"I don't know that I would be ineligible. I appreciate the compliment which some persons have paid me by suggesting my name for the nomination for Mayor. I do not consider myself a candidate for the nomination."

Bishop Potter was then asked to give his views as to the best method of obtaining an honest and effective police force in the city. He said:

"I think the Chief of Police of this city should be like the Chief of Police of London. I think we lack the military idea in our police system. For instance, I think the late Major Gen. John G. Park would have been the type of a man to head the police force of this city. The Chief of Police should be a man of intelligence, a gentleman in every sense of the word, and one in sympathy with all grades of society instead of with the merely vicious."

"Would you advise that a military man be placed at the head of the Police Department?" was asked.

"There are hundreds of retired officers with just as much strength and stability of character as you and I or who would make splendid heads of the Police Departments of large cities. The Government is paying these men pensions now, and in some cities these men are drawing large salaries as city officials. The office of the Chief of Police ought to be one of distinction, and one of social dignity. He is a commander of 7,000 able-bodied men. The office ought to be ineligible to men of low type. The City of Philadelphia once borrowed a United States Army officer of the Engineering Department to run the city's water works. He ran it so wisely and economically that he was not popular with the politicians. I do not know whether it would be wise for the City of New York to apply to the United States Government for the loan of an army officer to run the Police Department, but I think that touch is lacking in our present system.

"There are a number of retired army officers now living who would make ideal Police Commissioners or Chiefs of Police. The officers under the command of this General ought to be men of education and military training, and not mere politicians with influence with the district leaders. When we have such a Chief of Police, with power to regulate the department upon military lines, then we will have a force of which we might well be proud."

"Would Lewis Nixon, the head of the Tammany Committee of Fifteen now investigating vice in the city, be a suitable man for Police Commissioner?" was asked.

"I have no suggestion to make as to that, Mr. Nixon, I understand, is a man of ability and high intelligence. Until we put in the office of the Chief of Police a man of education, a man of honor, and one in sympathy with persons other than the ward politicians, we need not look for much improvement in the Police Department."

The plan of the Committee of Fifteen to help private capitalists and philanthropists establish coffee houses as substitutes for the thousands of saloons and dance halls was spoken of. Bishop Potter said:

"It would not be within the province of the city to run a lot of coffee houses in place of saloons or to establish social clubs in place of dance halls. These things can be done by private capital, and should be done. The profit might be smaller than in some other forms of enterprise, but the good which would accrue to the city would be very great. The City of New York could not, however, do anything to approach the idea of paternalism. Neither the city nor the State should directly undertake these things, but they should encourage them by proper legislation."

The conversation then drifted to the question of the army canteen. Bishop Potter said:

"Many United States Senators are in favor of retaining the army canteen, where soldiers could get in the posts something to drink without going outside to the first saloon they meet, which, in most instances, is a bawdy house. These Senators felt that no amount of legislation could keep a man from drinking when he had made up his mind to take a drink.

"It would be a matter to be determined alone by experience whether it would be best to permit a limited amount of mildly alcoholic beverages to be served in the coffee houses, somewhat after the plan of the Gothenburg system in Sweden. If it worked well to let the coffee houses dispense light beer, then that feature should be retained. There is a vast field of work in this direction for the practical reformers, and they must not lose sight of the fact that substitutions for existing institutions must be sound business enterprises, otherwise they will not be permanent."

TROLLEY DEAL IN CONNECTICUT.

New Haven Road Purchases the Webster and Worcester System.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 12.—The New Haven Road has just purchased through the People's Tramway Company of Danielson, Conn., the Webster and Worcester Street Railway Company.

The purchase gives to the People's Tramway Company control of the trolley lines from Danielson, Conn., to Worcester, a distance of forty miles. The company recently acquired the Putnam and Thompson Street Railway Company, and later took over the Webster and Dudley system, the latest purchase of the Webster and Worcester completing the circuit. The New Haven Road will extend the People's Tramway line in time to Norwich, thus connecting with the steam road along the Thames to New London, and forming a continuous line from Norwich to Boston, a distance of 120 miles.

The People's Tramway system will run express trains, freight, mail, baggage, and passenger coaches over the newly acquired line. The express trains will make stops only at Putnam and Webster in the through run from Danielson to Worcester, and will run at an average speed of thirty-five miles an hour. A smoker will be added to the through trains. The price paid for the new roads is comparatively small. The Tramway stock is $400,000, Webster and Dudley $50,000, and Worcester $150,000, making with the bonded debt an outlay of $1,000,000. The road when completed will cater to fully 120,000 people.

Railroad and trolley men see in the move taken by the People's Tramway Company as set in the programme of the Consolidated Road to occupy the trolley field ahead of the electric road companies. By taking over the new lines the New Haven Road stops competition at Worcester and controls all of the trolley business of Eastern Connecticut. The line will be used as a feeder to the steam roads at Worcester and Norwich.

J. OGDEN ARMOUR MAY RETIRE.

He Aspires, It Is Said, to Enter the Field of Finance.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—It is current report that all of the Armour interests will be formed into a corporation and that J. Ogden Armour will retire from the management of the vast investments.

It is said that the young man believes that the property has reached a development where it will run of its own force under the direction of the men whom the elder Armour trained in his service, and who have had the practical management ever since his illness. J. O. Armour is a man of cultivated tastes and of a literary disposition. He is the only member of the family who has taken any interest in social affairs, and his wife is regarded as one of the society leaders of the city.

The elder Armour's dislike of society had much to do with the reserve of the entire family, and it is said that in the future Mr. and Mrs. J. Ogden Armour will relax somewhat the seclusion that has characterized them and become greater factors in the social world.

The aspiration of J. Ogden Armour is in the field of finance, and he is said to have unusual ability in that direction. With his wealth, it is thought, he will be able to make for himself a place among the great financiers of the country, with greater leisure for the enjoyment of life.

MISS CONDIT SMITH'S STORY.

Women in Peking Legation Promised to Kill Themselves as Soon as First Boxer Scaled the Wall.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Miss Mary Condit Smith, a heroine of the siege of Peking, who is to be married on Feb. 12 to Lieut. Richard Hooker of the Marine Corps, has sold the diary she kept during the Peking siege to a firm of New York publishers for $10,000. It will be published in book form. In telling of her experiences in Peking, Miss Smith says:

"We grew to be horribly expert in pistol practice. Every woman in the legation was provided with a pistol, and the vital spots where a well-directed bullet would kill instantaneously were pointed out to her.

"Every day the women practiced target shooting for hours with revolvers, and also practiced with blank cartridges against their own persons. Every woman had promised to place the muzzle of her revolver in her mouth and blow the top of her head off at the sight of the first Boxer who should scale the wall of the legation compound. Should the women become panic stricken, every man was pledged to shoot the women until not one was left alive.

"For days and nights together not a soul in the legation dared to sleep, but stood ready at any moment to use the pistols in his hands, which, tired as they were, never once relaxed their hold upon the weapons of death.

"On one never-to-be forgotten occasion we were actually lined up, with the men in a solid line in front of us ready to shoot us, for it was momentarily expected that the Boxers would gain possession. Night after night since then have I lain awake going all over it again, or sunk into sleep only to be tortured with dreams as harrowing as the actual experiences.

"But even at such times there was left in us an appreciation of certain comicalities over which we actually laughed. I remember on one of the occasions how Mrs. Conger made us laugh by saying that she actually, all through the siege, was more afraid of her husband than of any Boxer who ever was born, for Mr. Conger was in such an overwrought condition she was mortally afraid he might shoot her dead on some false alarm.

"One of the worst things was to witness the suffering and starvation of the poor children huddled in the legation. The positive heroism of some of those children in trying to distract the attention of the starving ones from their pitable condition and give them heart to live through the awful experiences is beyond anything that ever was written.

"I remember on one occasion one of the officers came to us holding out his sword reeking with Boxer blood, and told me to use it for my own destruction upon the instant of hearing the signal which was then momentarily expected.

"Once the Empress sent to the legationers a number of horses for them to use as a means of escape. The horses were loaded with sacks of food. Half of the food was found to be poisoned."

MAY TRAP BOER INVADERS.

Indications that British at Their Rear Are Forcing Them Southward—Long British Casualty Lists.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—A whole month has elapsed since the Boers crossed the Orange River, and still Great Britain knows next to nothing of their numbers, whereabouts, or doings, and still less of the objects of the inroad. The only thing known with tolerable certainty is that they are progressing southward, over some sparsely inhabited tracts, where they escape observation. Other large bodies are traversing the very heart of the colony.

The only logical explanation seems to be the largely accepted idea that the invasion forms part of a great, organized scheme of that Napoleon of the war, Gen. De Wet, to strike terror into the British colony, which, unquestionably, is nearly denuded of troops, and that he will trust to the chapter of accidents to achieve such success as will enable the Boers to almost dictate the terms of peace.

The halting policy of the invaders, however, seems to threaten to defeat their aims, and has enabled the hastily enrolled levies of volunteers to occupy vital strategic points, while there are some signs that the gathering of troops in the rear of the burghers is beginning to press them southward into the arms of the British moving from the seaboard. This may be more effective than attempting to drive the Boers back across the Orange River, where they might be enabled to rejoin De Wet.

Disquieting hints are arriving of the alarming rapidity with which the British Army is wasting away. The long lists of dead, wounded, and diseased bear out these stories, while there are abundant signs that the trooos at the front are becoming stale and discontented.

GOOD WORK OF CANADIANS.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—A dispatch from Pretoria, dated Jan. 11, and describing the fight of Jan. 9 near Commando Nek, dwells upon the excellent work of Howard's Scouts, a new corps composed of Canadians who remained in South Africa and re-enlisted.

These scouts chased the retreating Boers a distance of five miles, harassing their rear and taking some prisoners. One of Delarey's horses, with wallets containing the Commandant's papers strapped to its back, and 500 cattle were also captured.

Krueger Restored to Health.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 12.—Drs. Vinkhuyzen and Coert say Mr. Krüger is completely restored to health. Divine service to-morrow will, however, be held at his hotel, as he does not wish to go out in the cold weather.

SENATOR PLATT SAYS COLER IS A FRAUD

The Controller Would Not Be Acceptable for Mayor, He Declares.

POLICE BILLS WILL BE PASSED

No Amendment to Give Mayor the Power of Removal Will Be Accepted—New York's New Members of Congress.

Senator Thomas C. Platt came to New York from Washington yesterday. He talked of many things, and took occasion to again announce that Controller Coler would not be acceptable to the Republican organization as the anti-Tammany candidate for Mayor next Fall. To a reporter who called on Senator Platt yesterday, Controller Coler was denounced in the following language:

"Mr. Coler is a big political fraud. Perhaps I should say a little political fraud."

Senator Platt praised Gov. Odell and said that all talk of Republican Senators and Assemblymen opposing the economical plans of Gov. Odell were false. He said the police bills were going through without amendment; that the City of New York was likely to get two of the three additional members of Congress allotted to New York State under the Burleigh law and that $62,000,000 would not be spent on the canals until the matter had first been submitted to a vote of the people at the polls.

Senator Platt talked of other things, and he also talked to many politicians during the afternoon. Among his callers were Chairman Higgins of the Senate Finance Committee.

When seen by a TIMES reporter, Senator Platt said: "All the reports about Assemblymen and Senators preparing to fight the economical measures proposed by Gov. Odell in his message are untrue. The Republican members of the Legislature, I think, without exception, will vote for the bills prepared to comply with the recommendations of Gov. Odell. It is ridiculous to talk of opposition to these measures. Gov. Odell's recommendations have been favorably received by all Republicans who have the interests of the party at heart. There is little chance of opposition to any of the proposed bills for retrenchment in the expenses of the State Government."

When asked about the bill under which it was proposed to spend $62,000,000 on State canals, Senator Platt said:

"The expenditure of that money will not be authorized by the present Legislature. I think the matter will be submitted to the people, and they will have to vote on the question as to whether any such expenditures should be made."

The question of the increase in the number of members of Congress in New York State under the Burleigh law was then broached. Senator Platt said:

"The Burleigh law gives the State of New York three more Congressmen. Of course, it is for the Legislature to decide, but I think the City of New York will get two of the three Congressmen under the new apportionment."

"Are your views as to Controller Coler as a Mayoralty candidate changed?" was asked.

"No, they have not. Controller Coler would not be acceptable to the rank and file of the Republican Party. He voted for and supported William J. Bryan in the last election, and no man who supported Bryan is eligible."

"Have you noticed that David B. Hill was named as the Democratic candidate for President in 1904, in an interview given by Controller Coler in Washington?"

"Yes, Sir, and Mr. Hill should be more careful in the selection of his mouthpiece."

"Would Bishop Potter be an acceptable candidate for Mayor on the anti-Tammany ticket?" was asked.

Senator Platt looked at the questioner with a surprised kind of look. Then he said in a questioning tone:

"Is he eligible for the nomination?"

This was all Senator Platt would say about that matter.

"What about police legislation?"

"The bills which have been offered in the Legislature will pass."

"Will there be any amendments making the Police Commissioner removable under charges or giving the sole power of removal to the Mayor, as proposed?"

"No. The bills will be passed without amendments of any kind. They have been carefully drawn. There will be no amendment giving the Mayor the sole power of removal."

When asked if he thought a man like Ansley Wilcox would make a good Police Commissioner under the new bill, Senator Platt shrugged his shoulders. Frank Platt, who was standing by, said:

"The Lord knows how long a time he would last."

Senator Platt shrugged his shoulders and nodded at his son's statement.

During the day Senator Platt received many political callers.

PRESIDENT McKINLEY BETTER.

Was Able to Walk About His Room Several Times Yesterday.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The President passed a good night, and is now making rapid progress toward recovery.

He sat up for a short time last evening, and to-day he not only sat up a longer time than since he was taken ill, but walked about the room several times.

If nothing unfavorable occurs, he probably will be able to attend to matters of pressing business early in the coming week.

The invitations to the diplomatic dinner for next Wednesday evening have been recalled, Dr. Rixey having decided that the risk of the President taking a fresh cold would be too great. It is the present intention that all of the functions which were to have been given this week and next will be given later on during the season.

Postmaster General Smith Ill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Postmaster General Smith is confined to his home with neuralgia and an ulcerated tooth. He returned from Philadelphia Thursday night, and his physician pronounced his ailment the result of a bad cold.

Apparently Dead, Revived by Salt.

Special to The New York Times.

HAMILTON, Ohio, Jan. 12.—Marcus Sauer, aged sixty-two, who to all appearance was quite dead, was brought back to life to-day by an application of the "elixir of life," common salt, as discovered by Profs. Loeb and Slugle of the University of Chicago. The patient had long been a sufferer from dropsy. When Dr. W. C. Kamler was called he found all the symptoms immediately following death, including perfectly cold extremities, absence of respiration, heart action, and pulse. The members of the family were present when the doctor arrived and believed their father dead.

Chicago Baby Saved by Salt.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—By injections of a solution of common table salt and water, Dr. A. C. Cotton of the College of Physicians and Surgeons saved the life of the infant daughter of Policeman Michael Sullivan. The child was afflicted with a disease of the stomach, and had been given up by several physicians who treated her. Dr. Cotton recommended the salt cure. A pint of the solution was injected into the infant's stomach. Another injection was made in the neighborhood of the heart. The condition of the baby rapidly improved, and she is now recovering.

NEW STEAMSHIP PROJECT.

Large Cotton Factors to Establish Lines from Southern Ports—May Enter Coasting Trade.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 12.—George H. McFadden & Brother of this city, the largest cotton factors in the United States, launched a new steamship project to-day. A corporation has been chartered in Trenton, N. J., with a capital of $1,000,000, and with the privilege of increasing it to a much larger amount, with the object, as stated in the charter, of building steamships and conducting a general traffic business. George H. McFadden stated to-day that the new company purposes to establish freight steamship lines from Gulf and Southern ports direct to foreign ports, so as to minimize the expense of transportation of cotton and to expedite such shipments.

George H. McFadden & Brother have agencies in all of the cotton centres of the South, and handle more than $10,000,000 of this product annually. Through the operation of their own ships they claim they will largely increase their business, as well as their profits. The incorporators of the new company are the following, who are connected with the firm: Eugene F. Caldwell, W. P. Jenks, Eugene F. Caldwell, Jr., Charles F. Schenk, and George K. Apple, all of Philadelphia.

In shipping circles here it is said that the company, to be operated under the title of the Ocean Steamship Company, is formed for the purpose of getting in on the ground floor in the event that the Frye-Payne Ship Subsidy bill is passed by Congress.

In the event of the Subsidy bill failing to become a law, the company may enter into the coastwise trade, and the first line to be taken under consideration is one between Philadelphia and New Orleans and Galveston. With this line, it is said, much business now going elsewhere is to be deflected to Philadelphia. In the latter enterprise several commercial organizations have promised support.

TWIN BRIDES GET MIXED.

Sisters Changed Places for Fun at Double Wedding—Now Neither Knows to Whom She Was Married.

Special to The New York Times.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Jan. 12.—Which sister did Henry Wilkinson of Alton, Ill., marry? That is the question puzzling not only him but another bridegroom and the guests assembled at the wedding.

The brides were twin sisters, Florence and Rose Eska. They were very pretty girls, and when Wilkinson, who was the first to appear on the scene, made their acquaintance, both fell in love with him. He was blissfully unconscious of this at the time, but wooed and won Rose. Florence was chagrined, but accepted the attention of another suitor and arrangements were made for a double weddings.

The brides were attired exactly alike in white, and their own parents could not tell them apart. As they stepped in front of the minister, a guest jokingly remarked, "Be careful girls, you do not change places." In a spirit of fun the two exchanged. After the ceremony Florence exclaimed she had wedded Wilkinson, as Rose did not change back. Rose declared the change was only momentary and that she stepped back before the ceremony.

The guests were divided on the question, and the minister said in the confusion he had not noticed. The result is two husbands do not know which their wives are. They cannot legally be married over for fear of committing bigamy, nor can a separation be obtained, as neither young woman knows to which man she was married.

MR. ROOT WELL GUARDED.

Elaborate System at War Department to Prevent Chance Callers from Gaining Admittance.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Department officials are watching with considerable interest the progress of a new experiment in the office of Secretary Root. The latter has been busy for some time trying to discover a way of preventing the consumption of his time by calls from people outside the War Department, Congressmen included. His new experiment is an attempt at a solution of this problem.

An hour before the time for closing the War Department all doors leading to the Secretary's office are shut and locked. This does not mean that the office is closed; on the contrary, work is going on as busily as ever. Inside the main room of the office are three or four sturdy colored watchmen, who remain behind the locked doors to let out people who were in before the place was closed up, and to see that nobody slips in. People come and try the doors, and go away disappointed. All through the rest of the big department there is every sign of life; doors are swinging open, and clerks are constantly passing in and out, typewriters are clicking, and messengers are bustling about. Only the doors leading to Mr. Root's sanctum are locked and guarded, and there a stranger will see no sign of life.

So strictly is this carried out that even the door leading from Chief Clerk Schofield's room is locked, although this door does not open on the hall, and no ordinary man would think of gaining entrance through it. But it was concluded that some one very intent on seeing the Secretary might get into Mr. Schofield's room on some pretext, and then, watching his chance, steal through the door into the main room. Even then the stranger would have to pass over the dead bodies of the three lusty colored men before he could penetrate to the next room, which contains Private Secretary W. S. Coursey and Confidential Clerk F. C. Squires. He would then have to overcome Coursey and Squires before he could get into Mr. Root's robm. It was decided, however, to take no chances, and Mr. Schofield was locked out.

But it was necessary to devise a way by which Mr. Schofield could get in to see his chief. It would also be a disagreeable predicament if one of the colored messengers, passing out on an errand, should be unable to get in on his return. There were also others in the department who must find a way to get in and see the Secretary. They could not do it by trying the door or knocking, because the garrison was instructed to pay no attention to such primitive methods of getting in.

This problem was grappled with and a solution found. A secret code was invented, comprehensive and accurate. When Mr. Schofield or any of the other persons in the secret wants to get in, he delivers a peculiar series of knocks on the door, built, it is believed, on the lines of the Morse system. This cipher knock means, "I want to get in." It is instantly recognized by the garrison, and one of them advances to the door. He does not open it, however. It occurred to the deviser of the system that some lurking Congressman or visiting New Yorker or other non-departmental person might, by dint of hanging around the door and listening for some time, acquire the secret of the code and, after committing it to memory, deliver an imitation which would deceive the very elect.

The sentinel, therefore, advances to the door and delivers a peculiar knock, which means, "Advance, friend, with the countersign." He listens, and if the person outside is really one of the initiated, and not one of the general public, he "comes back" with the next number on the code, which is the countersign. This satisfies the sentinel, and the door is unlocked and instantly closed again behind the new arrival.

The new system works to the Secretary's satisfaction. The other Cabinet officers are aware of it, but none of them have yet recognized its advantages to the extent of imitating it. Among the clerks in the other departments it is customary to "guy" those in the War Department since the new system came into vogue. Those in the Secretary's office are known as the "Masons," and are frequently greeted with cries of "Thirty-third degree" and "Admit the brother."

MISS FRENCH GIVES A BRIDESMAIDS' DINNER

Brilliant Party at Newport the Eve of Her Wedding.

PARTIAL LIST OF THE GIFTS

Gown to be Worn by the Bride—Arrival of the Guests from New York.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Jan. 12.—This evening Miss French gave a brilliant dinner at Harbourview, the home of her mother, to her maid of honor and the four bridesmaids.

The large dinner table was set in the dining hall, which is completed in all details for the wedding breakfast and reception on Monday afternoon, except for the flowers, which the decorators will place there on Monday. The decorations already arranged and the electric light effects imparted additional brilliancy to the scene this evening.

Before the dinner the guests, who included members of the bride's and groom's families, were shown some of the wedding presents, while an orchestra stationed near the dining hall doors played several selections, continuing their music throughout the dinner.

The table decorations came from New York during the afternoon and were arranged shortly before the guests were seated. These consisted of pink orchids, American Beauty roses, lilies of the valley, and maiden hair fern. The decorations of the table were made more beautiful by the use of the gold service.

Those who sat down were Miss Elsie French, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, the maid of honor; the Misses Pauline French, Elsa Bronson, Isabel Stillman, and Edith Gray, the four bridesmaids; Reginald Vanderbilt, the best man; Robert L. Gerry, Potter Palmer, Jr., Frederic M. Davies, William Fitz Hugh Whitehouse, Jr., Ira Preston, Ernest Iselin, Bayard Cutting, Jr., and Williams P. Burden, the ushers; Mrs. F. O. French, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Gen. and Mrs. Herbert F. Eaton, Mr. and Mrs. Amos Tuck French, the Rev. G. B. Morgan of New Haven, and the Rev. Charles F. Beattie, rector of St. John's Church of this city.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt was not present at the dinner, but spent the evening quietly at the Breakers with some of her relatives.

At the dinner each of the bridesmaids and the maid of honor were presented by the bride with a white leather card case with the initials of the recipient in raised gold letters.

The selections rendered by the orchestra were:

March, "Strike Up the Band".....Ward
Selection, "Foxy Quiller".....De Koven
Waltz, "Bridal Soug".....Reed
Intermezzo, "Naila".....Tobani
(a) "Just Because She Made Those Goo-Goo Eyes".....Chattanay
(b) "Ma Ralabow Coon".....Sloans
Overture, "Zampa".....Herold
Gavotte, "Little Beauty".....Bendix
Waltz, "Monte Cristo".....Kotlar
Selection, "Casino Girl".....Englander
Morceau, "Hearts and Flowers".....Tobani
Excurpto, "Whirl-i-Gig".....Stromberg
Finale, "Monks of Malsbar".....Englander

A little dancing was enjoyed after dinner in the drawing room and by midnight the event was at an end and the guests en route to their apartments.

ARRIVAL OF GUESTS.

The guests began to arrive early in the day, a large number coming on the boat from Wickford, which connected with the New York train which reached the city at 4 o'clock, and a still larger number by the same way, reaching here at 7 o'clock. On both occasions Mr. Vanderbilt was at the boat with his brake and four high steppers, and, after personally greeting his many friends, conveyed his particular acquaintances, including the ushers, to his mother's residence, the Breakers. The greater number of the guests, however, repaired to the larger boarding houses thrown open especially for the occasion.

The scene at the boat landing was very animated, and such as is often seen here at the height of the season, many stylish traps and handsome horses, with liveried coachmen and grooms, waiting in the cold for the coming of the guests.

Among the later arrivals were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Col. G. R. Fearing, who is the guest of Daniel B. Fearing; Mrs. Elliot F. Shepard, Mrs. Frederic Bronson, Miss Elsa Bronson, James A. Burden, Jr., the Rev. and Mrs. George Grenville Merrill, Mrs. Julien T. Davies, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. H. McK. Twombly, Miss Twombly, Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr.

Earlier in the day had arrived Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. Porter, Thomas F. Cushing, Stuyvesant Le Roy, William Fitz Hugh Whitehouse, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Amos Tuck French, Miss Pauline French, Master Frank French, Mr. and Mrs. Stevens, the Rev. and Mrs. G. B. Morgan, Miss Morris, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Livermore, Miss Brooks, Miss Iselin, Miss Haven, James Stillman, Percy A. Rockefeller, Mrs. John Clinton Gray, Miss Edith Gray, Mrs. C. C. Pomeroy, Miss Pomeroy, Reginald Brooks, H. Bowles, C. Wells, Jr., Ernest Iselin, W. B. Cutting, Jr., T. Maghee, W. Woodward, Douglas Cochrane, D. Heare, W. D. Kountze, Bradish Johnson, T. F. Stackpole, F. Kernochan, O. M. Bishop, Frederic M. Davies, R. L. Cottenet, W. Storrs Wells, and James De Wolf Cutting.

Dr. and Mrs. William Seward Webb will arrive by special train on Sunday, as will Mr. and Mrs. William M. Kingsland.

PRESENTS ARE EXHIBITED.

This morning a large covered van drove up in front of the Aguidneck National Bank to fetch the wedding presents. Capt. Garnett, with two patrolmen and two detectives from New York, stood on guard while the gifts were taken in large cedar chests from the vault to the van which, under this escort, conveyed the presents to Harborview.

The gifts were arranged in the cedar chests at the vault by Miss French, assisted by Mr. Vanderbilt, Frederic M. Davies, and Amos Tuck French. Mr. Vanderbilt drove the party from Harbourview to the bank in one of his traps.

Among the many gifts received by the bride may be mentioned the following:

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt—Diadem and necklace of brilliant stones of various kinds.
Reginald and Gladys Vanderbilt—Small silver dressing case ornaments, table knives, forks, and spoons.
W. K. Vanderbilt, Sr.—Collarette of diamonds.
Frederic K. Vanderbilt—George III. silver coffee and tea set.
Mrs. Edgar Shepherd—Set of silver platters.
Gen. and Mrs. H. F. Eaton—Diamond and turquoia necklace.
Mrs. Elliott F. Shepard—Set of silver entrée dishes.
Lord Cheylesmore—Emerald and diamond brooch.
Frederic M. Davies—Large jewel case.
Miss Anne Leary—Jewceled clock.
Mr. and Mrs. H. Webster Stevens—Silver coffee set.
Mrs. Frye, (aunt of the bride)—Tete-a-tete entrée dishes.
Miss O'Neil, (fiancée of Mr. Davies)—Set of silver dressing case mirrors.
Miss Willoughby—Silver tray.
Commodore and Mrs. Elbridge T. Gerry—Set of silver gilt fruit dishes.
Robert L. Gerry—Silver dessert service.
Miss Stillman—Spray of pear-shaped diamonds.
Mrs. B. B. French—Emerald and diamond scarfpin.
M. and Mme. Christian Bors of Paris—Set of Norwegian enameled spoons.
Mme. Le Roy of Paris—Vase and card case.
Mrs. F. O. French—George III. centrepiece of silver.
Mr. and Mrs. Amos Tuck French—Set of silver fruit dishes.
Mr. and Mrs. Edward Tuck—Rope of rubies and pearls.

Among the many other gifts was a handsome, large, and old silver tray sent from London without the sender's name.

Mr. Vanderbilt gives to his best man and ushers stick pins of diamonds and pearls.

THE BRIDAL GOWN.

Miss French's wedding gown will be remarkable for its magnificence and simplicity.

The entire costume is of rich ivory white satin. The skirt, with the train three yards long, is a model of graceful and symmetrical lines. Its effect is to make the bride appear much taller than she really is.

The entire front of the gown, from the neck to the feet, is a piece of round point lace, a gift from the bride's uncle, Edward Tuck, in Paris.

The corsage is made extremely high and with a very tall collar of lace, has long close fitting sleeves of satin, finished with deep cuffs of the same lace.

The bottom of the skirt will be trimmed with tulle and sprays of orange blossoms.

The veil is of Brussels point, the same which was worn by the bride's sister, Mrs. Eaton, at her wedding in England some eight years ago. It will cover the gown entirely and will fall almost to the end of the train. It will not cover the face, but will be fastened on the hair and held back with several sprays of orange blossoms.

The bride's only ornament will be a crescent of diamonds and pearls. She will carry a white ivory-covered Prayer Book.

The traveling gown will be of gray chevlot, trimmed with chinchilla fur and silver embroidery on both the skirt and coat. The blouse is of gray panne velvet, which is also trimmed with silver and embroidered. Her hat will be a very large toque of silver-gray miroir velvet. She will also carry a large muff and fur boa.

The gowns of the bridesmaids are, in color, make, and material, similar to that which the maid of honor will wear, excepting that there is more elaborate trimming of lace on the gowns and handsome standing collars of gold embroidery.

Their hats are of the picture plateau kind, and, like that of the maid of honor, each bridesmaid's hat will be of pearl-gray panne and mirior velvet, frilled elaborately, and with the crown enwreathed with rose foliage and the fronts ornamented with a large knot of gold gauze.

The upturned broad brim is covered with panne velvet, moseline de sole, and velled with jabots of rich point lace.

Each of the bridesmaids and the maid of honor will carry loosely over the arm a large bunch of American Beauty roses.

Mrs. French will wear a gown of violet velvet with black lace, embroidered in jet; also a capot of royal purple velvet trimmed with silver paillettes and duchesse lace.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt will wear a dress of mourning. She takes no part whatever in the reception.

Mrs. Eaton will wear a London creation of gray-blue panne velvet.

Mrs. Amos Tuck French will wear an effective gown of gray moiré combined with black lace.

Servants arrived early this morning to open Rosecliff, the Summer home of Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, who will occupy it until Tuesday, having Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., as her guests.

Commodore and Mrs. Gerry are indisposed at their New York home and will not be able to attend the wedding, but their children, Miss Gerry, Miss Mabel Gerry, Peter Goelet Gerry, and Robert L. Gerry, are already here.

Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt declined last night to be interviewed on the subject of his brother's wedding.

BIG OIL STRIKE IN TEXAS.

Well with Flow of 700 Barrels Hourly Driven Near Beaumont—Prices of Land in the Section Soar.

Special to The New York Times.

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 12.—There is wild excitement throughout Southeast Texas over the oil strike that has just been made three miles south of Beaumont.

The well is owned by C. W. Lucas, and he to-day succeeded in making a test of the flow, showing that the output for one hour was over 700 barrels. At this rate the well has a flow of over 18,000 barrels every twenty-four hours. It is said to be the greatest oil strike in the history of that industry. The oil shoots out of a six-inch pipe to a height of seventy-five feet.

The pressure is so great that gas cup can be placed on the well, and nearly 50,000 barrels of oil have flowed into the ravines near by. These ravines are being dammed as rapidly as possible, but many thousand barrels of oil have already gone to waste.

Prices of land in the vicinity of the well have gone soaring skyward. One tract of ten acres was to-day sold for $50,000. Fabulous offers are being made for leases of prospective oil lands of the section.

MANY MAINE SALOONS CLOSE.

Liquor Dealers Decide that It Is Useless to Fight the Crusaders.

Special to The New York Times.

BANGOR, Me., Jan. 12.—The war upon saloons, which has for some time waged fiercely in Western Maine, has lately reached the eastern section of the State, and now in all cities and towns except Bangor vigorous crusades are in progress.

At first the liquor dealers decided to fight the crusaders, but lately many of them have concluded that, business being dull, it would be better to quit the business altogether than to take chances of conviction and heavy fines. Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue McCausland of Bangor has already received from 120 of the 250 dealers in Eastern Maine the special United States tax certificates which they took out last year and which they now surrender. Nothing like this has ever been known before, and it gives the Prohibitionists renewed courage in their efforts to close the saloons.

Up to this time the wave has rolled by Bangor, the 200 and more bars here doing business as usual, with more latitude as to hours than is enjoyed by liquor dealers in most large cities.

Liquor in a Secret Room.

PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 12.—Deputy Sheriffs in enforcing the prohibitory orders of the Rev. Mr. Pearson, the Prohibition Sheriff, to-day seized about $800 worth of liquor at the Hotel Temple. The officers thoroughly searched the premises and were about to give up when one thought a side of the cellar wall looked rather suspicious, and began sounding. Finally he touched a spring, and a large door opened in the wall showing a room ten feet long and five feet wide, brilliantly lighted and stocked with various liquors. No arrests were made.

CHICAGO'S TOBOGGAN SLIDE.

Three Men, Weighing 800 Pounds, Try It, and Land in the Lake.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—A streak of black cleaving the frigid atmosphere, shouts of excitement and pleasure from three large men on a sled, then a crashing of ice, a splashing of water, yells of surprise and expletives of rage, describes the first trip of a toboggan upon the new slide at Lincoln Park.

The three men were Superintendent Redleske, Secretary of the Board Charles E. Erby, and Charles W. McCurren, the animal keeper. Redleske weighs over 300 pounds. Erby tips the beam at 260, and McCurren needs the balance at the 220 notch, making the combined weight nearly 800 pounds.

They determined this morning to try the new toboggan slide, which has just been finished. Seating themselves on the sled, they were pushed off, but at the bottom the ice cracked under their weight and all three went into the polar bath up to their necks.

JUDGMENT LIENS MAY NOT BE VALID

Legislation for the Block Index System May Be Defective.

Dwight H. Olmstead, Authority on Transfers, Says the Law Is Ineffective and Affects Thousands of Cases.

A serious question is facing the city officials and the lawyers of New York. A technical question has been brought up as to the validity of liens for all judgments filed in the office of the County Clerk under Chapter 538 of the laws of 1893. The question is, whether a judgment obtained since 1893 and regularly recorded in the office of the County Clerk of New York acts as a lien on the property involved.

If the thousands of judgments filed since 1893 do not act as a lien on the property, and there are city officials and eminent authorities on the subject who claim they do not, then a chaotic condition will arise, not only in the offices of the County Clerk and the Register of New York, but in the real estate and mercantile business field.

An act of the Legislature would be necessary to correct the apparent blunder of the Legislature of 1893 in passing a law prepared by an expert, but not until changes were made to suit the politicians. This political tinkering with a carefully drawn bill will probably result in a curious tangle.

If the present system of indexing in the County Clerk's office is ineffective to make a judgment a lien on property then it will take an act of the Legislature to correct this wrong.

The eminent authority on the question of land transfer reform, Dwight H. Olmstead, who served as one of the Commissioners of Land Transfer under appointment by Gov. Cleveland, has discovered the blunder of the Legislature in passing a defective law.

After working many years to win politicians, lawyers, and experts over to the "block system" idea, Mr. Olmstead now purposes closing his life's work in this line by straightening out the legal tangle which has arisen, and which will result in thousands of lawsuits, unless an act to correct the legislative blunder is passed.

If the contention raised by Dwight H. Olmstead is upheld by the courts, and Register Fromme thinks it will be, then the present system of indexing in the Register's and County Clerk's offices will be ineffective and the system will have to be changed or another act of the Legislature passed.

This matter was called to the attention of Controller Coler last week by this letter:

When I called at your office I expressed doubt as to any authority being given by Chapter 536 of the Laws of 1893 for the use of the block system, as the act neither contains any direction for such use nor does it declare its legal effect, without which block indexing would be futile for the purpose for which it is used. Section 9 of the act of 1893 reads as follows: "The said County Clerk is also hereby directed to cause to be prepared under his direction, suitable index books for the future indexing therein upon said block plan of indexing all statutory notices of liens or claims on land which may be filed or recorded in his office on and after the 1st day of January, 1894. Such books shall be known as the block index of liens, and shall be ruled for entering therein the names of the lienor and the owner of the property affected."

It will be noticed that this act directs suitable index books to be prepared for the future indexing therein on the block plan of liens which may be filed after Jan. 1, 1894, but it nowhere directs such indexing to be done, nor, as before mentioned, does it declare the legal effect of such indexing.

The fact is that for two of three successive years prior to 1893 I caused to be introduced into the Legislature a bill for reindexing in the Register's and County Clerk's offices' papers which had previously been recorded and filed in these offices, and for preparing the necessary index books, but inasmuch as the form and ruling of the index books both for reindexing and for future indexing in the office of the County Clerk would be the same, my bill, with a view to economy, directed both sets of index books to be made up at the same time, it being intended, by a bill to be drawn and introduced into the Legislature the next session, to direct such future indexing in the office of the County Clerk and declaring its legal effect.

The influence of the city officials I found to be against my bill, and seeing no prospect of its passage, I paid no further attention to it, and in the Spring of 1893 I went to Europe.

Long subsequent to my return from abroad I learned that a bill almost identical with my own, with a few changes made for the benefit of the Controller's office, had been passed by the Legislature, being Chapter 536 of the Laws of 1893, above mentioned. But I did not know that indexing was being conducted on the block plan for future indexing in the County Clerk's office for a long time after.

It may be mentioned here that the Kings County Re-indexing act, about which there has been so much trouble, was copied mainly from the New York act of 1893, Chapter 365 of the Laws of 1894, and is subject to the same objections as the New York act.

Of course those who drafted the New York act misunderstood the bill which I had previously drawn, and attempted to remedy what they thought to be an omission of the date when the future indexing should go into effect.

What has been the legal effect as to notice of the liens entered in the New York and Brooklyn offices since the passage of the acts referred to, I am not prepared to say. The question may prove a serious one.

DWIGHT H. OLMSTEAD.

Mr. Olmstead said last evening to a TIMES reporter:

"The question may be one of the most serious which the city will have to face. I spent years of my life perfecting a system of land transfer reform, and for the scientific registration and indexing of land records by the 'block system.' I found that the politicians, both in New York and Albany, were against my proposed reforms. They finally had to accept my ideas. I perfected the 'block system' which is in use both in the counties of New York and Kings at the present time. After working several years at this work, I ruined my health. While traveling in Europe a bill which I had prepared for the Legislature, and which was opposed by many members of the New York bar and by the politicians because it would destroy the system of high fees for lawyers and title guarantee companies, passed, with several amendments put in for political purposes, and not in the interests of the people.

"My original bill, which was opposed by so many people, was taken word for word, with a few clauses left out, as you can see by a comparison of the original measure which I prepared, and the bill which became Chapter 536 of the Laws of 1893. After examining into the matter carefully I am convinced, but I do not state it positively as a lawyer, that the Legislature failed to state the 'legal effect' of the filing of a judgment under the block system. My first bill was a preparatory measure to one which I was to introduce after the passage of my original bill, and the second measure was to declare the 'legal effect' of the filing of a judgment under the block system. Apparently no such law has been passed."

Register Fromme said yesterday: "Mr. Olmstead is the greatest authority on the subject in this country. Any contention raised by him should be accepted by men who have not given the subject the years of careful consideration and study which he has done. The effect of Mr. Olmstead's contention if carried into the court and upheld would be far-reaching. I am convinced that he is right."

Controller Coler was visited by Mr. Olmstead recently to ascertain what the city was paying for the indexing of records.

The question as to the fittings of the new Hall of Records has also become involved in the matter. If the present "block system" is not being legally carried out because the law of 1893 does not declare the "legal effect" of indexing, then the question would arise as to whether the city should pay for the work illegally performed and what responsibility the city would have to assume in the matter.

Controller Coler was in Washington yesterday.

Carnegie Company to Build at Rankin.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Jan. 12.—The Carnegie Steel Company the latter part of the present month will undertake new work at the Carrie blast furnaces at Rankin, which will cost about $1,000,000. It will entail the tearing down of a blast furnace that is now turning out about 300 tons of Bessemer iron a day and the construction of a large furnace to produce 750 tons a day. It will be placed in line with the two that are now being built by the Riter-Conley Construction Company. When the work at the Carrie furnaces is completed the cost will run well toward $3,000,000.

Incorporated in Delaware.

DOVER, Del., Jan. 12.—The Heath Mining Company of Philadelphia was incorporated here to-day with a capital of $1,000,000. The company is empowered to acquire mines and mining rights in Idaho.

ABOLITION OF THE CANTEEN.

Army Officer Says It Is a Misfortune to the Soldier and an Embarrassment to the Army.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Abolition of the Post Exchange or canteen which will follow the passage of the Army Reorganization bill is a subject that is causing some conjecture among officers at the War Department. That the step is one in the right direction many of them doubt, but few of them speak for publication.

The exchange has been an important adjunct of the army since it was established. With the funds accumulated in the exchanges the soldiers have been able to do many things. They improved their table by the addition of food not provided in the ration, adding variety and delicacy to the bill of fare. The result has been to provide a daily table that by comparison with the old provision was luxurious. Besides the improvement of the table the soldiers obtained out of the exchange fund newspapers, magazines, and other things to make a reading room a place of entertainment.

The soldiers who were the company or regimental champions in football, baseball, or other sports that were sometimes exhibited in tournaments at which prizes were offered were all fitted out by the funds derived from the exchange.

"The exchange has made the difference between a miserable and a tolerable existence," an army officer of experience in the service said to-day, "and the abolition of the canteen will make a difference in the disposition of the soldier to re-enlist in the service. He has enjoyed the exchange advantages since 1891 or 1892, and few of the old-timers will care to get along without them. There is nothing to compel them to re-enlist. If they had not enjoyed the privileges secured by the operation of the exchanges, they would not care. To close the privileges after they have been once enjoyed will create great dissatisfaction.

"It may as well be admitted that without the canteen feature the exchange will not work. The sales of many articles that were formerly bought from the post trader add to the income, but it has been the sale of beer and wine, much of it taken with meals, that has swelled the fund so that out of the profits the men all contributed to the gratification of the appetites of all.

"Of course, the men who want beer will get it as long as beer is sold outside of camp and men can have leave of absence. The medical officers will tell you that they sometimes bring back trouble worse than the beer that puts them in the guardhouse. While the advocates of the abolition of the canteen undoubtedly were not willfully working with the saloon keepers, there is not a saloon keeper near a post who is not rejoicing in the defeat of the canteen section of the Army bill. Its defeat is a misfortune, in my opinion, for the soldier, and an embarrassment to the Government and the army."

NEW HARBOR ON LAKE ERIE?

Report that One Is to be Built at Elk Creek, Penn.

Special to The New York Times.

ASHTABULA, Ohio, Jan. 12.—A report comes from Erie, Penn., descriptive of a project to erect a new harbor on Lake Erie at Elk Creek, Penn., which is situated a number of miles east of the site of the new tube works which the Carnegie Company is to build.

The project to make a big harbor at Elk Creek was, it is said, mooted a number of years ago by the Carnegie Company. It is not understood here that the new harbor would necessarily be a shipping point for the products of the tube plant. If the Elk Creek Harbor is built it means that other industries of the Carnegie Company are to be located east of the tube-plant site, and these would be in close proximity to Elk Creek. The mouth of Elk Creek offers fine natural advantages for a harbor.

For sixty miles along the south shore of Lake Erie there is excitement over the project. Much land has been leased, and rumors are rife on all sides.

An electric line from Conneaut to Erie now seems assured. It will traverse the territory occupied by the new tube works, and will be about twenty-five miles long.

SAYS GIRL WAS HYPNOTIZED.

Ohio Man Makes Charges Against His Daughter's Husband.

Special to The New York Times.

TOLEDO, Jan. 12.—George W. Herskovits was arrested to-day on a warrant issued in Windsor, Ontario, charging him with perjury, "in falsely swearing to his wife's age."

The warrant was issued by Alexander Bartlett of Windsor, and charges that "on March 4, 1898, George W. Herskovits appeared before one James Oliver, an issuer of marriage licenses, and did commit willful and corrupt perjury for the purpose of obtaining a marriage license, by swearing that Clara Raymond was eighteen years of age, when she was under the age of fifteen years."

Herskovits was arrested early this morning upon complaint of Andrew S. Raymond, father-in-law of the prisoner. The story leading up to his arrest, as told by Mr. Raymond, is to the effect that while Mr. Raymond was in the West about three years ago, Herskovits induced his daughter, Clara, to run away to Windsor, where they were married. It was two weeks before Mr. Raymond was aware of the affair. Until a couple of months ago the couple lived together, apparently contented. About that time, however, Mrs. Herskovits left her husband and went to her father's home. Mr. Raymond said to-day:

"My daughter says that Herskovits exerted a hypnotic influence over her, and compelled her to go to Canada and become his wife."

SANTO DOMINGO'S FINANCES.

Credit Voted for Compensation of the New York Company.

SANTO DOMINGO, Jan. 12.—Congress has voted a credit for the Government to compensate the Santo Domingo Improvement Company of New York. Control of the customs will continue with the Government, which will pay salaries monthly. A commission composed of the Dutch and Belgian Consuls, the American and French Vice Consuls, and one Dominican will receive the customs duties.

General satisfaction is felt throughout the country. The President has been congratulated on the action taken. All is quiet.

ARRIVALS IN FLORIDA.

Special to The New York Times.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 12.—New York tourists are pouring in to Florida on every train and steamer. Among the arrivals at the east coast hotels this week have been the following:

Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Kingston, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Foster, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Bachman, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Moulton, Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Foster, the Misses Elwood, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford V. Brokaw, Mrs. George M. Eddy and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Dorantz and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Woolworth, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Yager, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Bloomingdale, Mr. and Mrs. John H Shultz, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Sanford, Mr. and Mrs. George R. Oettell, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Rice, Mr. and Mrs. E. Junge, Mr. and Mrs. J. Rosenthal, and Mr. and Mrs. H. W. White.

Bill Against Capital Punishment.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 12.—Senator William Willets Cocks, the new Republican Senator from Westburg, is a Quaker. As is well known, the Quakers are opposed to the infliction of the death penalty, and usually are exempted from serving on juries to try murder cases on account of their scruples in that respect. Now that they have a member of their community in the Senate the Quakers have decided to make an effort to have the death penalty abolished in New York. With that object in view, the Society of Friends is now preparing a bill which Senator Cocks will introduce.

$5,000 Fire in Chambers Street.

Damage of $5,000 to building and contents was caused by fire in the five-story brownstone building at 143 Chambers Street last night, which started on the second floor, occupied by the United States Export Association, which incurs a loss of $500. On the third floor The American Grocer is published. Their loss was $500. On the ground floor Eugene W. Dunstan, agent for Lowney's, has his office, and his loss by water is $500. The damage to the building was $3,500.

ANNUAL DINNER OF THE CORNELL ALUMNI

Nearly 200 Members Attend a Banquet at the Waldorf.

THE PRESIDENT'S APPEAL

He Tells of the University's Needs and Asks for $1,000,000—Many Toasts Responded To.

Nearly two hundred members of the Cornell Alumni Association held their twenty-first annual dinner last night in the main ball-room of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. President J. G. Schurman of the University, Judge Edward W. Hatch, President Clarence J. Shearn of the Alumni Association, and many other noted Cornellians responded to toasts that evoked cheers and the college cry and songs from the audience. The hall was handsomely decorated with palms and evergreens. The souvenirs were pamphlets of Cornell College songs, in red and white, and the boutonnieres were white roses tied with crimson ribbon.

Long before 7 o'clock, the hour set for the dinner, the guests began to arrive. There were old men, bald and gray, and young men, men who had never seen each other before, and old friends and class and fraternity mates who look forward to the annual dinner to meet and to note the progress of time in one another, and to exchange the news as to how the world is using them.

When the doors to the ballroom were thrown open there were thirty tables lighted by crimson and white shaded candles. The members filed in, and, standing before their seats, sang the famous Cornell College song, "Alma Mater."

Far above Cayuga's waters,
With its waves of blue,
Stands our noble Alma Mater,
Glorious to view.

CHORUS.

Lift the chorus, speed it onward,
Loud her praises tell;
Hail to thee, our Alma Mater!
Hail, all hail, Cornell!

Far above the busy humming
Of the bustling town,
Reared against the arch of heaven,
Looks she proudly down.—Chorus.

The following were the speakers: Jacob Gould Schurman, President of Cornell, responded to the toast "Alma Mater"; "Memories of College Days," responded to by Judge Edward W. Hatch; "What Makes the College," by Hamilton W. Mabie. The toast "Ezra Cornell" was drunk in silence. "Diplomacy" was then responded to by Frank D. Gamewell; "Our Quaker Friends," Henry G. Ward, and "College Spirit," by Prof. H. Morse Stephens.

The guests of the evening were ex-Gov. Alonzo B. Cornell, J. G. Montague Barlow, editor of The London Saturday Review; Dr. W. M. Polk, Dean of the Cornell Medical School, and the Rev. Frank D. Gamewell of the Methodist University at Peking.

The order of the speeches on the programme was not adhered to. Frequent allusion was made to Cornell's athletic prowess, and every demand for support in this department was met with enthusiastic applause.

The first speaker of the evening, President Schurman, was introduced by the presiding officer, Clarence J. Shearn.

President Schurman referred to the fact that he had just come from the celebration of Founder's Day at that institution, Ezra Cornell having been born on Jan. 11, 1807, making that a red-letter day in the educational calendar of the United States, while the birth of Alexander Hamilton on the same day fifty years earlier gave Jan. 11 a political and economic significance as well. Dr. Schurman, noting that "this is the day of the people, the most democratic epoch the world has ever seen," said:

"But government, as it is the most important, is also the most difficult of human concerns. The tendency of democracy is to relegate it from experts to the average man. If the unlimited democracy which now rules the most progressive portion of mankind is to furnish good government, it can only be through the education and elevation of public opinion, which is the controlling force in democratic Governments."

VICTORY OF FREE THOUGHT.

"The twentieth century," Dr. Schurman said, opens with the victory of free thought over traditional authority, and he deemed 'the unlimited right of free inquiry and impartial belief to be the most important intellectual element of contemporary civilization. The university is the congenial home of free inquiry." Free thought, the speaker added, had hitherto been almost entirely destructive, and now it had to "organize a coherent system of beliefs which shall embrace human life and the world as one harmonious whole."

Noting another characteristic of the times, Dr. Schurman said: "This is an age of unparalleled material expansion and organization. The world has never before possessed so much wealth or such an array of instrumentalities for its production and distribution. It is the day of large manufactories, long lines of railway and telegraph, mammoth steamships, fortunes of tens and hundreds of millions of dollars, cities conterminous with counties, and empires extending over continents or even compassing the globe. It is an age of things, and of big things.

"Bigness is not greatness. The material basis of civilization is not the entire structure. It is not for the production of the millionaire that the whole world groaneth and travaileth together until now. The aim is the perfect man. With him nature is in travail, and her method is the slow and gradual one of evolution.

"But when he comes we shall know him not by the clothes he wears or the food he eats, or the car or yacht by which he travels on land or sea, or the mansions in which he vainly seeks the rest of a home. We shall recognize him by his converse with art and literature and philosophy and science; by his wisdom and skill in practical affairs; by his private virtues and public spirit, and by his readiness to help and serve his fellow-men.

"In an age too much given to the pursuit of material interests, it is the function of the university to exalt this ideal of intellectual and moral greatness. Our intellectual achievements—to say nothing of the moral—are, as every candid and competent observer must admit, sadly disproportionate to our material progress. As an agricultural, as a manufacturing, and now also as an exporting Nation, we lead the world; but we still look in vain for our Dante or Shakespeare, our Newton or Darwin.

"And now I come to a paradox. While accumulated capital is not the end of civilization, there can be no civilization without it. The ideal factors of civilization cannot be cultivated unless those who cultivate them are supported by the winners of wealth. Art, science, literature, and philosophy are not, and never have been, except in a few instances, self-supporting. Churches, museums, colleges, and universities are and must remain objects of charitable support.

A PLEA FOR CORNELL.

Dr. Schurman made a special plea for Cornell. Its buildings, he said, were valued at almost $2,000,000; its equipment at nearly $1,250,000, and its invested funds amounted to nearly $7,000,000, yet the institution's facilities were greatly overtaxed, and there was urgent need of two large halls, one for physics and the other for languages; for three or four dormitories, and for an auditorium large enough to accommodate all the members of the university at public lectures and on ceremonial occasions. These buildings, Dr. Schurman said, might cost about $1,000,000. He appealed to the public for that amount.

In concluding, Dr. Schurman alluded to the co-operation, fraternity, helpfulness, and kindness and unalloyed harmony prevailing at Cornell, and paid a tribute to the late Moses Coit Tyler, who was buried on the last Sunday of the old year.

"A university," said he, "which aims to be the home of all knowledge, theoretical and practical, and which has in its Faculty men like Moses Coit Tyler, has a mission in this Republic, whose extent no man can measure and whose importance no man can overestimate."

Prof. H. Morse Stephens responded to the toast "College Spirit."

"I am told that good after-dinner speaking," he said, "consists in telling bright and original stories. That is too much to expect of an Englishman. Most of the bright, new, and original stories that are told in England have already crossed the Atlantic. I am not quite sure but that all the bright, new, and original stories might be found written in the hieroglyphics of the ancients.

"For more than six years now I have been a professor, so you must excuse me if I preach a little and speak seriously instead of telling bright and original stories."

Prof. Stephens then dwelt upon the importance of the proposed Cornell memorial, and added that what was specially needed was opportunity for the ordinary man—the one who was neither an extraordinary athlete nor a brilliant student.

"Cornell athletics," he said, "bring together a common enthusiasm. I favor their encouragement, and insist that you do what you can to help us when you are appealed to.

"The one consolation of a teacher's life is the affection of his pupils. We follow the careers of the boys who have been under us, their failures, and their successes touch us closely. So when you sing your old songs remember that we are at one with you."

Hamilton W. Mabie, speaking on "What Makes the College," said in part:

THE WANT COLUMN.

I notice at all the college dinners there is usually a sort of "want" column. The American college is voracious. I don't say this in the spirit of criticism—the work of the American college is still largely in the future.

The American college holds up the same ideals and the same text book wherever it is situated—the lesson of the superiority of man over the instruments he wields. Whatever the college we have in mind, it is not of the buildings, of the curriculum, but of those great men whom we associate with them.

"It isn't our millions nor our buildings that make our colleges great. That little college down in Tuskegee, built from the mud of slavery, is a key to American institutions. It represents the personality of the man."

J. C. Montague Barlow of Cambridge, England, was the next speaker. He said that he was a member of a rowing club known as the "Leander," which evoked a yell of approval from the diners.

"An American friend," he added, "gave me a motto, 'Neither to laugh nor to weep, but to understand.' That seems to be a potent spirit in America. I bought a paper from a newsboy the other night, and asked him how much it was. He glanced at me sharply, then said 2 cents. Later I discovered that the price was 1 cent—he certainly understood."

A letter from Andrew D. White, the first President of Cornell, was read and was received with cheers.

Henry G. Ward responded to the toast "Our Quaker Friends."

"It is extremely pleasant," he said, "that old Pennsylvania should sustain such cordial relations with young Cornell. I indulge this prophecy that whenever you are contending with any other university, your old friend Pennsylvania will rise up and yell, Cornell!"

Walter C. Kerr was the last speaker.

The evening was concluded with the singing of a college song. It was announced that the Cornell-Columbia debate will be held in this city on March 7.

CLARK'S SENATORIAL FIGHT.

Montana Man Says He Will Not Pay for Votes—Wants to Go to Washington Untainted.

Special to The New York Times.

HELENA, Mon., Jan. 12.—Concerning the continued absence of the eight Fusionist members of the Legislature from this county from the two futile caucuses held for the purpose of nominating a successor to Thomas H. Carter, and for which office W. A. Clark is the only candidate, The Helena Independent, the leading Clark organ here, gives voice to the following editorial, implying that they are seeking pay for their votes after having been elected on a platform indorsing Clark:

"Your constituents instructed you to act as a unit in regard to two matters: The election of W. A. Clark to the United States Senate, and the passage of an eight-hour law. What reason can you give for your private agreement? What reason have you, that you are not ashamed to have known, why you did not attend the caucus last night? Are you willing to go again before the people of Lewis and Clarke Counties and tell about your agreement? Can you stand up and answer? Dare you do it? Dare you tell the truth as to the reason why you did not attend the caucus last night? Do you harbor an ambition to be known not only in this county but all over the State as men who first lied to their constituents and then tried a miserable, sneaking, hold-up game?"

Various excuses are being made by the absentees, such as "Bossism," "unit rule," &c., all of which are received with more or less anger by the public, which feels this State has had its share of Senatorial disgrace. Clark swears he will not give a Legislator a penny for his vote, and will go to the Senate untainted or not at all.

HAYES BEATS GORMAN MEN.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 12.—Mayor Hayes has hurled a bomb into the camp of the State Democratic leaders, and knocked out their scheme to call an extra session of the Legislature to disfranchise the negro voters so as to assure the State to the Democrats this year, when Gorman is to be a candidate for United States Senator. State Senator Olin Bryan has joined the Mayor in his fight. Without Senator Bryan the necessary fourteen votes in the Senate to pass the bill could not be obtained. Mayor Hayes says he will fight his party to its bitter defeat on any such scheme, and that to deprive any set of men, white or black, of their Constitutional right to vote is a bad step backward.

He believes that it would be undemocratic to deprive anybody of his vote and that it would be in violation of all the teachings of the leaders of the Democratic Party and of the fathers of the Republic. While it might be true that the ignorant voter might be bought, the Mayor says that he constitutes an effective check upon many of the unfortunate tendencies of the times. He does not consider it advisable to place the Government in the hands of any one class, and says the more widespread the suffrage the more safeguards there are about the rights of the people as a whole.

The Democratic politicians say that Hayes is doing everything that he can to wreck his party and prevent Gorman's return to the Senate.

Maine Electors Organize.

AUGUSTA, Me., Jan. 12.—The six Presidential Electors of the State chosen last November met at the State House to-day for organization. The Electors are George T. Westcott of Portland, Joseph O. Smith of Skowhegan, at large; Charles F. Libby of Portland, Joshua E. Alexander of Richmond, Fred Atwood of Winterport, and Almon G. Fogg of Houlton, representing the four districts in the State. Organization was perfected as follows: Charles F. Libby of Portland, Chairman; Sumner J. Chadbourne of Augusta, Secretary, and E. C. Stevens of Chelsea, Messenger. Adjournment was taken until next Monday, when the Electors will meet again and cast their votes, after which one of the members will be selected to carry the vote to the Electoral College at Washington.

On account of the absence of James W. Wakefield, the Elector-elect from the Second District, Joshua E. Alexander of Richmond was chosen to fill the vacancy.

Massachusetts Electors Meet.

BOSTON, Jan. 12.—The Massachusetts Electoral College met at the State House this afternoon and effected organization by choosing William Whiting of Holyoke for President and Josiah P. Thacher of Littleton Secretary. Adjournment was taken until Monday at 11:30 A. M., when a messenger will be chosen and the vacancy caused by the death of ex-Gov. Roger Wolcott, who was an Elector at Large, will be filled.

For a District Court in Hawaii.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Senator Warren of Wyoming to-day introduced a bill amending the act establishing a Government for Hawaii by providing for a District Court in Hawaii, the District Judge, the District Attorney, and the Marshal to be appointed by the President, and to hold office for six years. In addition to the ordinary jurisdiction of a District Court the amendment provides that it shall have jurisdiction in all cases cognizable in a Circuit Court of the United States.

Citizens' Union Incorporated.

ALBANY, Jan. 12.—The Citizens' Union of the Sixth Assembly District of the City of New York was incorporated to-day to "promote the success of the political party which we think have the interests of the people at heart." The Directors are Harry Schulman, Max Lazarus, Dr. Morris R. Altman, Isaac Lazarus, Dr. Louis J. Druskin, Joseph Goldstein, Joseph N. Harris, and Arthur J. Goldstein of New York City.

French Lectures at Columbia.

The department of Romance languages and literature at Columbia University has completed arrangements with M. Gaston Deschamps, literary critic of the Paris Temps for a series of French lectures on "The History of the French Press during the Nineteenth Century." The dates for the lectures are March 14, 16, 18, and 21. A series on "The Contemporaneous Theatre in France" may be arranged later.

ELMIRA REFORMATORY REPORT.

Manager Diven Gives His Reasons for Refusing to Sign It with the Other Managers.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Jan. 12.—Manager John M. Diven of the New York State Reformatory, who refused to sign the managers' report, has given out the following statement of the reasons for his refusal:

"I do not concur in the report of the majority of the Board of Managers of the Elmira State Reformatory for the following reasons:

"I consider the slurs on the previous board and on Mr. Brockway's management contained in the report in at least bad taste. The report states that I was absent from March 15 to Oct. 15, 1900. This statement is not correct, though between those dates I did not attend the meetings when they fell on dates when it was not possible for me to do so, mostly on account of unavoidable absence from the city.

"Mr. Brockway's dismissal was first made known to me through the newspapers. His removal had never been discussed in a regular meeting of the board at which I was present, and I am even now ignorant of the cause for it.

"That a condition of disease through neglect existed as the report seems to imply I deny. As to the educational and disciplinary features, the most casual observer cannot help seeing a change for the worse under the new system. One of the first acts of the 'new board' in this direction was the abolishing of the manual training school, one of the most important educational and disciplinary features of the institution.

"No means could be provided, except the wards of the hospital and invalid yard, for separating prisoners supposed to be diseased from healthy ones. So the examination of incoming prisoners to detect disease seemed unnecessary, as they would have had to be accepted in any event; moreover, the State provides no place for diseased criminals except for the insane.

"As to the insane inmates, it had always been the practice to transfer the pronouncedly insane ones to Matteawan as soon as discovered. But none were transferred who could be treated and improved in the reformatory, and many weak-minded inmates were undoubtedly improved or cured by the treatment given them here who would not have been by a transfer to an insane asylum. I believe that the great increase in insanity lately developed is due, in some measure, to the diminished resistive power of inmates occasioned by the relaxed discipline, by close confinement for punishment, and the abolishing of manual and physical training.

"I cannot agree with the statement that the discipline has not deteriorated, for it certainly has, and greatly so. Assaults and outbreaks have been common. At night prisoners were so noisy as to excite remarks from passers-by, and complaints from residents in the neighborhood, and this condition was only stopped by recourse to forms of punishment that the board had by resolution prohibited, nor can order be made without the use of such restrictive measures.

"On my return in the latter part of August on my first visit I saw not less than twenty men handcuffed with their hands behind them to cell doors, and the monthly disciplinary reports show a large number subjected to this treatment every month. The number for last month, for instance, was eighty-nine. I believe some severe punishment to be necessary to maintain order, but this chaining of hands behind the men to doors seems more cruel and dangerous than former punishments."

In conclusion Manager Diven states that the eighty men transferred to State prisons in June, 1900, were selected by Mr. Brockway by direction of the board, and that it was the policy of the majority of the board to reduce the number of inmates, and a wholesale transfer to State prisons was one of the methods suggested.

RABBI WASSERMAN DEAD.

He Was Ninety Years Old and a Leader in Masonic Circles.

Rabbi Henry Wasserman, formerly of the B'nai B'rith Home, Yonkers, died suddenly of heart disease, at his home, 20 West Ninety-sixth Street, last night, in the ninetieth year of his age. He was one of the oldest and best-known rabbis in the city and in Masonic circles.

Rabbi Wasserman was born in Bavaria Jan. 11, 1811. He was educated there, and for a number of years was in charge of the synagogue at Oberandorf, in Guttenberg. He came to this country in 1855 and took charge of a church in Sixth Street, whose congregation was made up chiefly of French people. In 1885 he accepted the position of rabbi of the B'nai B'rith Home, in Yonkers, remaining there until 1898, when he resigned owing to advancing age. He was the oldest Masonic Chaplain in the State, at the time of his death occupying that position in the King Solomon Lodge, F. and A. M.

Rabbi Wasserman was said to hold the record for marrying couples, having for twenty years married an average of 100 couples a month, a total of 24,000. He often spoke of this fact. On the lecture platform he was well known, and was also the author of several books. His wife died twenty years ago, and his nearest surviving relative is a niece who is the wife of S. Morgenthau.

BAIL FOR MAIN AND POWERS.

Grand Jury Will Now Investigate Tarrant & Co. Explosion.

President Thomas F. Main and William G. B. Powers of the drug firm of Tarrant & Co., who were held responsible by a Coroner's jury Friday for the death of seven persons in the fire and subsequent explosion which wrecked their premises on Oct. 29 last, were yesterday admitted to bail in the sum of $5,000 each, to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Max J. Breitenbach, a manufacturer, living at 22 East Eighty-ninth Street, gave bail for Main. Breitenbach occupied one of the floors of the Tarrant Building. He pledged the brick house, 436 Madison Avenue, valued at $40,000. Joseph A. Flynn qualified as Powers's bondsman, giving fifteen blocks on Washington Heights, valued at $30,000, as security.

Alfred Ely, counsel for Tarrant & Co., said there was nearly a million dollars' worth of insurance tied up in the case, and that a strong legal fight would be made for its settlement.

He had been informed, he said, that a man had approached an employe of Tarrant & Co. and offered him $2,000 to testify that sulphur had been stored on the premises. Assistant District Attorney Walsh stated that the matter would be presented to the Grand Jury at an early date.

CALLS HIMSELF A SOLILOQUIST.

Ezra Kendall Says He Talks Alone When He Is Not Alone.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—Ezra Kendall was in court yesterday attempting to secure a judgment against William H. West, a well-known leader and manager of minstrel troups. Attorney Edward E. Gray secured an admission from Kendall that he was a monologist. After the usual rapid-fire of commonplace quizzes, the attorney asked:

"Then Mr. Kendall, you are a monologist?"

"I am a soliloquist, Sir, and a conversationalist, besides a kind of oratorist."

There were giggles in the courtroom, and the bailiff rapped and became red. Quiet being restored, the attorney continued:

"Will you tell me the difference between a soliloquist and a monologist?"

"A soliloquist is a fellow who talks alone when he's not alone because if he was alone nobody would know that he soliloquized and a mon—"

Here the laughter broke out afresh, and the bailiff rapped louder than ever.

Asked whether he left the company at night or during the day, Kendall replied: "I think it was day; at least it looked like all day to me."

After consideration of the argument of counsel on a motion to take the case from the jury, Judge Hilscher directed the return of a verdict finding in favor of Mr. West.

Mexican Cotton Operatives Strike.

Special to The New York Times.

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 12.—A dispatch from Puebla, Mexico, says that on Jan. 1 the operatives of three of the largest cotton mills in the State of Puebla went on a strike because of a reduction of wages. The mill owners refused to accede to the demand for the restoration of the old scale of wages, and a general strike of all the cotton mill employes throughout the State has been declared. Most of the mills have been forced to shut down. Over 10,000 operatives are affected by the strike.

BOOKKEEPER COMMITS SUICIDE.

Man Kills Himself in Chicago Because Unable to Find Work.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—Despondency over his failure to secure employment led Louis Mutchett, a bookkeeper, thirty-three years old, to commit suicide by asphyxiation yesterday afternoon.

He came to Chicago from New York six weeks ago in search of work, and stayed with John Stavery 343 Dayton Street, a friend of the family.

FINE WEATHER STAYS RAVAGES OF THE GRIP

Hospitals Report Fewer Cases After a Day of Sunshine.

Bellevue, Harlem, and Other City Institutions Can Now Care for All Patients—No Fear of a Lack of Nurses.

Grip, which had reached the proportions of an epidemic in this city during the heavy rains last week, was mitigated by the sunshine yesterday. Dr. Stewart, Superintendent of Bellevue, where nearly all the poorer patients arrive, said there were 840 cases yesterday, or ten less than on Friday. From Harlem Hospital three patients were removed to relieve the congestion. Friday was the record-breaking day of the hospital, so far as the old attachés could remember, in point of numbers, and on Thursday night a score of patients had to sleep on the floors of the different wards, but special arrangements were made yesterday by which they all could receive beds.

The most anxiety was felt in regard to the insane pavilion, which has a capacity of but twenty-eight, and late yesterday afternoon there were twenty-six patients in the place, none of whom can be sent away before to-morrow. "We generally get a number on Saturday night and Sunday," said Dr. Schultze, "and if they come in that way now, I'm afraid we will have to put some of them on the floor or send them to the alcoholic wards."

There were busy scenes at the dispensary at Bellevue, where Dr. A. Burney Hannon was in charge. Nearly all the applicants came for treatment for grip and pulmonary diseases. Many children came to get medicine for parents, who were too ill to leave their homes. In some instances the little ones had also been attacked by the malady and were treated themselves before they left the institution. Patients treated in the dispensary last month numbered 14,571, and Dr. Hannon said that the number this month might exceed 20,000. There seemed to be more suffering from these causes in Harlem than down town.

Dr. Glover in St. Luke's Hospital reported thirty cases of grip or pneumonia, and said that the physicians had been so busy attending the new arrivals all Friday night that many telephone inquiries had to go unanswered. J. Hood Wright Hospital reported two cases, and Harlem Hospital eighteen cases.

George Blair, Superintendent of the Outdoor Poor, said that there was more grip than at any time since he had assumed office, and that several hospitals, among them Seton and St. Joseph's, had notified him that they were unable to care for any more patients. He said that the City Hospital on Blackwell's Island was nearly full, and that there were only twenty vacant beds in the female wards.

Andrew Unwein, twenty-six years old, of 630 Eagle Avenue, a drug clerk, was found wandering aimlessly about Eighth Avenue, and One Hundred and Forty-eighth Street at 1 A. M. yesterday by Policeman Terhune of the West One Hundred and Fifty-second Street Station. He could give but little account of himself and was removed to J. Hood Wright Hospital, where the doctors pronounced him insane from grip. He will recover, both mentally and physically.

Commissioner of Charities John W. Keller said at Bellevue yesterday that he did not expect the nurses at the hospital would resign in a body. He also said the public could rest assured that Bellevue would have all the nurses needed to care for its patients.

THEATRE BUSINESS AFFECTED.

Many Empty Seats in Broadway Houses Because of the Epidemic.

In the past week there has been a scarcity of theatregoers such as the Broadway managers say they have never known at this season of the year. They attribute the small audiences to the epidemic of grip.

Until last night, when "things picked up a bit," there was hardly a full house in town through the entire week, and the theatres where choice seats could not be procured after the curtain rose might have been counted on one's fingers. This state of affairs, which began ten days ago, grew worse, until, on Friday evening, the ushers almost went to sleep from lack of work.

In one theatre, where a well-known and much-advertised star was billed, the curtain rose with less than a score of persons in the house, and all but six of the twenty were employés.

There are very few of the theatres that have not been "papered" on the wholesale. This "papering" is the technical term for filling empty seats by issuing free tickets. In one instance, only two days ago, a certain manager asked a business acquaintance how many seats in a particular theatre he could use for the following night. The answer was 100, and so, when the curtain rose, that theatre was not altogether empty.

In the variety houses the falling-off was not so noticeable, though they, too, were far less popular than usual. One manager, now a vaudeville man, but formerly interested in some of the legitimate productions, said last night:

"I have been along the row from one end to the other this week, and I never saw such poor crowds at this season. I think it is the grip—at least, we can't account for it any other way."

MUCH GRIP IN NEW HAVEN.

Many Yale Students and Professors Laid Up—Situation in Connecticut Serious.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 12.—The recent two-days' storm has greatly increased the number of cases of grip in this section of the State. It is stated by physicians that fully 1,000 new cases have developed on account of the weather conditions. The number of doctors is not sufficient to go around, and the Medical School instructors and professors have been pressed into service. Several doctors are ill with the disease, and the situation is daily growing worse.

At Yale to-night it was stated in the Dean's office that students are suffering from the grip seriously. It is estimated that fully 500 undergraduates and instructors are on the sick list. Profs. Saunders, Tyler, Wayland, Watrous, Yager, and Beers are all laid up. There were six cases at the infirmary to-day.

In the State sickness has increased alarmingly of late, the presence of grip and smallpox at the same time making the situation the more serious. Schoolrooms are closed in many of the small towns near here, and in the cities the police and Post Office forces have been considerably depleted. At the hospitals, reports state that the number of cases of grip under treatment is greater than in any previous year, though there have been as yet no deaths.

This is the ninth year of the grip in this State, and there will be begun at once a strong attempt to stamp out the disease.

GRIP RAGING IN ST. LOUIS.

Forty-two Deaths from the Disease in the Week Just Passed.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 12.—Forty-two deaths from the grip is the record for this week in St. Louis, as compared with twelve the week preceding. The epidemic continues in virulence, and the physicians seem unable to curb its spread.

It is the opinion of the Health Commissioner that spitting on the floors of street cars and other public places is responsible for a great deal of the spread of the disease. Another theory advanced is that, owing to the fact that there has been very little snow this winter, the dust carries the germs.

CLERK OF NASSAU COUNTY DEAD.

Thomas Patterson Succumbs to an Attack of Pneumonia.

Thomas Patterson, Clerk of Nassau County, died at his residence, in Mineola, yesterday morning, after a short illness. A week ago he had an attack of the grip, which later developed into pneumonia. Mr. Patterson was thirty-eight years old. He leaves a wife and six children.

Grip Epidemic at Princeton University.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 12.—An epidemic of grip has spread rapidly through the university the past few days. The head nurse at the infirmary said to-day that eighteen cases are now in the University Hospital, which means that every ward is occupied with a patient. There are also several lighter cases confined to rooms in the dormitories. Dr. A. K. MacDonald said there are fully 200 cases of grip in town.

Grip Victim Kills Himself.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Jan. 12.—The suicide of John Boes, a prosperous tailor, doing business at 19 Washington Avenue, this city, which occurred to-day, is attributed to the grip, from which he had been suffering for some days. Last night he told his wife that he did not care to live any longer. She attached no importance to the remark, which she put down to despondency caused by his sickness. This morning when she went down stairs she found his body hanging from the banisters.

CHIEF DEVERY'S STATUS.

President York Says There Is No Talk of His Early Retirement.

"I am not talking," said President Bernard J. York yesterday, "on the subject of Chief Devery's retirement while I know of no change in the situation, as it concerns him, which has for some time existed."

This statement from Mr. York was made after his attention had been drawn to a revival of rumors about Chief Devery ending his police career or it being terminated by action of the board. One story had it that Richard Croker had issued his fiat, and that Devery would "go" to-morrow.

President York was asked if the action of Chief Devery on Friday in failing to appear before the police tribunal which is trying Capt. Herlihy was held to be disobedience of orders or defiance of the authority of the board, or both.

"I attach no importance to it," answered Mr. York. "There was no disobedience or contempt in his conduct. He was not in his office when he was first called, and afterward sent word that he was busy, which was true, and asked if Monday would do as well. The incident was unimportant and without significance."

Chief Devery was asked to appear at the Herlihy trial on Friday, so that ex-Judge W. M. K. Olcott, for the prosecution, might ask him if Capt. Herlihy had applied for a Chief's warrant against suspected vicious resorts. If the Chief answers in the negative, it will furnish additional proof of neglect of duty by the Captain. If the answer is affirmative, the Chief will be called upon to say if he granted the request or to explain, if he did not, why he refused aid to his subordinate.

President York, discussing the lack of sufficient Roundsmen to maintain the discipline of the department, said that it had been established that the board could not appoint a full Roundsman except from an eligible list furnished by the Municipal Civil Service Commission.

"But," he added, "the Chief can as he chooses assign patrolmen to duty as Roundsmen. The men thus assigned would be Acting Roundsmen drawing a patrolman's pay."

COMMITTEES ARE INACTIVE.

The Fifteen Will Meet on Wednesday and the Tammany Five To-morrow.

Both the Committee of Fifteen and the Tammany Committee of Five, which are organized to fight vice in this city, made a short day of it yesterday. Chairman William H. Baldwin, Jr., of the Fifteen paid a short visit to the headquarters of his organization in the Park Row Building, but made no statement for publication. The committee will not meet until Wednesday and great things are expected upon that occasion.

The Committee of Five will meet to-morrow, and there is nothing but speculation about their immediate plans, for M. Warley Platzek, the legal member, has ceased to talk about the matter, and Chairman Lewis Nixon was in Philadelphia yesterday.

Tammany men who know say that the intense activity already shown by Mr. Nixon and his followers has been in accord with the wishes of Mr. Croker, and that the committee has not gone out of bounds, as many have supposed. These say that Mr. Croker is pleased with the adverse effect its revelations may have on Mayor Van Wyck, John F. Carroll, Chief Devery, and others, who it is said he is almost as anxious to drive out of politics as he is to purify New York. It bids fair to make a wide split between the two factions in Tammany Hall led by Mr. Croker on the one hand and by the Mayor on the other, and the feeling engendered is already manifesting itself in a marked coolness in the intercourse between the members of the respective parties in the social intercourse at the Democratic Club.

A private letter received in this city yesterday from Senator Timothy D. Sullivan, who has been spending the Winter in New Orleans, announced that he would be home on Tuesday.

POLICE POSITIONS SOLD.

It Costs $400 or $500 to Get an Appointment as Patrolman.

The following letter was sent to THE NEW YORK TIMES by a gentleman well known in this city:

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A young mechanic of this city, earning $400 a year, wishes a position on the police force, and in attempting to aid him I called on the Republican Captain of the district in which he resides. This Captain said he must get vouchers for his good character from a minister, a doctor, and two other reputable citizens. "But," he added, "these will do him no good until a Republican administration comes in, and even then they will do him no good till he puts up the money." "How much must he put up?" I asked. "Four hundred or five hundred dollars," he replied, and he added, "I have a friend who was promoted to Roundsman nine months ago, but his pay has not been increased, and will not be till he puts up his money."

All this was stated without the slightest expression in tone, word, or gesture of disapprobation, but as a familiar matter of fact. And it only serves to illustrate anew the truth that both political parties are so accustomed to corruption that even the underlings think nothing of it. Or, if they do, they silence conscience by saying, "Politics is politics," and go on perpetuating the evil. Both machines need overhauling. Perhaps if both were smashed and a new one made, the twentieth century might be brighter and better. DOULOS.

New York, Jan. 10, 1901.

PROMOTION FOR ENLISTED MEN

Secretary Long Recommends a Bill Allowing Boatswains and Gunners to Become Ensigns.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Secretary Long has submitted to the Chairman of the House Naval Committee, with commendation to the favorable consideration of the committee, drafts of a proposed measure providing for the promotion of boatswains and gunners to the grade of ensign in the navy.

He says that the proposed legislation would have a tendency to popularize the navy, inasmuch as it would afford deserving enlisted men an opportunity to secure reward for meritorious service by promotion, through intermediate grades, to the rank of commanding officers in the regular line of promotion.

The navy has been an aristocratic service as compared with the army, for the reason that to the best of the sailors who entered the navy there was no future beyond the waist of the ship. A diligent and bright boy might, in course of time, get to be a non-commissioned or warrant officer, but his career would stop short of the boundary between the rank and file.

In the army there has been opportunity for exceptionally good men to enter the ranks as privates and rise to the highest rank in the line or staff. This democratic practice has been advocated outside of the navy, but has not met with much favor inside the establishment. That it may be established is suggested by Secretary Long's action. The tests would be very severe, as are the tests for promotion from the ranks in the army, but the severity of them would give assurance of the selection of competent and ambitious persons.

The supply of officers for the navy is now inadequate, and such arrangements as may be made to hasten the placing of men now at Annapolis in service with commissions will not fully meet the demand. The suggestion is made by Mr. Long that when it happens that the graduates from Annapolis are insufficient in number to fill existing vacancies in the lower grade of officers, not exceeding six gunners and boatswains found qualified may be appointed in each year. The simple offer of the opportunity is regarded as good, as it will inevitably create ambition and greater self-respect among the enlisted force.

CHINA'S COURT GIVES WAY

Orders the Plenipotentiaries to Sign the Joint Note.

German Officials Believe the Chinese Will Consider Themselves Bound by the Signature.

PEKING, Jan. 12.—The Chinese Peace Commissioners have received orders from the Court to sign the joint note of the powers.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The State Department is still without any advices from Minister Conger, either as to the signing of the peace treaty or to-day's report that the Chinese envoys have received orders from the Court to sign.

So far as the department is informed, the status at Peking remains unchanged.

BERLIN, Jan. 12.—German political circles believe that the Chinese problem is still a long way off from a definite solution, as the question of damages will occupy much time. Nobody here believes that Field Marshal Count von Waldersee or the German troops will be withdrawn by March. The opinion here rather inclines to another year elapsing before that happens, although it is well known that Russia strongly desires von Waldersee's retirement and that of the German troops.

An official of the Foreign Office states that those who are thoroughly acquainted with the Chinese hold that, while they are most crafty, still, when the note is signed, they will consider themselves bound.

The Foreign Office believes that while the Dowager Empress is still more or less under anti-foreign influences she will eventually change her attitude and return to Peking with the whole Court, probably at the end of March or the beginning of April.

ATTACK ON CONGER UNFOUNDED.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The statements in an attack upon Minister Conger in a Peking dispatch published this morning met with a sharp denial at the State Department to-day. Minister Conger has done a number of things which have not pleased his superiors, but he is guiltless of the particular things charged against him in this article.

It was asserted that after Conger's memorable mistake in his instructions, which led to a complete overturn of the American position, he reported the fact to the State Department, and that Secretary Hay then instructed him to repair his error; that he had ample time and opportunity to repair it, but did not do so, and signed the note in defiance of his instructions.

This is emphatically denied at the State Department. The fact is that Minister Conger's error was irreparable, and that there never was a time after he had made it when anything could be done to change the situation without inviting worse dangers. After ascertaining this, Secretary Hay ordered Mr. Conger to sign the note with a reservation limiting the extent to which America would go in the enforcement of the ultimatum. Mr. Conger, therefore, did not disobey orders in signing the note.

NIU-CHWANG ROAD NOT CEDED.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—The Foreign Office here declares that the report of the cession of the Niu-Chwang and Shan-hai-Kuan Railroad to Russia by Lord Salisbury (as announced by The Daily Chronicle) is unfounded. It points out that Great Britain has no power to cede the railroad, as it is Chinese property. Moreover, it is stipulated that it shall not be mortgaged to any foreign Government or company.

There have been reports that Russian agents are endeavoring to buy out the British interests, but the British Government is not connected therewith. Representations have been made to Russia on behalf of the English bondholders, as the action of the Russian officials is considered to have exceeded the military requirements, and the question of compensation will come up when the line is restored to its owners.

A convention on this subject is now under discussion.

Missionaries Going to Central China.

The Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions yesterday received a cablegram from the Rev. George F. Fitch, at Shanghai, asking that all missionaries destined for work in the Central China Presbyterian Mission start for China at once. This includes the missionaries at home on furlough and also some who go to a foreign field for the first time. The message is invoked upon as showing that the Presbyterian missionaries at Shanghai are satisfied that the danger of further disturbance is not acute, at least in Central China. The missionaries sent for will start at an early date.

OBSERVATIONS OF EROS.

Harvard Astronomers Have Been Busy Taking Photographs of the Asteroid —Results Not Yet Known.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 12.—Astronomers all over the world are now observing the planet Eros, which was discovered in 1897, and is now in a position where many important facts concerning it can be learned.

Eros approaches nearer the earth than any other heavenly body except the moon. At its nearest point it is only 18,000,000 miles away; but as this position is reached only once in many years, it is very important that all observations possible should be made at that time. When it was discovered in 1897 it had just passed beyond this near point, and was moving rapidly from the earth. Now it has reached a position where its distance from the earth is only 26,000,000 miles, and astronomers are exerting every effort to learn more about it.

At the Harvard Observatory particular efforts have been made along this line. Cameras are kept constantly turned toward the sky, and no preparations have been overlooked to take advantage of present opportunities. Harvard has already played an important part in the observations of the planet. When Eros was discovered it was by means of photographs of the heavens which had been taken at the Cambridge Observatory. The importance of this department of astronomical work was never better illustrated than in this case. Harvard has for the past fifteen years closely followed the heavens with her lenses, and when it was announced that a new planet had been discovered it remained simply to look over the collection of plates that are kept on hand to locate and follow the previous movements of the little asteroid.

The chief interest in the planet at the present time is the determining of the form of its orbit. From the observations which have already been made it is known that this is in the form of a very flat ellipse, but more than that is not known. In fact, the exact position of the planet is very hard to determine. Somewhere between Jupiter and Mars there lie between 400 and 500 little planets. Eros is one of these, but it differs from the others in that, although it is only about twenty miles in diameter, it has a fixed and peculiar course through the heavens.

The observations at the Harvard Observatory have been carried on under most favorable weather conditions. A number of photographs have been taken, but they have not been developed yet, and their importance has not been learned. Prof. Pickering, who has charge of the work, is however confident that some important facts will be disclosed. During the next few days the heavens will be continuously photographed; then when the planet has passed to a point where observations are impossible from this station, cameras will be set to work in the department in Arequipa, Peru. Thus the movements of Eros will be observed in both the northern and southern skies.

If the present observations of the planet are successful, astronomers will be able to determine accurately the distance of the earth from the sun. The calculations at the present time do not come within a hundredth of a second of being correct—a fact which upsets the whole scheme and plan of astronomical discovery. This one-hundredth of a second amounts to about 50,000 miles in distance, and can only be corrected by the determination of a suitable base line from which the vast distance between the earth and the sun, or the solar parallox, can be calculated.

Since the study of astronomy was first begun this problem has been the greatest with which astronomers have had to contend. Now it seems about to be definitely settled for, with the orbit of Eros determined and used as a base of operations, the task becomes easy.

The strange fact that Eros only comes within close range of the earth once in forty-five years may be understood, Prof. Pickering explains, by the fact that it requires a year and three-quarters to circle around the sun. In the meantime the earth as it has journeyed has passed the little planet several times, but the orbit of the latter is so eccentric that the relative positions are only the same at long intervals of time.

YESTERDAY'S MUSIC.

Two Performances of Opera and Three Concerts.

New York had one of its busy musical days yesterday. At the Metropolitan Opera House "Faust" was sung in the afternoon to an audience which tested the capacity of the building, and in the evening "Tannhäuser" was given to an audience not so large, but nevertheless not uncomplimentary to the performers. At Carnegie Hall in the afternoon Mr. Frank Damrosch gave one of his interesting concerts for young persons, and in the evening the Philharmonic Society repeated the programme which was heard at the rehearsal of the previous afternoon. At Mendelssohn Hall in the afternoon Ossip Gabrilowitsch, the young Russian pianist, gave another of his frequent recitals. All of these entertainments were well attended and the audiences showed that their pleasure was great. But it is an old story now that New York has a large and healthy musical public.

Perhaps the entertainment which did the most good in a modest way was Mr. Damrosch's concert at Carnegie Hall. There at least there was an opportunity for ignorance to acquire information. Mr. Damrosch arranged his programme yesterday to show what some composers had written for or about children. The orchestral numbers were the enchanting prelude to "Hansel und Gretel," a delicious preface to a wholly lovely work; Wagner's "Siegfried Idyl," and part of Tschaikowsky's "Nutcracker" suite. Katherine Ruth Heyman, pianist, played with taste and crisp technic four numbers from Schumann's "Album for the Young," Beethoven's sonata in G major, Opus 49, No. 2, and Liszt's "Gondoliera," and study in D flat major. Mr. Damrosch's explanations were, as usual, well considered and enlightening. Many children were present, and the story of Hansel and Gretel, the witch, and the gingerbread children plainly interested them.

Mr. Gabrilowitsch was heard by a numerous assembly, and his recital was in some of its traits worthier of praise than those which preceded it. His programme consisted of Beethoven's "Sonata quasi una fantasia," Opus 27; Schumann's "Faschingschwank aus Wien," Chopin's B major nocturne, C sharp minor waltz, and A flat polonaise, his own "Petite Serenade"; Rubinstein's G minor barcarolle, and the Schubert-Tausig "Marche Militaire." It was in his thoughtful reading of the Beethoven sonata that the pianist made a better impression than heretofore. His Chopin playing delighted the ladies, and there was something to admire in his mellow treatment of the middle passage of the march. But when all is said, not much can be added to what has already been written about this young gentleman's playing. It is elegant, refined, pleasing in tone, and much too deliberate and openly analytic in style.

Mme. Melba had been announced to sing Marguerite in "Faust" at the opera matinée, but the audience found upon the outer portals of the temple the funereal placards proclaiming that, owing to the indisposition," &c., Miss Suzanne Adams would sing the part. That such would be the case was expected by those who had noticed the distinguished soprano's lassitude in the performance of the previous night. And, furthermore, such an undertaking as singing on Friday afternoon and Saturday afternoon was something new and hazardous for a soprano, the fact that Miss Adams was to be heard instead of the Australian cantatrice apparently was not discouraging to the lovers of "Faust." The house was packed, every seat being taken, and only a few of the smaller boxes remained unoccupied.

The performance did not differ in any of its essential features from others in which the same singers have been associated. Miss Adams's Marguerite is quite familiar to this public. So far as the mere proclamation of the melodies goes, it is altogether lovely, for Miss Adams has a voice of beautiful quality, and her delivery is smooth and graceful. But if one looks for character in her work, for the expression of an individuality, or the conveyances of a dramatic purpose, he must meet with disappointment. Apparently this young woman, whose throat nature has so generously equipped, sees nothing and feels nothing in her music except the notes.

Mr. Jean de Reszke sang for the third time in the week, thereby demonstrating pretty thoroughly that he was in splendid physical condition. His voice yesterday showed no evidences of the work of the two previous performances. It was fresh, vibrant, and powerful, and he used it with his unfailing art. If any one could have moved a passionless Marguerite, such a Faust should have done. But while the heroine of the opera was seemingly unmoved, some hundreds of other women in front of the footlights throbbed with emotion, and men, too, did not refrain from enthusiastic expressions of approval. The other members of the cast were the same as the last performance, and the comments made on their work at the time might be repeated now without variation. For the sake of the record let it be noted that Édouard de Reszke was Mephistopheles, Mr. Scott Valentine, Miss Bridewell Siebel, Miss Bauermeister Martha, and Mr. Dufriche Wagner. Mr. Mancinelli conducted.

There was another change of cast last night, when Mr. Van Dyck was indisposed and Mr. Dippel assumed his rôle, the titular one in "Tannhäuser." The audience was the largest that has been present at any Saturday evening performance so far, and the performance was one of genuine merit. Miss Ternina repeated her lovely and winning impersonation of Elizabeth, the saintly niece of the Landgrave. Mr. Dippel sang Tannhäuser earnestly and with good effect. Mr. Blass was admirable vocally as the Landgrave. He sang with excellent voice and in a praiseworthy style. It is a pity that he has not more assurance, but he is a young singer and will perhaps gain in authority. Mr. Bertram repeated his familiar performance of Wolfram. Mr. Damrosch conducted.

KATE DAVIS DEAD.

Actress Succumbs in Washington After Thirteen Months' Illness.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Kate Davis, an actress, died last night at the Providence Hospital, where she had been ill for more than a year, and part of that time under the care of the Actors' Fund. In the first week of December, 1899, Miss Davis came to Washington with the "Chinese Romance," of which Chu Fong was manager. One night during the week Miss Davis went to her room in the Hotel Regent to lie down for a few minutes before going to the theatre. Just as the performance was about to begin it was found that Miss Davis had not arrived, and word was sent to the hotel. All efforts to awaken her failed, and the door was broken in. Miss Davis was found lying on the floor suffering from paralysis. She was taken to the hospital.

At the end of the week, the venture having been a failure, Chu Fong disappeared and left the company stranded without a cent. Miss Davis was left in the hospital. Some months after the clerk of the Regent brought the matter to the attention of Tim Cronin, an actor, who interested himself in the case and got the Actors' Fund to take care of Miss Davis. She had been in their care ever since.

Miss Davis was about fifty years old and was formerly well known as an actress. She had one of the leading parts in the company with which she made her last appearance.

THE CHICAGO GAS WAR.

Hyde Park Citizens Will Get Fuel Gas at 72 Cents.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12—Under a decision rendered by Judge Dunne to-day, the People's Gas Light and Coke Company must continue to furnish to residents of Hyde Park manufactured gas for fuel at 72 cents a thousand feet until the courts pass upon the case finally. The Court failed to hold the officials of the company guilty of contempt, as it was shown that they acted upon a statement which they did not construe to mean that, during the time the matter remains by stipulation in statu quo, the gas company cannot put in natural gas meters.

The matter came up on a rule to show cause why the officers of the gas company should not be held in contempt for interfering with the gas meter in the house of Frederick C. Hale. The company agreed to restore the meter in the Hale house. Attorney Darrow withdrew his application for a contempt punishment, but declares that any attempt to change the present condition of affairs will be resisted.

Old Colonial Tombs Broken Open.

Special to The New York Times.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 12.—While at work at old William and Mary College, at Williamsburg, formerly the capital of this State, workmen accidentally broke into some tombs more than a century old under the chapel. One of the tombs contained a skeleton, but in the others only dust was found. Four famous men of Colonial times were buried under the chapel. They were Norborne Berkeley, Peyton Randolph, Bishop Madison, and George Wythe.

TO TALK ACROSS THE SEA

Dr. Pupin Has Invented a Plan for Ocean Telephony.

His Method Also Permits of Land Talking for Any Distance—He Got $200,000 Outright.

The Electrical Review, published yesterday, announces the purchase by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company of the patents of Dr. M. I. Pupin of Columbia College, which, it states, cover ocean telephony and enable telephone messages to be sent over any length of land lines. It further states that the sum of $200,000 has been paid to Dr. Pupin for this invention, with an annual salary to him during the life of the patents of $7,500.

The invention, for which two patents were issued in June, 1900, is characterized as one of the most brilliant and exceptional inventions of Dr. Pupin. It was thought necessary in order to talk a given distance, say 500 miles, in underground cables, to employ large copper wires thickly covered with insulating material. The expense of such wires and material has been sufficient to prevent the construction of long underground circuits. Dr. Pupin's invention is declared to furnish a method whereby conductors of relatively small diameter covered with insulating material of moderate thickness may be used in place of the large and expensive conductors formerly thought to be necessary.

The theory upon which the invention is based is difficult to express in non-technical language, but it may be said to be a method of "fighting the devil with fire." One of the difficulties with which telephonists most contend is what they call "self-induction"; another difficulty is that which they call "static retardation"; a third difficulty is what is known as "resistance."

Dr. Pupin has placed these various difficulties in such a settled relation that they have expended their malign influence upon each other and have left the telephone current free to proceed upon its way unmolested. In other words, he has "set a rogue to catch a thief," and these disturbers expending their evil strength on themselves, neutralize their destructive qualities.

The Electrical Review states: "Experimenting with artificial conductors, Dr. Pupin discovered that it was possible to telephone over vastly greater lengths of cable than had ever been possible before, and is able to make any desired length of telephone circuit easily possible. He has shown a design for inductance coils to be introduced at appropriate intervals in a transatlantic cable which would allow telephonic conversation to be held across the Atlantic Ocean. It is believed by those who have investigated the subject fully that the improvement which his inventions contemplate will enable telephony over land lines of any length that are in use to-day, and solves the difficult and attractive problem of ocean telephony."

TO DISCUSS DIVORCE LAWS.

Bishop Doane Will Read a Paper Before Lawyers at Their Albany Meeting.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 12.—The bill now before the Legislature for the abandonment of the referee system in divorce cases and the consideration of such cases in open court will be thoroughly discussed in advance of its consideration by the Legislature by the best legal talent in the State. The annual meeting of the New York Bar Association will be held in this city on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, and the present divorce law of the State and the necessity of its amendment is to form one of the chief topics to receive the attention of the association.

Lawyers from New York and Buffalo, where there have recently been disclosures of the disgraceful operations of divorce mills, have promised to read papers on the subject. But probably a more interesting contribution to the discussion than those which will be furnished by eminent lawyers will be the paper which Bishop Doane of Albany has promised to read. The Episcopal Church has recently taken an advanced stand on the question of divorce, and the influence of this denomination will be exerted to remedy the admitted evils of the present lax system in New York State.

At the hearing before the Judiciary Committee on the bill to abolish the referee system some interesting disclosures as to the baneful practices under this system are expected.

CANAL FIGHT WILL CONTINUE.

Struggle at Albany Promises to be as Bitter as Ever.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 12.—The State canals will receive a good deal of attention during the present session, and the fight between the canal and anti-canal forces threatens to be as bitter as ever. The ablest of the old fighters for the canals in the House, Henry W. Hatt of Buffalo, has been elected to the Senate, and probably will be the leader of the canal forces in that body. In the House this year the leadership of the anti-canal forces is thought likely to fall to Assemblyman Sanford W. Smith of Chatham. Mr. Smith, who was a former clerk in the Assembly, ran an anti-canal campaign in Columbia County last Fall. He hopes to gain ground against the canals by dragging the subject of taxation into the fight.

At the request of the Executive Committee of the State Grange Mr. Smith has introduced a tax listing bill, the purpose of which is said to be to array the anti-canal sentiment of the State behind a movement to get at personal property for the purpose of taxation. This hits the centres of population like New York and Buffalo, which are all pro-canal sections. The argument being used is that, if the canal improvement schemes are to go through, calling for appropriations of many millions, the personal property of those persons in the large cities who favor such improvements should be taxed to raise the money.

Man Lost in Sinking of a Scow.

A mudscow belonging to the National Dredging Company sank in a gale off the Sandy Hook Lightship about 8 o'clock Friday night and a Swede named Olsen was drowned. A heavy swell broke over the scow, filling her with water and causing her to sink. The tug Ivins of the Moran Towing Company's fleet had towed the scow to the lightship, and the cargo was about to be dumped when the wave swept over her. The scow did not appear again until early last night, when it arose near the lightship, lying directly in the steamship track, making it a dangerous obstruction to navigation. The scow was valued at about $3,000.

REVOLUTIONARY PAPERS FOUND

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 12.—An interesting discovery has been made by the executors of an estate in Woodbury, in looking over some old family papers. The papers go back to Revolutionary times, and among them are several valuable manuscripts.

Perhaps the most valuable paper in the lot is the manuscript order book of Gen. Clinton, which he used while in camp at Morristown, N. J., in 1779. The order book, in the General's own handwriting, covers the daily events of camp life, the daily posting of guards and sentinels, and the passwords and countersigns used by the soldiers.

In the same book is a circumstantial account of the court-martial of Benedict Arnold at New York, on complaints that he was allowing British ships more liberties in the Hudson River than American ships. The notes of the court-martial contain the full wording of the compaint, Arnold's testimony and defense, the debate of the court-martial, and the decision that Arnold should be reprimanded, which was afterward acted upon by Congress. From that date began Arnold's treachery that ended in the West Point affair.

New Oriental Line's First Arrival.

The steamship Hawaiian of the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company's fleet arrived from Philadelphia yesterday. The Hawaiian is one of the seven vessels on the line between New York, San Francisco, and Honolulu. The steamer is 435 feet long, 51 feet beam, and 33 feet depth. The gross tonnage is 6,000 and cargo capacity 8,250 tons. The steamer will load at this port for San Francisco and Honolulu. Flint, Dearborn & Co. are the New York agents of the line.

BOLD BROOKLYN THIEVES

Residence of Gustave Kehr Robbed of Valuable Diamonds.

Many Other Houses Have Been Entered —Young Woman Aids in a Capture.

Within the past two weeks more house robberies have been reported in Brooklyn than in any like period in a long time. The burglars are not partial to any one section of the borough, but are carrying on their operations in all parts. Although the upper Williamsburg section is being looked after by many additional policemen in "plain clothes," the robberies which were so numerous there a week ago continue. Burglars are also active in East New York and Flatbush. Yesterday was a particularly busy day with the house looters, one of the robberies reported being the biggest that has been committed in the borough in some time.

The burglary in question occurred in the Midwood Park section of Flatbush, the burglars carrying off $3,000 worth of diamonds and other valuables from the residence of Gustave Kehr, on Ocean Avenue. Mr. Kehr is in business at 64 William Street, Manhattan. The robbery occurred some time in the morning. Mrs. Kehr, her two daughters, and three servants were in the house, but the thieves were not detected while at work. One of the Misses Kehr, upon going to her room, found one of the drawers of her bureau open, and became suspicious. She made a search, and discovered that her gold watch and chain were missing. Mrs. Kehr also found that her diamond earrings, brooch, and finger rings had been stolen from her bureau. Her sealskin sacque had also been taken. In all, $3,000 worth of property was stolen from the house. The thieves overlooked a considerable sum of money which was in Mrs. Kehr's bureau. The police have been unable to discover how the thieves entered the house.

A daring attempt at daylight burglary, which was frustrated by a plucky young woman, was reported yesterday. It occurred at 692 Dean Street, which is an apartment house. The first floor is occupied by Thomas Peppard and his family, including his niece, Miss Emma Peppard. All of the family were out on Friday afternoon when Miss Peppard, who had been calling on a friend, returned home. As she entered the dining room she was confronted by a strange man, who had three overcoats and a suit of clothes over his arm. Miss Peppard picked up a broom and, standing in the doorway to prevent the man's escape, screamed for help.

John Kelly, a muscular young man living on the second floor, ran down stairs, and, grasping the intruder about the neck, forced him into a chair, holding him there while Miss Peppard called a policeman. At the Grand Avenue Station the prisoner described himself as John Strinke, forty-four years old, and said that he lived on Atlantic Avenue. He was held for examination when arraigned in the Flatbush Court yesterday.

In the Lee Avenue Police Court yesterday, Edward Brundage, ten years old, of 85 Seigel Street, was charged with entering the apartments of Mrs. Rose Rudsky of 670 Broadway and stealing a marble clock worth $12. He was held for trial. The boy's father is in jail for assaulting his wife two weeks ago and breaking her leg. The woman is in St. Catharine's Hospital.

Burglars entered the apartments of J. F. Pearce, at 1,166 Fulton Street, and stole about $50 worth of valuables. The candy store of D. F. Wehmann, at 1,139 Fulton Street, was also entered by thieves, but nothing was stolen. The real estate office of R. C. Talbot, at 1,161, was entered and $75 worth of property carried off. Other robberies reported yesterday took place in the wine store of R. D. Walker, at 1,125 Fulton Street, and the cigar store of William Haslam, at 1,133 Fulton Street. The thieves got but little at these places.

Legislative Bill to Abolish the Fee System Causes Bitterness.

The bills introduced in the Legislature at Albany on Friday to make the offices of Register, County Clerk, and Sheriff of Kings County salaried instead of fee offices have stirred up a pretty row among Brooklyn Republicans. While believing that the principle of the bills is all right, Register James R. Howe, who is a Republican, thinks they are deficient in many respects and badly in need of amendment. He intends to make a fight against them in their present shape at Albany.

Bert Reiss, counsel to Register Howe, made an attack on Walter B. Atterbury, Chairman of the Kings County Republican General Committee, in connection with these bills yesterday. It is claimed that Mr. Atterbury is behind the bills, and Mr. Reiss declared that the County Chairman was moved by personal spite and jealousy.

Mr. Howe has all along favored making the county officers salaried ones, and last year had a bill introduced in the Legislature for that purpose. The bill, however, was killed. The alleged personal spite on Mr. Atterbury's part is his action in causing the present bills, opposed to certain ideas of Mr. Howe, to be introduced. If the bills become law, Mr. Atterbury, it is claimed, will get the credit of saving to the county the large fortunes which are paid to the Register, County Clerk, and Sheriff under the present fee system. Mr. Atterbury's friends declare that Mr. Howe's attitude toward the present bills is due to disappointment over his own bill, and that if there is any jealousy in the matter it is not all on one side.

Mr. Reiss, who spoke for Mr. Howe yesterday, said that the Register had written a letter to the Governor asking for a hearing on the bills, and that he would appear at the hearing to advocate certain amendments which, he said, were necessary to make the measures Constitutional and practical in effect. Mr. Reiss declared that the bills were vitally defective in a number of features, and that if enacted into law would result in holding up the city's business. In this respect he cited the fact that there is no provision in the Sheriff's bill for the transportation of pris

SENATE HONORS MEMORY OF CUSHMAN K. DAVIS

Eulogies by the Late Senator's Associates in Congress.

Speeches by Senators Nelson, Hoar, Lodge, and Others—Mr. Towne's First Speech in the Chamber.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—No legislative business of importance was transacted by the Senate to-day. The session was devoted to services held in memory of the late Senator Cushman K. Davis of Minnesota.

The long and distinguished service of the Minnesota Senator and the intimate relations he sustained to his colleagues in the Senate had endeared him to all, and when his demise came every member of the body felt that he had suffered a personal loss.

For many years Mr. Davis served as Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, and in that capacity and in the capacity of a member of the Paris Peace Commission he was intimately identified with the foreign affairs of the Government.

Immediately upon the conclusion of the routine morning business, Mr. Nelson (Rep., Minn.,) called up his resolution expressive of the regret of the Senate at the death of Senator Davis. At the same moment Mrs. Davis, accompanied by some friends, entered the executive gallery of the Senate. In addition several other friends of the late Senator occupied seats in the executive gallery during the delivery of the memorial orations.

The speakers of the occasion included Senators Morgan, (Dem., Ala.,) Clark, (Rep., Wyoming,) Lodge, (Rep., Mass.,) and Daniel, (Dem., Va.,) all of whom were associated with Mr. Davis as members of the Foreign Relations Committee. Others who pronounced eulogies upon the late Senator were his late colleague, Senator Nelson, (Minn.,) and his successor, Senator Towne, and Senators Hoar, (Rep., Mass.,) Spooner, (Rep., Wis.,) McCumber, (Rep., N. D.,) and Foster, (Rep., Wash.)

Mr. Nelson, the colleague of the late Senator Davis, was the first speaker. He began by touching upon the history of the deceased Senator, saying that he died at a time when in the full maturity of his great mental vigor; at a time when he was better equipped than ever to serve his country, and at a time when his country stood in the greatest need of his services. Continuing, Senator Nelson said:

"To trace his life, the development of his vigorous mind and its wonderful resources from youth to manhood, from a great lawyer to a profound statesman and leader, is to scan a human epic, marvelous and inspiring in its progress, and grand and enduring in its results and outcome. He was equipped with a mind of the first order, eager, thirsty, and searching. He exhausted and rendered clear and lucid the most profound and intricate problems of diplomacy and statecraft. When he had spoken there was little, if anything, more to be said on the subject."

Mr. Nelson paid a tribute to the literary accomplishments of his late colleague, and closed with an apostrophe to American manhood, as represented by Mr. Davis.

SENATOR HOAR'S ADDRESS.

Mr. Hoar of Massachusetts, commenting upon the fact that so many Senators died in office, said that in the eulogies pronounced in the chamber the portraitures have been true and faithful. In a young republic, he said, the greatest place for a live man was that of a soldier in time of war and a statesman in time of peace. Mr. Davis was both. He did a man's full duty in both. Mr. Hoar commented upon the literary attainments of Mr. Davis, and said:

"There have been soldiers whose courage saved the day in great, decisive battles, when the fate of nations hung in the scale, yet whose most enduring monument was the column of smoke which rose when their death shot was fired. There have been statesmen whose silent influence decided the issue when the country was at the parting of the ways, of whose service history takes no heed. The Great Ohio Territory, now six Imperial States, was twice saved to freedom by the almost unnoticed action of a single man. With all respect for the man of letters, we are not yet quite ready to admit that the trumpeter is better than the soldier or the painter greater than the lion.

"There is no need of many words to sum up the life and character of Mr. Davis. His life was in the daylight. Minnesota knew him. His country knew him and loved him. He was a good soldier in his youth and a great Senator in his maturer manhood. What can be said more, or what can be said better, to sum up the life of an American citizen? He offered his life for his country when life was all before him, and his State and his country rewarded him with their highest honor. The great orator and philosopher of Rome declared in his youth, and repeated in his age, that death could not come prematurely to a man who had been Consul. This man surely might be accounted ready to die. He had discharged honorably life's highest duty, and his cup of honor and of glory was full.

"There are other things his country had hoped for him. She had hoped a longer and higher service, perhaps the highest service of all. But the fatal and inexorable shaft has stricken him down in the full vigor of a yet strenuous manhood. The great transactions in which he had borne so large a part still remain incomplete, and their event is still uncertain.

"There is a painting which a great Italian master left unfinished. The work was taken up and completed by a disciple. The finished picture bears this inscription: 'What Titian Left Unfinished, Palma Reverently Completed and Dedicated to God.' So may our beloved Republic find always, when one servant leaves his work unfinished another who will take it up and dedicate it to the country and to God."

Mr. Morgan, for many years associated with Mr. Davis on the Committee on Foreign Relations, followed. Mr. Morgan said that the best indications of the feeling entertained by his associates toward Mr. Davis was shown in that the simple words of recognition of him on the floor never failed to attract the attention of every Senator. Were he here to-day, he said, the Senate would feel stronger. The matters now being considered had arisen largely from the effects of measures in which Mr. Davis was interested, and for which he had earnestly worked.

Mr. Morgan said it was by earnest and consistent endeavor that Senator Davis strove to serve his country, sinking his personality in his character of Senator. It was as Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations that he found the best field for his talents in the service of the country. His accomplishments made him peculiarly fitted for the labor, and he soon took such rank that his opinions were followed by the Senate. His part in the framing of the Paris treaty was traced, and great credit for all the achievements there was given to him.

Mr. Clark, also an associate in committee work with Mr. Davis, devoted much of his address to a review of the studious life led by the late Senator, and the rare fund of knowledge which he had gleaned. The approval of bench and bar was the most fitting testimonial to his capacity as a lawyer. As to his services in connection with recent events, it was said that he was more the guide than the Chairman, for his knowledge easily made him first of that body.

MR. LODGE'S SPEECH.

Mr. Lodge of Massachusetts analyzed the character of Mr. Davis as he knew it from close personal friendship, and said the late Senator was not fully appreciated as a public man. This he accounted for by reason of the tendency to belittle great men of to-day because, without thought and trouble, they cannot be brought for judgment into proper perspective with the past, and because of the modesty which made him shrink from speaking in public except when it was a duty or a necessity. Mr. Lodge summed up as follows:

"In all that he did in shaping our policy he was helped by his knowledge and his studies, by much careful thought, and by an imagination which enabled him to project his vision into the future. But that which was his surest guide was a sentiment embodied in a profound patriotism and an intense Americanism. I do not mean that he was peculiarly American because he held certain opinions on certain public questions, or that he was more patriotic than others who differed with him radically upon those same questions. What I mean is that he had a faith in his people and their destiny which nothing could shake, and that he never had a shadow of doubt or distrust as to their ability to meet any responsibility and any question bravely, justly, and victoriously.

"He had proved his patriotism, like many other brave men, on the field of battle, and he hardly ever referred to it. But his love of country and everything connected with its history was with him a passion. His thoughts were always upon the great questions now before the United States, and in his last hours his country and her fortunes were uppermost in his mind as the shadows closed about him. He was not a man who cried his own virtues and proclaimed his own deeds in the market place, but he did his work—great work, as the time demanded—strongly and well. He will find his place and his reward in the pages of history when the story of these momentous years is told. That monument is for other hands than ours to build. We can only bear imperfect witness to what he was to us who knew him, and then leave his memory to

> The silent melody of thought that sings
> A ceaseless requiem to the sainted dead.

Mr. Daniel paid a high tribute to the legal attainments of Senator Davis, saying that whether in the lower courts or in an international tribunal he would have been the peer of any antagonist against whom he might have been pitted. The addresses of Senator Davis upon international law, delivered in his own State, were denominated the best epitome of that subject in existence. Turning to the eloquence of his late colleague, Mr. Daniel read many passages from the Gettysburg address of three years ago, and characterized it as noble as the men in whose memory it was delivered.

Mr. Spooner said of Mr. Davis that while many men had greater knowledge of "case law," few men had reached such a thorough understanding of the science of the law. In any bar and before any tribunal he would have been pre-eminent. Many of the best speeches the Senator had made had been in the executive sessions of the Senate, Mr. Spooner said, and many of them would have added to the prestige of the Senate. Telling of a visit paid by himself to Mr. Davis when on his deathbed, Mr. Spooner said that the last words of the late Senator uttered to him were, when discussing the Senate: "It's a great body, a great body. Good-bye."

SENATOR TOWNE'S TRIBUTE.

To Mr. Towne, who by appointment fills the seat in the Senate occupied by Mr. Davis, was assigned the duty of closing the services. His address was the first made by Mr. Towne in the Senate, and it had been prepared with care. Mr. Towne was unstinted in his praise of his predecessor, of whom he said that, while his virtues were known and appreciated in Minnesota, he had hardly reached the full recognition due him when he died. Mr. Towne said, in part:

"Death found Cushman K. Davis at the zenith of his powers and at the summit of his opportunities. He stood at the head of the committee which at the present critical juncture in our history is the most prominent committee of the highest governmental body in the world. If the policy on which his party has entered is to be pursued the unexpired portion of his current term, comprising the next four years, must be all-important in the shaping and adjustment of that policy as related to numerous and complicated international interests.

"This was a situation calculated to appeal to his highest ambition, to stimulate his greatest potencies, to spread before his mental vision the most satisfying prospect of worthy and enduring fame. Yet here, on the threshold of the consummation of his career, at the very entrance to that fair field for whose delights and glories all his past seemed to have been a designed preparation, inscrutable fate had ordained that he should pause. No one realized the tragic pathos of the catastrophe more fully than he did; yet he bore the sorrow of it with a moral heroism equal to the physical courage which he opposed to the stoutest assaults of pain. He might wince, but he would not cry out; he could express regret, but he did not complain."

Mr. Towne also referred to Senator Davis's religious convictions, saying: "As a young man, he had for a time yielded to the influence of that irreligious skepticism which was often the too hasty refuge of minds strongly impressed by the wonderful development of the physical sciences shortly after the middle of the nineteenth century. But as he grew older and his reading broadened, and his habits of introspection strengthened, the thought that all the preparation of the centuries is purposeless and that the end of innumerable universes is mere nothingness gave no comfort to his soul and found no justification in his reason. Familiar with the ancient philosophies and with the general principles of recent science, he found in both of them that which, while it yielded no exclusive basis for a particular creed, yet gave ample support to the sweet assurance of the Christian religion respecting the future life."

He quoted Senator Davis as saying, not long before his death: "I know human history, and I know that in the first century something happened that destroyed the old world and gave birth to the new. The resurrection of Jesus would account for that change, and I do not know of any other adequate solution that has ever been proposed."

At the conclusion of Mr. Towne's remarks, he moved the adoption of the resolutions proposed by his colleague, Senator Nelson, which, being carried, the Senate, at 3:45 P. M., adjourned.

POSTAL COMMISSION REPORT.

Cost of Railroad Transportation Not Excessive—Against Extension of Pneumatic Tube Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The joint Postal Commission of the House and Senate, which has been conducting an investigation into the question of charges of railway mail transportation, the extension of the pneumatic tube service, second-class mail matter, and other questions affecting mail facilities and expenditures for two years and a half, held its final session to-day and will present its report to Congress on Monday. The commission, in the course of its investigation, has heard testimony all over the country, and Mr. Loud of California even went to Europe in search of information.

The conclusions of the commission will not be unanimous, and there will be several dissenting opinions upon various points. Regarding the main question, that of the cost of railroad mail transportation, the conclusion of the commission is that under the present system the charge is not excessive. This conclusion is concurred in by all the members of the commission save Representative Moody of Massachusetts and Representative Catchings of Mississippi.

The latter believe and will so state in a separate report that certain economies could be effected upon the roads running through the regions of dense population, and they will recommend that a committee of three, to consist of an official of the Post Office Department, Prof. Adams, who acted as the commission's expert, and a representative of the railroads, be appointed to carry out the suggestions they recommend. They estimate that the enforcement of their suggestions would save the Government $3,000,000 annually.

The committee is unanimous, it is understood, in the opinion that an extension of the pneumatic tube service is impracticable and inadvisable. Upon the question of second-class mail matter, although the commission concur in the opinion that the present classification is inequitable, no specific recommendation is made, as it is stated that Congress already is thoroughly familiar with the issue involved.

Regarding the matter of special railroad facilities, the commission, with the exception of Senator Martin of Virginia and Representative Catchings, is of the opinion that such expenditure is not justified.

Post Office Bill Nearly Ready.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The House Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads has completed the routine portions of the Post Office Appropriation bill, leaving the disputed questions still open, viz., Pneumatic tubes, special mail facilities, and rural free delivery. The routine portions of the bill are practically duplications of the bill for the current year. The three matters still open will be decided early next week and the bill is expected to be ready for the House by Wednsday or Thursday at the latest.

Minor Bills Passed in the House.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The House to-day passed a number of minor bills, among them the following: To authorize the Indians on the Grand Portage Indian Reservation to cut and dispose of timber on their several allotments; to authorize the Arizona Water Company to construct a power plant on the Pima Indian Reservation; for the relief of E. E. Hayden, a retired Ensign of the United States Navy; for the establishment of a beacon light on Hambroke Bar, Choptank River, Maryland, and to authorize the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River at Cape Girardeau, Missouri.

Fourth-Class Postmasters.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The following fourth-class Postmasters were appointed to-day:

Massachusetts—Bryantville, Channing Y. Howard; North Hadley, Thomas Gerry.

New York—Middle Spirite, George Van Allen; Tribes Hill, Charles F. Miller.

Pennsylvania—Brandt, Horace O. Peck; Gribsonia, J. M. Steese; Paxtang, John H. Snyder.

RIVER AND HARBOR DEBATE.

Mr. Catchings Makes His Last Speech in the House for Mississippi River Improvements.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—After an hour spent in miscellaneous routine business, during the course of which several bills of minor importance were passed, the House devoted to-day to a continuation of the debate upon the River and Harbor Appropriation bill, which was interrupted yesterday by private bill day. The main feature was an elaborate speech by Mr. Catchings (Dem., Miss.) in defense of the improvement of the lower Mississippi River.

Mr. Catchings retires from the House March 4 after fourteen years' of service, during several of which he was Chairman of the River and Harbor Committee, and during all of which he has been the special champion of the improvement of the navigation of the Mississippi. His speech to-day was in the nature of a valedictory. It received marked attention, and at its conclusion Mr. Catchings was given an impressive personal ovation. The other speeches to-day were principally by members who had been disappointed in not having special projects provided for in the bill.

The speech of Mr. Catchings was a reply to the attack made on Thursday by Mr. Hepburn (Rep., Iowa) upon the Mississippi River improvements. The Mississippi member said he had indulged in the hope that before he retired from Congress Mr. Hepburn would have abandoned his antagonism to appropriations for the Mississippi River. "But after listening to his speech on Thursday," said Mr. Catchings, "I find that hope consigned to the limbo where lie the wreckage of the other disappointments of my life." Proceeding, Mr. Catchings denied that the commerce of the Mississippi was disappearing. Its character had vastly changed since the old days, but its volume was as large as ever.

Before closing, Mr. Catchings took up a newspaper criticism of his efforts in behalf of the river and harbor improvements that had been written by Patrick Henry, who is to succeed him in Congress, and replied to it at length. He would not have noticed the attack, he said, had Mr. Hepburn not made use of it on Thursday in concluding. Mr. Catchings said that this probably would be the last time he would address the House in behalf of the improvement of the Lower Mississippi, which he had so much at heart. He was tumultuously applauded when he took his seat.

Mr. Mann (Rep., Ill.,) followed with some criticism of the bill on the ground that it did not do justice to the great city of Chicago, where much of the commerce of the great lakes originated.

Mr. Boreing (Rep., Ky.,) made an earnest plea for an appropriation for the Upper Cumberland River, which, notwithstanding it had been surveyed and declared navigable, had been ignored by the committee in making up its bill.

Mr. Small (Dem., N. C.,) made an argument in behalf of the construction of the proposed dismal swamp canal, pointing out the benefits to commerce and navigation to be derived from such an inland waterway.

Mr. Thomas (Rep., Iowa,) criticised the committee for what he called its inconsistent policy in making appropriations, asserting that the committee favored some localities and neglected others.

After some further remarks by Mr. Rucker (Dem., Mo.,) and Mr. Bartholdt (Rep., Mo.,) in favor of continuing the improvement of the Missouri River, the committee rose. By unanimous consent general debate upon the bill was ordered closed at 2 o'clock on Monday.

CUBAN PLANTERS' APPEAL.

Many Petitions for a Modification of United States Duties on Sugar and Tobacco.

HAVANA, Jan. 12.—The agricultural interests in Cuba are uniting in an effort to have the United States Government make a modification of the duties on sugar and tobacco. Nothing since the occupation of the Island by the United States has awakened the moneyed interests of Cuba to such an extent as has this movement. Meetings have been held in every province, and Governor General Wood is besieged with petitions asking that something be done to at least put Cuba upon an equal footing with other nations with which the United States is making reciprocity treaties covering sugar and tobacco.

Señor Lacoste, Secretary of Agriculture and President of the Planters' Association, has written a letter to the Governor General calling attention to the promises made to the association by the Secretary of War of a modification of the duties, and to the fact that, in spite of this, reciprocity treaties have been entered into with other producing nations, which place Cuba at a disadvantage. Cuba, Señor Lacoste says, bought $38,000,000 worth from the United States in 1894. During the war the amount decreased, but reached $35,000,000 in 1899-1900. Cuba, he asserts, buys from the United States fifteen times as much as Santo Domingo, sixteen times as much as Nicaragua, and thirty times as much as San Salvador.

Señor Lacoste claims that, although all nations are put upon an equal footing, the United States has been benefited, owing to the proximity of Cuba, and to the fact that in potatoes, flour, and cotton goods—to the practical exclusion of all other countries—Cuba has opened her markets to American products, but has received nothing in return. He urges the abolition of the export duty on tobacco as an unjust tax, which prohibits the exportation of the lower grades of tobacco.

YELLOW FEVER MOSQUITOES.

Suppression of the Disease Likely to Follow Present Experiments in Cuba.

Special Correspondence NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Jan. 0.—In these days of new, interesting, and at times startling discoveries it is not surprising that but small attention has been paid by the public at large to the revival of the investigations and experiments first begun in 1881 by Dr. Charles Finlay of Havana regarding the transmission of yellow fever by mosquitoes. Verily, has this creature been anathematized times without number both for his song and bite, and were he not a callous creature he would retire to the stagnant pool where he was born and whence he came; but, unblushingly, viciously, and almost with malice aforethought, he seeks whom he may to infect with the germs of yellow fever, malaria, and perhaps other diseases.

The Surgeon General of the Army, possibly actuated by the brilliant investigation of Italian experts on the Campagna with the malarial parasite, appointed a board last July, consisting of men well known in the world of scientific medicine, heading the list with Major Walter Reed, Surgeon, United States Army, who for years conducted experiments in the laboratory of the Army Medical Museum in Washington, following with Drs. Carroll, Agramonte, and Lasear, Acting Assistant Surgeons, United States Army, to conduct an extended series of experiments covering various methods for the transmission of this disease. It is whispered that this board has discovered the much-disputed germ of yellow fever, and, if so, it is not unlikely that at the next session of the Pan-American Medical Congress they will so announce.

It is possibly too early to affirm that the results of the board's study and investigation are proof positive, but, at any rate, another mile post has been passed upon the high road so carefully followed by the medical profession the world over, though not until now has so much attention been paid to the spread of yellow fever, which is ever erratic.

The mosquito selected for the experiments, and the one with which results have been obtained, is the Culex fasciatus. This insect is striped upon the body and legs, and differs from the black mosquito in that it seems to prefer the dark and dislikes the wind, and is a comparatively quiet creature, while the black variety is restless, never remaining long in one place.

It has been demonstrated that after the mosquito bites a yellow fever patient the poison it extracts must remain in its stomach from eight to twelve days to permit the micro-organism to incubate. At the end of this time, should the insect sting a susceptible non-immune individual, the probability would be a case of well-marked yellow fever. Inasmuch as it takes about ten days for the germ to incubate in the stomach, and bearing in mind the habits of the Culex fasciatus, (striped variety,) it is readily understood why persons contract the fever where they sleep, which is characteristic.

Observation of the thousands of non-immune Americans who have resided here since Jan. 1, 1899, leads to the conclusion that yellow fever is not contagious in the sense of other diseases, such as smallpox, &c., if it can be classed among the infectious or contagious diseases at all. At Las Animas Hospital, where many patients with the fever have entered and left, either to resume their vocations in life or else sorrowfully borne to their last resting place in the beautiful Cristobal Colon Cemetery, the nurses have nearly all been non-immunes, and yet not a case has arisen within the confines of the grounds. In fact, the hospital is claimed by the nurses to be a health resort, and only to-day the writer heard two of them lament because they must return to the States, there being practically no fever at this time.

It must be borne in mind that, though bitten by an infected mosquito, it is by no means certain a case of fever would follow, for the particular individual bitten might be able to resist the further multiplication of the germ; this is the case in typhoid fever, where many having drunk of infected water or milk, only a few may contract the disease. Yet it has been held that if foreigners from northern countries staid long enough in Havana they would surely contract yellow fever.

There is little doubt that the studies now in progress will develop methods for the partial or complete suppression of yellow fever, and this, it is believed, can be done by the growing of fish and tadpoles in swamps, planting eucalyptus around ponds and marshes and along the streams, covering pools with kerosene to prevent the larvae coming to the surface and developing, putting aniline dyes of certain kinds in the water, these dyes not being poisonous to cattle or man, carefully isolating each new case by putting mosquito bars at the windows and doors so that the insect cannot get at the patient, and destroying those already in the room.

MEDICAL CONGRESS IN CUBA.

It Will Open in Havana Feb. 4 and 1,500 Physicians Are Expected.

Active preparations are making for the third Pan-American Medical Congress to be held in Havana, Cuba, Feb. 4 to 6. Governor General Wood will give a reception to the delegates, probably on the day before the opening of the congress, and he has thrown open to those who cannot afford to stay at the hotels the furnished quarters built for the officials of the Military Hospital.

There will be a formal opening of the congress by a general session at the Tacon Theatre on the evening of Feb. 4, and the representatives of the different countries will be welcomed by the officers of the congress and by the civil authorities. After the scientific sessions on the second day the evening will be given over to the entertainment of the delegates and their families by the City Council of Havana, and the evening of the third day will be devoted to a general scientific meeting.

It is expected that there will be 1,500 delegates present, of whom 500 will be Cuban physicians, 300 or 400 Americans, 200 Mexicans, and others from Argentine, Uruguay, Brazil, Venezuela, Colombia, Peru, Chile, and other Central and South American countries.

Delegates who intend to go to Havana are asked to send their names to the Secretary of the United States section, Dr. Ramon Guiteras, 75 West Fifty-fifth Street, New York.

CHARLESTON NAVAL STATION.

Arrangement for the Purchase of a Site —Transfer from Port Royal Approved.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Secretary Long concurs in the recommendation of the Naval Board, submitted yesterday, for the transfer of the South Atlantic Naval Station from Port Royal to Charleston, S. C., and arrangements will now proceed for the purchase of the site at Charleston and the carrying out of the transfer. Already there is available $227,000 for the general purposes of the station, and of this not to exceed $100,000 can be used in the purchase of the site.

The first formal step will be to direct Admiral Endicott, Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, to arrange for the site in accordance with the recommendations.

There is a question whether the purchase price of the site selected can be brought within the $100,000. In case the land cannot be bought at a reasonable figure, the Government will resort to condemnation proceedings. The purpose is to acquire also certain marsh land, as well as a marsh frontage, on the opposite side of the Cooper River, which will give the Government the advantage of all the approaches. This marsh land is owned by the State, and probably will be given free of cost to the Government.

As to the establishment of the station itself, there will be no steps taken until Admiral Endicott has made arrangements for securing the site. Secretary Long will send all of the papers to Congress, although the action above indicated already is provided for and does not need additional authority of Congress.

Wants No More Holland Boats Now.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Secretary Long has written to Chairman Foss of the House Committee on Naval Affairs as to boats of the Holland type. He says, in part: "The question with the department is whether the construction of an additional number should be authorized until those now under construction are finished and their usefulness further assured. The department does not regard further expenditure in this direction essential at this time."

For New Governors Island Buildings.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Secretary Root has submitted to Congress an estimate for an appropriation aggregating $535,000 for buildings at Governors Island, New York Harbor, pursuant to a scheme for the enlargement of the post so as to accommodate a full battalion of troops.

Commander Beehler Well Again.

BERLIN, Jan. 12.—Commander Beehler, the United States Naval Attaché, has entirely recovered from his recent illness.

AT THE NATION'S CAPITAL

Further Steps in the Re-election of President McKinley.

LOW OPINIONS OF THE MILITIA

George Washington's Idea—Seattle's Effort to Get Battleship Contract —Amateur Legislators.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—President McKinley's election is popularly understood to have been effected on Nov. 6, 1900, but until some formalities prescribed by law have been observed, in 1901, his re-election will not have been fully accomplished. The Washington newspapers have been publishing elaborate and solid announcements, required by law, setting forth the result at the polls in the different States, and under the law of 1887, and the amendments thereto adopted in 1888, there will be a step further along toward the White House when the Electoral Colleges meet in all the States to cast their votes as instructed by the voters in November last.

These Electors will observe the tradition and vote for McKinley and Roosevelt, but the election will not then have been completed in full compliance with the law. It is necessary to have the certifications made to the Secretary of State of the United States, and he communicates the certifications to the two houses of Congress. The Electors will do their voting next Monday, and on the second Wednesday in February, the 13th, there will be the final ceremony preceding the inauguration. On that day the two houses will meet in the House of Representatives and formally compare their certificates to ascertain precisely what the result of the election was.

It is a very carefully cut-and-dried performance, provision even being made in the law for the seats that are to be provided and occupied, but when the count is made all that the presiding officer, who is the President of the Senate, has to do is to "announce the state of the vote." Once begun, the work of counting the vote must go on until it is finished, except to take a recess, but if the count is not completed before the fifth calendar day after the first meeting of the two houses, no further recess shall be taken by either house until it has got rid of the job imposed upon it. The House passed a day or two ago a resolution, in which the concurrence of the Senate was necessary, to pay the messengers who bring the Electoral vote 25 cents a mile for their traveling expenses. The total amount needed was about $12,000, and it was criticised as a large amount by a member until he learned that the mileage allowance is all the compensation that the messenger gets. As a matter of fact, the privilege would be sought for by many persons who would be glad of the chance to visit the capital officially at their own expense.

When Representative Loudenslager of New Jersey recently introduced a bill to make the term of the President six years and to increase the compensation of the Vice President and members of the Cabinet, the suggestion that the Presidential term be lengthened and the President prohibited from taking a second term was commented upon by many persons as a somewhat novel proposition. These commentators were not aware that it is a proposition almost as old as the Constitution. It was suggested in the Constitutional Convention that a President should be prohibited from re-election, and a seven-year term with this restriction was twice adopted. There was a proposition before the First Congress to make the term six years, and since that session there has been scarcely one in which one or more similar propositions have not been brought forward in one form or another.

President Jackson, in each of his eight annual messages, recommended to Congress that it limit the eligibility of the President to one term of six years. Senator Clay not only advocated a single term of six years, but was nominated on a platform in which advocacy of a single term was a plank. He said in a speech that the evil of permitting a second term was that the incumbent was apt to devote his time and energies during a first term to preparing the way for a second term. Congressional effort took the form of a proposed amendment to the Constitution in 1826, when a Representative from Pennsylvania led the way. Senator Hillhouse, in 1808, had suggested a term of one year, and other suggestions fixing the term at five and eight years have been offered in one branch of Congress or the other. Such eminent statesmen as John Quincy Adams and Gen. William Henry Harrison advocated it in public utterances, yet none of the advocates seems to have made an impression deep enough to overturn the decision, which was a compromise, of the Constitutional Convention that fixed the term at four years and neglected to prohibit a re-election. The propositions now before Congress will not be touched at this session. The record for 100 years does not inspire the hope that it will be speedily made the law of the land.

Washington has been called as a witness by the House Committee on Military Affairs to point out the necessity for maintaining a standing army, and incidentally to express his profound lack of trust in or reliance upon the militia. Gen. Washington wrote fully on the subject to the President of Congress in the Fall of 1776, and his words sound very severe. Good officers, with sufficient pay "to enable them to live like and support the character of gentlemen," were referred to as important. "To place any dependence upon militia," he wrote, "is assuredly resting upon a broken staff. Having no military skill, lacking confidence in the face of trained troops, their unconquerable desire is to return to their homes." This, he wrote, "not only produces shameful and scandalous desertions among themselves, but infuses the like spirit in others. * * * To bring men to a proper degree of subordination is not the work of a day, a month, or even a year," and he complained that the little discipline he had been able to infuse into the army under his immediate command was in a great measure done away with by the mixture of trained and raw troops. "Certain I am that it would be cheaper to keep fifty or a hundred thousand troops in constant pay than to depend upon half the number and supply the other half occasionally by militia." Then he declared that "the jealousy of a standing army and the evils to be apprehended from one are remote, and in my judgment, situated and circumstanced as we are, not at all to be dreaded; but the consequence of wanting one, according to my ideas formed from the present view of things, is certain and inevitable ruin."

Later, in 1780, he wrote to the President of Congress from Passaic Falls: "Nothing can be more obvious than that a sound military establishment and the interests of economy are the same." He expressed his strong distrust of reliance upon what he called "the State system," as one that would be productive of great confusion and distrust. There are other and later opinions of importance concerning the necessity of an improved establishment. Gen. Kautz being quoted as saying, after the war of the rebellion: "The Nation is as destitute of military system as it was when that war began. * * * I shall expect to see gallant men marched like sheep to the slaughter, the victims of military ignorance and every other possible profession than the military, contending for martial honor at the expense of National life and treasure."

Public spirit, as displayed by the City of Seattle in the effort to secure for that city the opportunity to show what it can do toward extending the navy, was demonstrated in the manner in which it went about securing a contract for the Moran Company to construct one of the sheathed battleships. Mr. Moran has built a couple of torpedo boats, and he has constructed a great fleet of commercial vessels for the Yukon trade, but the Navy Department seems not to have been impressed with the belief that he could command the facilities for building a first-class battleship.

It was the good fortune of Seattle to have as a visitor in Washington E. O. Graves, formerly Chief of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and before that Assistant Treasurer of the United States. Familiarity with methods of legislation and business in the departments qualified him to present to Secretary Long in the most convincing way the entire ability of the Moran Company to construct a battleship. But the bid the Morans had made was too high, and they could not cut it down. Having secured the concession of 4 per cent. advantage given by law to builders on the Pacific Coast, and Seattle having raised by popular subscription the $100,000 needed to repay the Morans for undertaking to accept the contract, the people of Seattle were gratified to be informed that the negotiations conducted by Mr. Graves had proved entirely successful. Some impatience was manifested by the representatives of Seattle in finding that an inadequate opinion of the ability and energy of their city prevailed among those who had the giving of this contract. The Morans employ 1,400 persons in their works, and they insist that they are quite as well prepared to undertake the largest ships as was the Union Iron Works when that company undertook to construct the Oregon, and turned out one of the best-built vessels in the new navy.

The ambition of Western promoters of legislation is not always matched by their judgment. Some amateurs from Arizona, who are intent upon the perhaps commendable effort to bond the County of Maricopa in order to raise money to procure water storage, have deliberately gone about their task by preparing a bill that it will take years to get through. They have begun by deferring the passage of the bill by making it necessary to secure the approval of several departments to its provisions before the Congress shall act upon it. There must be no delay, yet the bill asks that the Secretary of War shall detail an engineer officer to go to Arizona and work under the direction of the local authorities, who are to construct the works. This is out of the question, for the War Department would not consent to such a detail of one of its officers.

Another impracticable feature of the measure is the incorporation in it of a lot of by-laws, the acceptance of which by Congress would make it impossible for the company to change any of its rules without another act of Congress. Delegate Wilson will ask the Congress to pass the bill, with its guarantee by the Government of the interest. That, presumably, assumes the payment of the interest in gold, and suggests an inconsistency with the last vote of Arizona, which was for free silver. The last bill passed for that section attracted much attention in Congress, because the demand was then made that it provide for payment of the principal and interest of the bonds in gold, for the reason that if this precaution were not taken it would not be possible to market the bonds in the East, where it was expected to raise the money. The merit of the measure asked for by Arizona is in the proposition to undertake an irrigation work on its own account.

Charleston is meeting with some difficulties in getting the Congress to help it out with its programme for the Inter-State and West Indian Exposition. The Senate very promptly passed a bill at the beginning of the session, at the request of Senator Tillman, to authorize the Government to make an adequate exhibition at Charleston. It has gone to the House, but the opposition of the Speaker to taking it up in that body promises seriously to interfere with the plans of the exposition company. The friends of the bill will be perfectly content to accept the judgment of the House if the measure can be subjected to the test of a vote, and they argue that the same opportunity should be accorded to the Charleston enterprise that was extended to St. Louis and Buffalo. While time passes rapidly with the Congress and the opportunity to get the bill through grows smaller with each day of delay, the persuasiveness of the Charlestonians is not without its effect even upon the somewhat rigid and economical Speaker, and there is a feeling of confidence that it will get to the President before March

METHODS AT WEST POINT

Superintendent Mills Before the Congressional Committee.

FIGHTS EASILY KEPT SECRET

Cadets Can Say They Received Injuries in Various Ways—Searching Questions by the Investigators.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Jan. 12.—When the Congressional Investigating Committee today resumed its probing process into hazing at the West Point Military Academy, there was an unusually large gathering of spectators in the examination room. Interest in the sessions is daily growing. The examination of the cadet witnesses has been more far-reaching so far than that made by the Military Board, and the committee is evidently bent on getting to the bottom of everything in any way connected with the charges of cruel or brutal treatment of cadets by upper class men.

The first witness called this morning was Col. A. L. Mills, Superintendent of the Academy. He said he was graduated from West Point in June, 1879. During his experience as a cadet, he said, fourth class men were required to be obedient and respectful to the upper class men, but not in the same measure as in the case of an army officer. The same demerit system which now exists was then in vogue.

"Did they have class scrapping committees then?" asked Judge Smith.

"They did not."

"Did they have fist fights to a finish, with referee, seconds, and time keepers?"

"Not that I can recall. I think there were only three fights during my academic term. These were of an impromptu nature, and I think the contestants were all first-classmen."

The witness, in reply to a question, said no officer is supposed to be awake all night in order to see that the cadets do not get outside of the post reservation.

Judge Smith asked the Superintendent about the action of the authorities to suppress fighting or to punish those who took part in fights. Col. Mills said that, despite the vigilance of the academic authorities, fights were kept solely within the knowledge of the cadets. He said that only two fights had come to his knowledge, and these were made known through the fact that two cadets had to go to the hospital.

Col. Mills told the committee that cadets who had been fighting did not usually show marks of punishment that might attract the attention of the officers.

"Well, we have had testimony here that two-thirds of the fourth class men, generally the defeated parties in fights, have had to go to the hospital for treatment," said Judge Smith.

Col. Mills then went on to explain that the enforcement of regulations was almost entirely intrusted to the ten tactical officers.

"Why are not all the officers required to report evidences of violations as well as the tactical officers?" was asked.

"That is not the policy, Sir," Col. Mills said.

"Why?"

"Well, if officers were required to do so they would be considerably handicapped in the performance of their duties."

"I don't think it would take much of their time to report evidences of the dozen fights or so that occur during a year," exclaimed Judge Smith.

The Superintendent informed the committee that up to about a year ago there was great difficulty in securing evidence from men who were hazed, as the regulations made both hazers and hazed subject to punishment. As the regulations have been revised so that it is no longer a punishable offense to be hazed, the Colonel said that the fourth-class men could now complain without incriminating themselves.

"What would you think of a scheme of administering an oath against hazing to a cadet when he gets his appointment?" asked Mr. Driggs.

"I should not think it wise. There is a difficulty in defining hazing. Chaffing and quizzing new cadets is not hazing," replied Col. Mills.

The difficulty about getting information as to the cause of black eyes or other marks which would indicate that a cadet had been fighting was illustrated by the witness, who said:

"Gentlemen, it may seem strange to you that the officers here know nothing about a fight, but I can tell you I called a cadet before me who had a black eye and asked him how he had got it. He replied that he had been sparring. I found out since that he had just been engaged in a fight. Many bruises, discolorations, and sprains have been caused by work in the gymnasium, athletic games, and horseback riding."

Mr. Driggs—I have heard it said in several parts of the country that fighting is traditional at West Point. Now, I want to ask, is it true that you West Point officers are so imbued with the traditions of fighting that you do not care to have it stopped?

"That is certainly not true," replied the witness with some feeling. The officers of the academy want to put it down. Fighting is not traditional here. I am strongly opposed to it, as you will see by the records I have to-day.

"You are known all over the country," said Mr. Driggs, "and known as a brave man and a brave soldier. Now I will ask you, is it not cowardly on the part of upper-class men to call out fourth-class men to fight against men who have better physical advantages?"

"Yes, I think it is wrong, and to a certain extent cowardly," was the reply.

In speaking of the ideas of outsiders on hazing, Col. Mills said that many thought it commendable, and former graduates of the academy looked upon it in the same light. This encouraged the young men as they advanced from the fourth class to do the same to their successors as had been done to themselves.

"May not parents," said the witness, "are sympathetic when their sons are fourth class men, but their feelings undergo a change when their sons advance to the upper classes."

"Then you think they enjoy their sons getting even?" said Mr. Wanger.

"Yes, Sir, they do, particularly the women," was the Colonel's answer, which caused a good deal of laughter among the women who were listening.

At the evening session the testimony given by Horace C. Bodz, Oscar Booz's brother, before the Military Board, was read to him and admitted. The committee then proceeded with the examination of Col. Mills. A number of questions were asked as to the demerit system at the Academy.

Judge Smith informed Col. Mills that at least two cadets of the first class had testified before the committee that they would report every particle of dust on the cap or clothing of a cadet whom they wished to get out of the Academy, while they would overlook these matters in the case of a cadet to whom they were friendly. Ex-Cadet Huetzler had testified before the committee in Philadelphia that he had been the victim of reports of unfriendly cadets. Huetzler had received fewer official reports than any of the five men on the list of those dismissed for deficiency in discipline.

Col. Mills said that Huetzler was a very careless man. He had Huetzler up before him frequently and had spoken to him of the character of the reports against him. He did not think Huetzler had been unfairly treated.

Col. Mills said that in future all cadets would be medically examined on their leaving the academy, so as to avoid the recurrence of such complex testimony as has recently been given.

Gen. Dick then asked Col. Mills to tell in his own way all that he knew of the Booz case. The Superintendent repeated the exhaustive report which he gave on the subject before the military court, with little or no variation.

At the conclusion of Col. Mills's testimony the Court adjourned until Monday morning.

DISCHARGED FROM WEST POINT.

List of Cadets Found Deficient in the Examinations.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Jan. 12.—As a result of the examinations just concluded, the following cadets, found deficient in their studies, were this afternoon discharged from the Military Academy. Their deficiencies consisted in mathematics, French, and drill regulations:

Third Class—P. H. Clark, Illinois; William H. Horton, Tennessee; Amos M. Cooke, Colorado; Benjamin R. McCroskey, California; Alexander R. Meekison, Ohio; Wiley C. Bodman, North Carolina.

Fourth Class—Tilman M. Bunch, South Carolina; M. S. Davis, South Carolina; Thomss Duncan, at large; Edward A. Finn, Minnesota; Eugene P. Fortson, Iowa; Fred A. Garges, Nevada; Arthur F. Gehle, Massachusetts; John W. A. Halsey, Virginia; Albert T. Lyman, South Dakota; Walter H. Martin, New York; Wentworth W. Pierce, North Carolina; H. C. Roberts, Maine; James A. Storer, Idaho.

Charles W. Owens of Indiana, Winn Blair of Alabama, and Frank Phippe of Washington were turned back to join the Fourth Class.

NEWS OF THE RAILROADS.

Percy R. Todd Selected as Second Vice President of the New York, New Haven and Hartford.

Percy R. Todd, at present Traffic Manager of the West Shore Railroad, was elected Second Vice President of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company at the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of that company, held yesterday in the Grand Central Station. The election of Mr. Todd completes the organization of the company, which now has five Vice Presidents, each one in charge of a separate department. This organization of the company is in accordance with the plans mapped out by President Hall over a year ago. At that time W. N. Merrill was elected First Vice President in charge of operation and W. E. Barnett was made Third Vice President in charge of corporate affairs. The office of Second Vice President was left open until a suitable man could be found. Mr. Todd, who has been finally selected to fill this place, will have general charge of the traffic department, including both freight and passenger traffic, and will perform the duties which were formerly exercised by C. S. Mellen, who is now President of the Northern Pacific Railway.

Mr. Todd was born in Toronto, Ontario, in 1859. He was educated in the Collegiate Institute at Ottawa and first entered railroad service as a clerk and telegraph operator in the general office of the St. Lawrence and Ottawa Railway, which is now a part of the Canadian Pacific system. In 1879 he became Canadian Agent of the Ogdensburg and Lake Champlain. From 1882 to 1885 he was General Traveling Agent of the National Dispatch Line of Chicago. During 1885 he acted as Commercial Agent of the New York, West Shore and Buffalo Railroad, at Albany. He was then for a few months chief clerk in the general freight department of the same road, and in 1886 he accepted the position of General Freight and Passenger Agent of the Canada Atlantic Railroad, at Ottawa. This office he held until 1889, when he was appointed General Freight Agent of the West Shore Railroad. In 1892 he was promoted to the position of General Traffic Manager of the same road and as such he continued to date.

Mr. Todd will enter on his new duties on Feb. 1 next.

REDUCED RATES ON STEEL.

Andrew Carnegie Tells How They Were Brought About Through His Efforts.

Andrew Carnegie has stated his side of the controversy which has been going on for the last year between the steel manufacturers of Pittsburg on the one hand and the railroads on the other. According to Mr. Carnegie, he selected Conneaut instead of Pittsburg as the location for his new tube plant because of the alleged arbitrary increase in rates. "In the first place," said Mr. Carnegie, "I am bound to say that Conneaut was not considered until the Pennsylvania Railroad, without consulting us, doubled our export rates. This led our people to take up the question: 'How can we escape from the grasp of this arbitrary railroad combination?' A study of the subject convinced every one that we could do so by taking to water."

Mr. Carnegie then stated that he had had an interview a few days ago with President Cassatt of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Speaking of this interview, Mr. Carnegie said: "He is going to reduce Pittsburg rates immediately, and assures me that his policy is to protect the manufacturers on his line. He says that he will give them lower rates later than he is about to fix, if other districts continue to do so for the same articles. President Cassatt volunteered the statement that he had told the members of his board that when the immense new works of the Scranton company at Buffalo began operations they must be prepared to give very low rates to the seaboard. He also said that low rates to the West were necessary, as Pittsburg products have to pay freight into other competing districts."

Mr. Carnegie also stated that the new reduced rates, which are to go into effect Tuesday, would be enjoyed by all shippers, small and large ones alike, and that there would be no secret rebates.

Mr. Carnegie's utterances were brought to the attention of the President of one of the largest trunk lines out of New York. "Mr. Carnegie," said he, "is one of the many gentlemen who manufacture steel who are constantly calling on the railroads for lower rates, but who do not hesitate to raise the price of materials which railroads must buy of them 50 per cent. and more above their real value. Our traffic managers have now agreed to make certain reductions, but I hear that Mr. Carnegie is not entirely satisfied with them."

In connection with Mr. Carnegie's statement it may be of interest to note the history of the controversy which is to be brought to an end on Tuesday next when the new rates are to be announced by the Trunk Line Committee. According to the statement of a traffic manager of one of the trunk lines the rates on steel were raised not long after the steel manufacturers announced a raise in the price of steel rails from about $19 to the neighborhood of $34 a ton. The steel manufacturers did not like this and asked for a reduction. They were permitted to present their objections before a railroad committee in June and again in September.

This committee decided to make no reductions, and it was understood that the position taken by all the railroads was that no reduction should be made so long as the price of rails was kept at an unduly high point. The steel manufacturers threatened that Mr. Carnegie would build a railroad of his own. Then they announced a reduction in steel rails to $26 a ton. This was satisfactory to most railroad Presidents, and as a result the Pittsburg Committee, so called, to which the question of steel rates was referred, reported in favor of certain reductions. The report was not unanimous, and it was referred back to the committee.

In December the committee again reported, this time unanimously, in favor of reductions, and the report was accepted. As some details remained to be worked out the matter was laid over until Tuesday next, when the reduced rates will be announced officially.

THE PENNSYLVANIA'S ACTION.

Board Announces New Rates on Iron and Steel.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 12.—The Pennsylvania Railroad Company to-day announced a big reduction in existing freight rates, especially on iron and steel products from Pittsburg to New York.

This matter had been under consideration for many weeks by the freight traffic managers of the various lines, and these officials reached a final conclusion on Jan. 4, but no official announcement was made until to-day, when W. H. Joyce, Freight Traffic Manager of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, said:

"On Feb. 1 a new schedule will go into effect on third and fourth class freight, which class embraces iron and steel articles. The present rates are 35 and 30 cents per 100 pounds respectively, and these will be reduced to 30 and 25 cents per hundred respectively. The rate on billets is now $2.90, and will be reduced to $2.40 from Pittsburg to New York. Pig iron is now rated at $2.80 from Pittsburg to New York, and will be reduced to $2.20.

"On or about April 1, with the opening of navigation, these rates as stated would have gone into effect. Therefore, by issuing notice that the new rate would take effect Feb. 1, we have simply anticipated the date by practically two months. In other words, shippers will be given the benefit of the reduction almost immediately, instead of waiting until April."

RAILROAD ACQUIRES STEAMSHIPS.

Canadian Pacific Secures Navigation Company of the Same Name.

VICTORIA, B. C., Jan. 12.—The Canadian Pacific Railway Company has acquired the Canadian Pacific Navigation Company.

The latter company has for many years been operating the principal steamship service between Vancouver and Victoria and British Columbia coast points. It is understood that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company intends to add to the present fleet of thirteen vessels and to largely improve the service.

Brief Railroad Items.

President Samuel R. Callaway of the New York Central has returned after a prolonged inspection trip over the main line of the road.

It was reported yesterday in Wall Street that there was no intention of advancing the dividend rate of Union Pacific common stock to 5 per cent. This statement was said to come from an official source. It was added that rumors of "deals" were without foundation. Officials of the company declined to comment on these reports.

BELLEVUE BOARD MEETING

Conditions in the Hospital and Proposed Reforms.

Commissioner Keller Gives Death Statistics—Says Other Hospitals Cannot Be Prevented from Sending Moribund Patients.

Commissioner of Charities John W. Keller, who on Friday suffered a relapse while convalescing from an attack of bronchitis, left his sick bed at the New Amsterdam Hotel yesterday afternoon and went to Bellevue to meet the special committee of five members of the Medical Board, who were appointed by that body to co-operate with him in his investigation into alleged abuses in Bellevue Hospital. There were present Dr. Alexander Lambert, Dr. A. A. Smith, Dr. William Polk, and Dr. George B. Fowler. Dr. Brannan, the other member, was ill.

The session lasted nearly four hours, and late in the afternoon Dr. Stewart, the Superinterdent of Bellevue, was called into the room and remained closeted with the others until the close. The meeting was behind closed doors throughout, and after the adjournment Mr. Keller was asked to act as spokesman by those present.

"We have been going over in a general way the conditions in the hospital, and mapping out certain reforms to be formulated by the Medical Board and to be adopted by them at a special meeting to be called," he said.

Asked if the case of Dr. Moore, recently removed from the control of the Insane Pavilion, had been taken up, Mr. Keller said it was still pending. "The situation is simply this," he said. "I suspended him and referred the case to the Medical Board for their action. They have not acted. When they have reported to me I can dismiss or retain him, as I see fit. If I had made up my mind to dismiss him I would not have referred him to the Medical Board. There were certain professional questions in the case that I, as a layman, would not assume to pass upon, especially when the responsibility for the medication in the Insane Pavilion rests upon the Medical Board. It was simply that Dr. Moore's evidence before the Coroner appeared to me to show neglect, and so I reported the case with that evidence, to the Medical Board."

Mr. Keller said that figures had been considered which showed that during the last year there had been 24,807 admissions to the hospital, of whom 1,720 had died there. One hundred and seven patients had been transferred from other hospitals who had died in Bellevue within twenty-four hours after their reception. Eliminating these, the death rate for the year was only 6.6 per cent., while including them it was 7.076 per cent. This, he said, was a very favorable showing for any hospital. He said it was impossible to stop the other hospitals from sending their poor, dying patients to Bellevue in order to lessen their own death rates.

"It is inhuman for a hospital to transfer a moribund man to Bellevue," said the Commissioner, "but it would be more inhuman for Bellevue to refuse him and send him back, because, if bringing him here endangers his life, then the journey back would endanger it still more."

Commissioner Keller said he did not believe the charges made by George Crouch, that Superintendent Blair had extorted $600 from him, were true, and he refused to discuss another charge that Mr. Blair had drawn money to send an insane woman back to Russia by way of Montreal, and she had been found a day or so afterward, wandering about Philadelphia. He had asked him for an explanation of this matter, but it had not been forthcoming yet, as the records of the case are in Albany. The matter belonged in the hands of the State Board of Lunacy, he said, as it was the State's money that had been expended.

The Commissioner also said that the photographs of insane patients taken at the Manhattan State Hospital, on Ward's Island, after they had been brought there from the Bellevue pavilion, which had been called for by the Grand Jury, could not be regarded as conclusive evidence that they had been injured at Bellevue. The pictures had not been taken as they left Bellevue, he said, and the injuries shown in the photographs might have been received on the way to Ward's Island. "It would be quite possible for an insane man to fall and hurt himself on the boat going up the river," he added.

NO COURTROOM FURNITURE.

Those Having Business with Long Island City Magistrate May Have to Stand.

More trouble is in store for the Magistrate Court in Long Island City. Not long ago the Magistrate, Clerk, and all those connected with the court were dispossessed from the old Court House in Queens, and for three days all business was transacted on the steps of the building. New quarters were finally secured, but then came more difficulties. The place hired was the Lyceum, owned by the Rev. Father John McGuire of St. Mary's Church.

When the Lyceum was rented three months ago the city had no furniture to fix up the court-room, and in order to rent the hall Father McGuire loaned desks, chairs, and benches, pending the arrival of the furniture ordered from Deputy Commissioner Joel Fowler of the Department of Lights and Supplies.

Father McGuire called at the hall yesterday and notified the Magistrate that he intends to remove on Monday all the furniture in the court-room belonging to him. As the city owns but one chair in the place, there is likely to be an unusual scene when court is opened next week. No doubt the Magistrate will have possession of the solitary chair.

MRS. SCHILLING FEARED ARREST.

Bigamy Charge by Her Second Husband Haunted Her and She Took Her Life.

Mrs. Lillie Schilling, the young woman who drank carbolic acid at the home of Mrs. Harry Harris, 193 Scholes Street, Brooklyn, on Thursday, the anniversary of her birth, and died on the way to St. Catharine's Hospital, feared arrest for bigamy. Mrs. Schilling was a native of Lafayette, N. J., where her family, the Beckwiths, are well known. About five years ago the young woman met Henry Yockers, a well-to-do florist of Maspeth, L. I., and they were married a few months later. There was not enough gayety for the woman in Maspeth, and two years later she left her husband and went to live in Brooklyn. She met Schilling, an insurance agent, and they were married, and it was not until two months ago that he learned that his wife had another husband living. After a quarrel Mrs. Schilling left her husband and went to board with Mrs. Harris.

A few days before taking her life, the young woman learned that her first husband was seeking a divorce and that her second husband was taking steps to have her punished for bigamy. This made her despondent, and the fear of State prison is believed to have led her to take her life.

The relatives of Schilling refused to have anything to do with the body. Word was also sent to the dead girl's relatives, in Lafayette, N. J., but nothing has been heard from them. Unless the body is claimed to-day it will be buried in the Potter's Field.

The New York and Florida Limited.

The New York and Florida Limited, which runs via the Pennsylvania Railroad and the Southern Railway to the Winter resorts of Florida, will make its first trip of the season, and of the new century, to-morrow. The train has been run every Winter for the last four seasons, and it has been constantly improved upon. It now consists of Pullman compartment cars, drawing room, sleeping, library, dining, and observation cars. It carries one car for Aiken and Augusta, and makes connection for all points on the East and West Coast of Florida.

Northwestern Extension Opens To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—A new extension of the Chicago and Northwestern Road will be opened for traffic to-morrow. It runs from Stark to Lakonta and Buxton, Iowa. The new extension is 225 miles in length, and is expected to prove an important feeder of the main system. Daily passenger train service in both directions has been arranged over the new extension.

VOYAGERS HAVE MISHAPS

Trunk Missing, a Whole Party Astray and Purse Forgotten.

But with Hurry, Athletics, and the Aid of Good-Natured Longshoremen All Was Righted as the Steamer Sailed.

The departure yesterday of the North German Lloyd liner Kaiserin Maria Theresia for Mediterranean ports afforded to the persons on the pier and the passengers who sailed a remarkable series of ludicrous absentmindedness on the part of a number of persons who had booked to sail on the big German, which sailed from the foot of Gansevoort Street. First it was a trunk belonging to a woman from Philadelphia that had been forgotten, then a pocketbook that a wife had given to the safe keeping of her husband, who was detained on this side on account of stress of business, and, last of all, a party of six men and women, evidently from the West, who had gone to the Brooklyn terminal instead of the New York terminal of the company to catch the steamer.

The first of the forgetful contingent to discover that something was missing was Mr. and Mrs. Elery of Philadelphia, who a short time before the departing hour of the liner suddenly noticed that an important piece of their baggage was missing. Out of their cabin and down the gangway both rushed to the baggage master to see if he knew anything about the luggage. "Not a thing; it hasn't been delivered here," that gentleman informed them. "Then I'll not go a step," answered Mrs. Elery, "for it contains a number of things I shall need on the trip." A consultation of officials on the pier and then Mrs. Elery returned on board the vessel, leaving her husband on the pier to listen for the rumble of the wagon on which the missing piece of luggage was by chance expected to arrive.

"No wagon, no trunk; what are we going to do about it?" asked Mr. Elery of his wife, who was anxiously awaiting developments on deck. She decided she would remain behind, and Mr. Elery went aboard, and soon appeared followed by two stewards dragging a number of pieces of baggage behind them. The luggage was taken to a convenient place on the pier while husband and wife again consulted, and as preparations to clear the pier were about complete they decided once more to embark. Mr. Elery, this time carrying the hand baggage, started for the gangplank. Two longshoremen came to his assistance, however, and relieved him of his burden, while an attache of the line informed the couple that the company would trace the trunks and send them on the next steamer.

Before this incident had closed, and just as the ship was about to back out and the gangway pulled down, a number of carriages containing the party who had gone to Brooklyn to catch the liner dashed down the pier. "Don't let her go; we went to Brooklyn by mistake!" screamed an excited woman in the party. "Hurry up, or you won't go on the Kaiserin," answered a burly longshoreman, and, snatching their hand baggage, all six rushed up the gangway, which, as the sixth stepped on the deck, was released and let down to the pier by the pulleys. The vessel was almost in the stream and the passengers on board were signaling their last farewells to the friends they were leaving behind, when from the deck a slim little woman cried:

"John, where is my pocketbook, you have it in your pocket, and I haven't any money?"

"That's right, but here it comes, so be ready to catch it," and pulling out a bulky-looking woman's purse, the man gripped it tightly, drew back his right arm, and threw it with all his might in the direction of the ship. Up into the air and seemingly over the vessel flew the money, but the momentum was not sufficient, and, instead of falling on the deck of the steamer, the purse missed her about two feet and fell with a splash into the water.

Then there was a look of despair from the deck, and an answering one of mingled surprise and chagrin from the dock.

"What am I to do," walled the little woman.

"I don't know, I couldn't help it, I'm sure," came the answer from the deck.

But once more the longshoremen came to the rescue. The money could be seen floating in the water, and letting one of their number down into a rowboat the purse was soon recovered and returned to the anxiously awaiting man on the pier. It was wet through and through as a matter of course, and, having trebled in weight as a result of the soaking, he prepared to make the second attempt to land it on the liner. Without a word of warning to the crowd lining the vessel's rail, he drew back his right, and with a mighty swing sent the purse on its second trip to the liner's side. There was a dodging of heads on board, and the sound of a thump against the Kaiserin's side, and then a happy "Good-bye, John" assured the absent-minded husband that all was well at last.

The Kaiserin was in the river heading for the Hook when a wagon loaded with several baskets of choice fruit came trotting down the pier.

"Here's some baskets of fruit for—" yelled the driver. "Well, there's ther boat—swim out and give 'em to 'em," answered one of the exhausted longshoremen, who had taken part in the previous exciting events.

WORK OF THE BABIES' HOSPITAL.

Building and Endowment Fund Increased by $98,500 in the Past Year.

At the annual meeting of the Babies' Hospital of the City of New York, Lexington Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street, held Wednesday evening, progress was reported in regard to the building and endowment fund during the year. There has been about $98,500 subscribed, but about $100,000 is still needed. Increasing work has been done by the out-patient department, which treated 4,754 applicants, of whom 64 per cent. paid for their own medicines. The Training School for Nursery Maids graduated 22 young women, making a total of 170 since its foundation. The hospital is declared to owe much, if not all, of its success to the efficient work of the Cribside Committee and Women's Board. The following officers were re-elected:

J. Hooker Hamersley, President; Oliver G. Jennings, Vice President; Mrs. John B. Colvert, Treasurer of Current Funds; Henry R. Kunhardt, Treasurer Permanent Funds; Felix M. Warburg, Treasurer Building Fund, and B. Ogden Chisholm, Secretary.

On the Medical Board for the coming year are the following:

Consulting Physicians—Dr. A. Jacobi, Dr. F. P. Kinnicutt, Dr. Pearce Bailey, Dr. Thomas E. Satterthwaite, and Dr. E. B. Bronson. Consulting surgeon, Dr. Robert Abbe. Attending physicians, Dr. L. E. Holt and Dr. R. B. Kimball. Attending surgeon, Dr. Arthur L. Fisk. Consulting eye and ear specialist, Dr. Wilbur A. Marple.

The Treasurer's report for the fiscal year showed receipts for current uses from all sources $18,813.55, while the expenses of maintenance were $16,105.83.

NEW YORK FIRMS SWINDLED.

Three Men Arrested in St. Louis for Fraudulently Ordering Goods.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 12.—Three men charged with having by fraud disposed of thousands of dollars' worth of dry goods were arrested here last night by Federal officers.

The name of a reputable St. Louis firm was used in ordering the consignments. Menasha Lipschitz, Samuel Lipschitz, his son, and Nathan Harris, an employe, are charged with being the leaders of the scheme. The losers include many New York firms, who received orders on sixty and ninety days' time by the firm of "M. M. Lipschitz & Co." After a few days the orders were honored, as the credit of the firm of that name was excellent. Bales, boxes, and bundles began coming to St. Louis and were carted to an old building at 1,213 Cheatnut Street. As soon as the wagons reached the place they were quickly unloaded, the dray bills signed, and soon after another wagon would haul the stuff away.

These mysterious operations were kept up from July 28 to Oct. 10. United States Commissioner John R. Gray charges the men with using the mails in the furtherance of fraudulent schemes.

Want Ravenswood Bridge Started.

A delegation from the Queens County Republican Central Committee will wait upon the Secretary of War at Washington to-morrow to urge him to approve immediately the plans for the proposed Ravenswood bridge, between Manhattan and Queens, submitted to him some time ago. The Secretary's approval is necessary before work upon the bridge can be started.

The Shoe Manufacturers' Annual Clean-Up Sale

one of the most successful shoe sales we have ever held, enters upon its second week to-morrow morning. It represents, as we have already told you, the "end of the season" stocks of five of the leading manufacturers of high-grade shoes in America, secured by our shoe buyer at very low prices. When the sale began, thousands of these shoes were still in the hands of the workmen, and many "sample" lines were out on the road. They are all here now, and while this sale is in progress you may buy two, and in some cases three, pairs of good shoes for what you generally pay for one pair of the same quality. All sizes and every style of the season for man or woman are here in plenty. Here are further details for the interested:

At 1.95—Ladies' Shoes, in kid, calf, patent leather, patent kid and enamel; button or lace, with hand-sewed welts and turns; all styles of toes, and from the "common sense" to the high French heels; also the extra high cut Skating Shoes, in tan and black; not a pair in the lot worth less than $3.50—many of them worth $5 and $6.

At 1.95—Men's Shoes, of wax calf, box calf, vici kid and patent leather, with London, bulldog and plain toes, lace and Congress and hand-sewed welts; also, winter tans, button or lace, hand-sewed and horsehide waterproof shoes. These are all $3.50 and $5.00 shoes. Price them elsewhere if you doubt it.

At 1.25—Men's Shoes of satin and wax calf, with London and bulldog toes, lace and plain toes, lace and Congress, some with Goodyear welts; all sizes; regularly worth $2.50 and $3.

At 95c.—Ladies' Shoes of kidskin, in tan or black, button or lace, also some double sole box calf lace shoes; worth fully $1.50 and $2.00 a pair, to say the least.

The January Double-Value Sale of Women's Cloaks, Suits and Skirts

possesses many unique features—most important of which is the fact that every garment in the sale has been made to our order, especially for this sale.

In former years the January sale meant the closing out of our own and manufacturers' left-over stocks.

This year, in consequence of opportunities for the purchase of choice cloths at great reductions from standard prices and some manufacturers' readiness to keep their plants going during the dull weeks of December and January, even at a loss, we are enabled to offer you at the same price reductions that elsewhere would secure but left-over goods

The choicest and newest productions of some of America's foremost wholesale tailors.

We have been in the cloak business for fourteen years, but we never could do this before. We may continue fourteen years more and not be able to do it again. It's a great opportunity—will you miss it?

Raglans, Ulsters and Newmarkets, at 9.75, 14.75 and 18.75.

THE PHILIPPINE PRISONS

Filled with Insurgents Since the Expiration of the Amnesty.

Carcel de Bilibid One of the Archipelago's Unprogressive Institutions.

MANILA, Dec. 15.—Since the period within which amnesty was granted to captured insurgents expired the insurrectos have been sent to Manila in batches of dozens, scores, and hundreds. It is but a month since the military government began the retention of the prisoners of war, and already the quarters fitted up to hold them are filled.

Liberty gained formerly simply by swearing allegiance to the United States was looked upon by the insurgents as so easy of attainment that the Yankees were set down as being simple indeed for being so lenient. Within the past few weeks, however, the insurgents have been learning that sterner war measures are in force, and to-day 1,500 insurgents are in confinement in this city, exclusive of several hundred natives, so-called political prisoners, most of whom may also be classed as insurgents.

The question as to what is to be done with these prisoners of war appears to be wholly undetermined. They have not been tried or sentenced, and apparently are unlikely to be for a long time to come. They are brought in by rail and by steamer, and a few were arrested within the city. Uncertainty and curiosity concerning their fate are strongly depicted on their brown faces.

Practically all the war prisoners thus far brought in are confined in the Quartel Malate, an inclosure containing four long double, barnlike wooden buildings, built for troops' barracks, but lately transformed into prisons by the addition of bolts on the doors and bars across the windows. A pair of these buildings are occupied by a couple of battalions of the Third and Sixth Artillery stationed on guard duty. The others are the prisons. Some 300 natives are confined in each of the four wings, which measure each about 30 by 120 feet. Four platforms, six feet wide, run nearly the length of the building. Upon these the captives sleep, lying crosswise in four long rows, and there they sit about in rather expectant lifeless during the daylight hours, excepting the four hours during which they are allowed the liberty of the yard.

A serviceable combination of bathroom and laundry is at the end of the buildings. The prisoners' food, pork, sometimes beef, and greens, and rice, is cooked in a rear inclosure. A hospital is provided with native doctors. For an hour at midday the prisoners' friends are admitted to the yard. At first they were permitted to crowd into as close contact as a high barbed-wire fence between them would permit, but recently a second lower fence was built six feet outward. Beyond this the rebel's wife, sweetheart, or mother cannot come, and whatever is passed in to a prisoner is handed across by a sentry, and incidentally scrutinized.

One of the unprogressive public institutions of the archipelago is Carcel de Bilibid, the only permanent prison of any size in the Philippines. Should the leaders in American boards of Corrections and Charities visit this institution, they would find prison reform in an embryonic stage, indeed. About the only visible improvement since the old place came under American control has been in the matter of cleanliness, the erection of a small hospital of wood and bamboo, and betterment of sewerage conditions.

Bilibid Prison, which confines criminals and political and military prisoners, was built by the Spanish at a cost of more than $800,000. Its appearance would never justify the cost. It consists of a great square, inclosed by stone walls, with sentry boxes. The buildings are long, one-story affairs, grouped in elliptical fashion. All ages and classes of men and boys are confined together without any separation or privacy, and all degrees of native criminals are allowed full liberty of the yard. Women and American civil and soldier prisoners are confined in separate places, and the Americans have different food from the natives, the "chow" of the latter being prepared and served in primitive fashion. The inmates pass their days and nights in idleness, with the exception of a few who are skilful in weaving, carving, bamboo work, &c., who get a percentage of receipts from the sale of their handiwork to visitors.

There are two parts to Bilibid, the city side and the presidio side. Each contains 550 prisoners. The presidio side confines all political prisoners and culprits sentenced for more than four years. There are also usually fifty American soldier prisoners, tried and sentenced by military courts in the various Islands and waiting to be sent to Alcatraz (San Francisco) or Fort Leavenworth military prisons. The health of the place is excellent and the native prisoners, aside from the long termers, are only too anxious to remain. The break for liberty of July 16 last, in which several were shot down by guards, was planned and led by the long termers.

Both the prisons above described are taxed to their capacity. The military government has been recommended to provide more places, and especially for captured insurrectos, who cannot be kept confined at military posts without much sacrifice in details for prison guard duty.

Troops Quit Subig and Olongapo.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Gen. MacArthur has notified the War Department that all the United States troops stationed in the Pueblos of Subig and Olongapo, Province of Zambales, Luzon, have been withdrawn from that territory, and that it has been temporarily transferred to the administrative and tactical control of the Commander-in-Chief of the United States Naval forces of the Asiatic station. The troops have been relieved by a marine detachment. Gen. MacArthur says that the establishment of civil government within the territory will be conducted as heretofore.

Assignments in the Philippines.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Col. Samuel S. Sumner, Sixth Cavalry, has been assigned to the command of the First District, Department of Southern Luzon, in place of Col. W. S. Schuyler, Forty-sixth Volunteer Infantry, who has been ordered to join his regiment.

Other assignments in the Philippines have been made as follows:

First Lieut. W. H. Clifford, Jr., 1st U. S. C., to be Provost Judge for the Island of Vassalan; Capt. H. O. Bisset, 1st U. S. M. C., as Provost Judge for the District of Polilok, Island of Mindanao.

Veterans Want Travel Pay from Manila

SEATTLE, Washington, Jan. 12.—A committee has been appointed by the Washington veterans of the Spanish-American war to take steps to secure from Congress travel pay for the journey from Manila to San Francisco. It is contended that other regiments were paid travel pay from the points named, but the rule was changed before the Washington boys were ordered home. The travel pay amounts to about $100 per man, with a proportionate advance for the officers and non-commissioned officers.

Orleans to Return to England.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—Movements at York House, Twickenham, indicate that it is the intention of the Duke of Orleans to return to England, whence he has been ostracized since he congratulated the designer of the caricatures grossly insulting to Queen Victoria which appeared in Paris comic papers. The Duke's mother, the Comtesse de Paris, is said to have been in communication with the Queen and Prince of Wales, in the hope of patching up the matter.

King Alexander Says He Is Happy.

NISCH, Servia, Jan. 12.—The Narouna-Skupshtina (National Assembly) was opened to-day by King Alexander. In the speech from the throne, his Majesty declared that his marriage had set the seal on his life's happiness. He emphasized the split with his father, (ex-King Milan,) saying Milan had left the country forever, therefore he hoped for better service from the present Ministry than from the last.

Orders Attacks on France to Cease.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 12.—The Independance Belge's St. Petersburg correspondent announces that the Russian Government has ordered the Novoe Vremya to cease its attacks upon the French Government and upon Gen. André, the French Minister of War.

Descendant of Daniel Defoe Dead.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—James Defoe, the last male descendant of the author of "Robinson Crusoe," died this week. He was eighty-two years old and a pauper.

THE SANTO DOMINGO TROUBLE.

United States May Interfere to Protect the New York Company—Conferences in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The Government probably will take cognizance of the troubles in Santo Domingo, and will take such action as is necessary for the protection of American interests there. Thus far, however, the State Department has not heard from Consul General Maxwell on the reports that the Santo Domingan Government has resumed the direction of its own fiscal affairs.

Messrs. Hollis, Abbott, and Ward of New York, representing the Santo Domingo Improvement Company, have held lengthy conferences with Acting Secretary of State Hill and Solicitor Penfield of the State Department concerning the reported repudiation of the company's grant by Santo Domingo.

A dispatch of inquiry was sent to Consul General Maxwell, at Santo Domingo City, asking him to advise the department if the press reports of a repudiation of the company's rights were correct, and also to forward a general statement of the situation. Although it is not so stated officially it is probable that an intimation has been conveyed to Santo Domingo not to take precipitate action until the matter can receive due consideration here.

Gen. Beekman Du Barry Dead.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Gen. Beekman Du Barry, United States Army, retired, died at his residence in this city to-day. Gen. Du Barry was born in New Jersey, and was appointed to the Military Academy from the District of Columbia in 1845. He was appointed Captain Commissary Subsistence in 1853, and Major Commissary Subsistence in 1863. For meritorious service during the war he was made Lieutenant Colonel and brevet Colonel in 1865. He became Brigadier General in 1890, and was retired two years later.

OLD SUPERSTITION REVIVED.

Death of Lieut. Forbes-Leith Accords with Ancient Curse on the Owners of Fyvie Castle.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—The memorial to be used as an institute by the Gordon Highlanders at Aberdeen, which Mrs. Forbes-Leith, formerly of New York, intends to erect in memory of her son, Lieut. Percy F. Forbes-Leith, who died from fever recently in Natal, recalls the fact that Fyvie Castle (Mrs. Forbes-Leith's residence) is one of the many mysterious places in Scotland said to have a curse which invariably falls on the eldest son of the house.

For many generations the property has failed to descend in a direct line, and when the Duff-Gordons sold Fyvie Castle to Mr. Forbes-Leith it was argued that the curse could not be transferred to another family. But the death of the young subaltern has revived the superstition held by all Aberdeenshire.

Mrs. Forbes-Leith was formerly Miss January of St. Louis.

THE PRUSSIAN CANAL BILL.

Enlarged Measure Calls for an Expenditure of 384,000,000 Marks.

BERLIN, Jan. 12.—The enlarged Canal bill introduced in the lower house of the Diet to-day provides for the Midland Canal 260,000,000 marks; for the Berlin-Stettin Canal 41,000,000 marks; for the improvement of the Warthe and a connection with the Vistula 23,000,000 marks; for the Oder tidewater canal 41,000,000 marks, and for the Havel and Spree Canal 19,000,000 marks; a total of 384,000,000 marks.

The Finance Minister is empowered to sell bonds to raise the necessary funds.

GERMAN MINISTER DENOUNCED.

Member of the Reichstag Attacks Count von Posadowsky-Wehner.

BERLIN, Jan. 12.—In the Reichstag to-day Herr Fischer (Social Democrat) seized the opportunity of the debate on the Home Office estimates to make a violent attack on Count von Posadowsky-Wehner, the Secretary of the Interior, in connection with the recent "twelve-thousand-mark" scandal, (that amount having been contributed by certain manufacturers for the turtherance of the Anti-Strike bill.) Herr Fischer proposed the appointment of a Parliamentary commission to investigate the political and financial relations between the Home Office and the Central Union of German Manufacturers and other interested bodies.

Count von Posadowsky-Wehner, in reply, said he hoped his post would always be occupied by a man as honestly anxious as himself to ameliorate the position of the working people. He assumed full responsibility for the action under debate, and said he had no thought of relinquishing his office as long as he enjoyed the confidence of the Emperor.

CREW OF THE RUSSIE ACCUSED.

It Is Alleged that an Officer Had to Threaten Them with a Revolver.

PARIS, Jan. 12.—Ugly stories are leaking out concerning the behavior of part of the crew of the steamer Russie wrecked off Farnman on Monday, whose crew and passengers, numbering 102 persons, were rescued by boats from the shore yesterday.

Le Matin publishes an interview with a passenger, who said that the conduct of some of the sailors was beneath contempt. The first mate had to enforce obedience at the muzzle of a loaded revolver, and was obliged to pass the nights with a loaded revolver in his hand. These assertions are confirmed by two women passengers. The other passengers, adds the correspondent, while praising the officers, maintained a significant silence regarding the seamen.

A correspondent of L'Echo de Paris alleges that discord prevailed on board, in consequence of the conduct of two women, vaudeville artists, and certain other passengers. He declares that scandalous incidents occurred in the smoking room between the women and some of the officers. In spite of the fact that all on board appeared to be on the threshold of death. The correspondent adds:

"It is asserted that the officers surreptitiously favored these women, giving them an unfair allowance of biscuits and oranges. These rumors spread to the crew, who seized on them as a pretext to start a little mutiny. The seamen refused to do duty, saying there was no longer any discipline on board; that in face of the common peril every one had the right to save his own skin, and that the common danger made them all equal. Matters came to such a point that the first mate, after a refusal of obedience, was obliged to threaten the mutineers with a revolver. Order was restored, but the quarrel broke out anew on landing."

A correspondent of Le Petit Parisien sends the following significant statement:

"A sailor tells me that when the Carro lifeboat ran alongside the Russie Capt. Jouve stood at the gangway, with a revolver in his hand, to prevent any incident calculated to jeopardize good order in the disembarkation."

H. A. De Lille Dies in Poverty.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—There died in London this week, in poverty, a character once well known in New York, London, and Paris—Henry A. De Lille, who married Olive Logan. He was at various times connected with several New York newspapers. While in Paris he greatly aided, in a confidential capacity, Napoleon III., and he was made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor by the Emperor. Poverty and illness made his closing days tragic.

Bosschieter Murder Trial Precautions.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 12.—Mrs. Bosschieter, step-mother of Jennie Bosschieter, to-day announced that she would attend the trial of the four men accused of having murdered her stepdaughter, which will be begun on Monday. The father of the murdered girl will not visit the Court House during the trial. He never mentions Jennie's name. Sheriff Sturr swore in a number of extra officers to-day to guard the four prisoners during the trial.

Arbuckles Win a Legal Victory.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Jan. 12.—The Arbuckles won a victory in the Circuit Court to-day, when it was decided that they are stockholders in the Woolson Spice Company, and, as such, are entitled to inspect certain books and papers of the defendant company, so that they may ascertain the cost and selling price of materials used by the Woolsons. On Monday the plaintiffs will make a demand for the books, and the courts will decide just what books they may see.

ATTACKS THE SUBSIDY BILL.

John De Witt Warner Says It Is So Framed that the Government Will Get Nothing in Return.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 12.—"Ship subsidies," particularly the Frye Shipping bill now before Congress, was the subject discussed at the meeting of the New England Free Trade League this evening. John De Witt Warner of New York was the chief speaker.

"This bill," he said, "is not a subsidy bill, in that it furnishes compensation for anything by which any one is compelled to do anything. It is simply a carefully drawn measure, so arranged that the Government will pay $9,000,000 to a few gentlemen and interests who have got up the bill, and is so carefully framed that the Government will get nothing in return. The provisions of the bill are such that these continuing contracts may last nearly thirty years.

"The object is to subsidize passenger steamers that take out tourists and bring back immigrants. The result is to pay the highest subsidy to ships that do not carry cargo, and cannot carry cargo.

"One excuse offered for this bill is that our merchant marine needs help. The Commissioner of Navigation in his report shows that of all prosperous industries to-day American shipbuilding stands at the head."

Mr. Warner called attention to the new shipbuilding plants started, and showed that the increase is destined to be still greater.

MILLIONS IN REALTY DEAL.

Northern Pacific Sells Rest of Federal Land Grant to a Syndicate.

ST. PAUL, Jan. 12.—What is said to be the largest real estate transaction ever made in the Northwest was closed to-day, whereby the Northern Pacific Railway Company disposes of the entire remaining portion of the Federal land grant of 1864 to a syndicate composed of Mankato and St. Paul capitalists.

The purchase price runs into the millions, but the syndicate has not announced the exact figures. The lands lie in North Dakota, between the Missouri and the James Rivers, and embrace a tract of 1,500,000 acres. The lands are mostly wild, but include some of the finest ranch property in the West.

Settlement will be pushed at once, and already applications have been received from more than 700 families desiring homes upon the tract. This sale disposes of all the lands held by the Northern Pacific except those lying in the land grant of the St. Paul and Duluth.

THE CONCILIATION COMMITTEE.

First Meeting of Body Appointed by National Civic Federation.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—The first formal meeting of the Committee on Conciliation and Arbitration, which was appointed by the National Civic Federation last Dec. 18, at a conference held in Chicago for that purpose, was held here to-day.

The meeting of the committee was for the purpose of discussing plans for the selection of a National Arbitration and Conciliatory Board, which is to act, if so desired, between the employer and employe in all matters of dispute affecting both parties interested. The ultimate plan of the Federation and those interested in the movement is to do away with strikes and labor difficulties affecting all mercantile and business interests and all branches of labor, organized and unorganized.

Members of the committee appointed last December are evenly divided between the employing and employe classes.

BAIRD CONTESTS AT PRINCETON.

First Prize of $100 Won by Ralph P. Swofford.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 12.—The annual Baird Prize Contests in Oratory, Disputation, and Poetry, open to approved members of the senior class, were held there last night, and the judges announced the names of the winners of the prizes to-day. The Baird Prize of $100 was awarded to Ralph P. Swofford of Kansas City, Mo., the subject of whose oration was "The New Patriotism"; the Fifty-Dollar Prize for Oratory was won by William A. Babson of South Orange, N. J., who spoke on "Toussaint L'Overture." The prize of $30 for delivery was awarded to Walter E. Hope of Brooklyn, N. Y., whose subject was "The Influence of Reverence."

In disputation Robert S. Steen of Philadelphia, Penn., was given the first prize of $40, and Franklin W. Fort of East Orange, N. J., won the second prize of $30. Ralph S. Thompson of New York City captured the fifty-dollar prize for having written the best poem. The poem was entitled "The Undying God."

WAS SECRETLY MARRIED,

Miss Basche's Family Angry When They Learned She Had Become Mrs. Smith.

The secret marriage of Ward W. Smith, son of A. Lathen Smith, a lawyer of 148 West One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Street, to Miss Mabel Basche, on Dec. 17 last, became known yesterday. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. John Peters, in St. Michael's Episcopal Church.

Miss Basche is the daughter of George F. Basche, deceased, and Mrs. Emeline Bascho of 2,308 Seventh Avenue. Mrs. Basche was violently opposed to the attentions of Smith, as were the young woman's elder sisters. Smith was educated at the College of the City of New York, and for a time was in the United States Secret Service. He is now unemployed. He is twenty-four years old, and made the acquaintance of Miss Basche about ten months ago.

The secret of the marriage became known yesterday, when Mrs. Smith's eldest sister chided her severely for receiving so many letters from Mr. Smith. Mrs. Smith replied with sharpness that her husband had a right to write to his wife as much as he pleased. A stormy scene followed, as a result of which Mrs. Smith left her mother's home and went to a boarding house on St. Nicholas Avenue.

Smith admitted the marriage, but was unable to secure the forgiveness and blessing of his mother-in-law. His father was equally unfeeling for a while, but finally relented and will make room for the young couple under the parental roof tree.

WEST VIRGINIANS DINE.

Natives of Charlestown Hold Their Twelfth Reunion in This City.

Once a year the natives of Charlestown, West Va., who are now residents of New York get together and have a good time dining, singing songs, and talking about auld lang syne. There are about one hundred of these persons, and they are organized as the Charlestown (West Va.) Society of the City of New York. They met last night for the twelfth time. At the first meeting there were only twelve members present. The dinner was held in the large dining room of the Hotel St. Denis, and music by Conterno was played during the greater part of the evening. They played all the old Southern songs and melodies.

Dr. Benjamin R. Logie, President of the society, presided. At the table with him were Peter B. Rouss, Vice President; William A. Daniels, Secretary and Treasurer; Charles B. Rouss, Col. H. D. Beall, A. Wells Stumpf, L. B. Howe, Dr. John T. Nagle, B. W. Mitchell, Thomas F. Byrne, O. H. Loftus, the Rev. John H. Logie, Isidor Carroll, Joseph H. Beall, H. Stewart McKnight, and J. C. McKnight.

The Employers' Liability Bill.

ALBANY, Jan. 12.—Organized labor throughout the State is marshaling its forces in support of the Employers' Liability bill, which will take precedence over all other labor measures. Speaking of the prospects of the bill, a prominent labor advocate expressed himself as follows: "We expect to encounter the bulk of opposition in the Assembly. We anticipate little trouble in getting the bill through the Senate, and we feel confident that Gov. Odell will sign the bill as soon as it is sent to him. He has practically said as much."

A Civic Federation for New York.

ALBANY, Jan. 12.—The Civic Federation of New York City was incorporated to-day, to promote good government and equitable taxation. Directors—John P. Faure, G. Waldo Smith, Paul Goepel, and F. B. Thurber of New York City, and Darwin R. James and William McConnell of Brooklyn.

Transfer Tax on Goelet Estate.

C. De Witt, as executor of the estate of Ogden Goelet, yesterday applied to Surrogate Fitzgerald to determine the amount of the transfer tax to be paid by Robert Goelet, a son of Ogden Goelet, on a bequest of $500,000. The reason for the application was that young Goelet reached his twenty-first birthday on Wednesday last. Robert Goelet is entitled on attaining the age of twenty-five to a half share of his father's property.

TROPICAL EXPOSITION IN CHARLESTON

Will Open Next December and Last Until the Following June.

Grounds Covering 250 Acres Will Be Planted in Live Oak—Buildings Will Resemble Those in the West Indies.

H. G. Linderman, Special Commissioner for the South Carolina Inter-State and West Indian Exposition, is at the Herald Square Hotel, in this city. He is the first Commissioner for the exposition who has ever been in the North, and his mission here is to make arrangements for machinery and exhibits which will be sent to Charleston, where the fair is to be held.

Mr. Linderman said yesterday: "Work has already been commenced on the Administration Building, and when I left Charleston the contracts had already been given out on the majority of the exposition buildings. I am here to make arrangements with manufacturers for electrical and other machinery which will be needed at the exposition. I am also engaged in getting various concessions. One of the features of the exposition will be a street of cities on which buildings for exhibition will be erected by various large cities. Several cities in the North have already agreed to occupy buildings, and I hope to make arrangements with several others."

The exposition, which will last from December, 1901, until June, 1902, is intended to advertise to the world the progress of South Carolina and the neighboring Southern States and the advantages that Charleston enjoys as a natural seaport for the trade between the West Indies and the United States. A feature of the fair will be the large number of exhibits from the West Indies and Florida. The whole exposition will be characteristic of the tropics. The exposition grounds, which cover about 250 acres of land, are situated on the Ashley River, four and one-half miles above Charleston. The river is navigable for large ships up to that point, and during the exposition two or more large warships of the United States Navy will be stationed there. The greater part of the grounds will be planted in live oak, so as to give the exposition a Southern appearance. An artificial lake will be constructed near the middle of the grounds, extending over an area of thirty acres. In the middle of the lake will be the "Electrical Island." Two old colonial mansions, which are situated on the exposition grounds, will be retained there, and it is expected that they will prove very interesting exhibits.

On the plaza, which will be 1,200 by 900 feet, there will be an auditorium capable of holding 6,000 persons, the Cotton Palace and the buildings of Commerce and Agriculture.

The materials used in the construction of all the buildings will be pine and plaster and the style of architecture will be the Spanish Renaissance—the characteristic architecture of the West Indies. Red-tiled roofs, projecting eaves, and connecting colonnades will be special features of all the exposition buildings.

QUEER DEATH IN HOSPITAL.

Injuries on Head of a Boy Who Was Taken There as a Typhoid Fever Patient.

John J. Payne, seventeen years old, died under peculiar circumstances on Friday night at the New York Hospital. The Coroner has been notified and will make an autopsy to-day.

According to the story of Frank Genelay, a shopmate of Payne's, the latter was taken ill on Jan. 4 with what he thought was the grip. Genelay accompanied Payne to the New York Hospital, where Payne got some medicine, and then returned to his room over the delicatessen store at 425 Sixth Avenue, where he worked, and went to bed. On the 7th he became delirious, the case was reported to the police, and an ambulance was sent for. Dr. Connell, the ambulance surgeon, made an examination, and the patient was removed to the hospital. Genelay says he was present and that there was no mark on the boy's body at the time. The blotter of the Thirtieth Street Police Station shows that he was removed suffering from typhoid fever. Genelay says the same entry appeared on the blotter of the hospital.

At 10 o'clock on the night of Jan. 10, Genelay received word from the hospital to come and see his friend who was dangerously ill. Genelay went there and found Payne unconscious. A nurse called his attention to certain bruises on both ears and then pushed his hand to the base of Payne's skull. Genelay says the nurse asked him what it was, and he answered it felt soft as if his skull was crushed. The nurse and Superintendent Ludlam wanted to know where the sick man received the injuries, and Genelay answered he must have received them either at the hospital or on his way there. Payne died the following night.

Mrs. E. Bergman, who owns the delicatessen store, last night corroborated Genelay's story to Detective Lockwood, who had been sent to make an investigation. Payne, she said, had applied two months ago for work, and had proved a steady and reliable worker. She said she thought he was an orphan. At the hospital the detective was told that the cause of the boy's death could not be stated until after the autopsy.

Superintendent Ludlam declined to see reporters in regard to the case, and they were not permitted to look at the hospital blotter.

OTTENDORFER FELLOWSHIP FUND

Its Purpose to Encourage the Study of Germanic Literature.

Impressed by the valuable services which the beneficent life of the late Oswald Ottendorfer has rendered this country, a committee appointed for the purpose has decided to raise a fund by means of which the name of Mr. Ottendorfer may best be perpetuated.

During his life Mr. Ottendorfer presented to the New York University a most expensive and valuable Germanic library, on condition that no announcement of the gift be made until after his death.

In order to give the educated youth of this country an opportunity to enter into the spirit of the German language and literature as fully as may be, it is the plan of the committee to raise from $20,000 to $25,000 as a fellowship fund, to which all may contribute, and which is intended to further the interest in the German language and literature among the students of this country.

This fund is to be turned over to the control of the New York University, to be held as the "Ottendorfer Memorial Fellowship Fund," on condition that the yearly interest shall be paid to that graduate of any American college of recognized standing who shall have proved himself most proficient in the German language and literature, in order to enable him to continue his studies in Germanics either here or abroad, and then to bring before the public, either in print or in the form of lectures, the fruits of his investigations, and on condition, further, that his literary or other contributions shall bear the title "Ottendorfer Memorial."

Contributions to this fund are to be sent to the Treasurer of this committee, Mr. James Speyer, 30 Broad Street, New York.

The Ottendorfer Memorial Committee includes the following persons: Arthur Von Briesen, James Speyer, Lawrence A. McLouth, Emil L. Boas, Hubert Allills, Heinrich Conried, Andrew H. Green, Henry M. MacCracken, Frank Russak, Charles A. Schieren, Jacob H. Schiff, Henry Seligman, Isaac N. Seligman, Louis Stern, Ernst Thalmann, and Oswald Garrison Villard.

Although no subscription list has been formally opened, between $4,000 and $5,000 have been offered to the committee. The committee intends to begin active work next week.

MR. AND MRS. T. W. OGDEN DEAD.

Double Funeral to Take Place at St. Paul's Chapel on Tuesday.

Thomas W. Ogden and Ruth C. Ogden, his wife, died yesterday in Morristown, N. J., where they resided.

Mr. Ogden, who was in his ninety-first year, was a graduate of Columbia in the class of '29. His wife was a daughter of the late Philip Schuyler.

The double funeral will take place at St. Paul's Chapel, in this city, on Tuesday morning.

Quarterly Sale of Dressmakers' Supplies

And Small Wares—A sharp watch of the market, our willingness and ability to buy large stocks whenever they are offered to us below prices prevailing under ordinary market conditions, and a surrender of our usual profit all tend to make this sale a trade sensation. The harvesting began months ago and continued steadily, so that now we are ready with a stock larger, and money saving opportunities greater, than ever before. This event is looked foward to with keen anticipation by a host of dressmakers, who appreciate its sterling value. This is evidenced by its increasing popularity.

LONDON TOPICS OF THE WEEK.

Observations on the Downfall of the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava.

CAUGHT IN A FINANCIAL NET

How the London and Globe Finance Corporation Was Created.

The Indiscretion of the Duke of Norfolk May Cause Trouble in Italy—Why the Cape Dutch Are Rising—The Austrian Elections.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
Copyright, 1901.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—Two episodes have occupied us this week, if not to the exclusion at least to the temporary diversion of people's minds from the all-absorbing South African problem. One is the story of "a Marquis in finance" and the other is of "A Duke in Rome." A fortnight ago I told you that the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava had suddenly resigned his position as Chairman of a globular finance corporation whose flimsy structure was then threatening to collapse. The news was true, but the downfall came before his Lordship could get away to South Africa, and the disclosures were so scandalous that he was perforce compelled to withdraw his resignation and come back to London to face the music. He did so on Wednesday, and a very lame appearance he made.

It would take too long to tell you all about it, but briefly, the London and Globe Finance Corporation is the parent of sundry groups of companies promoted by gentlemen who are said to hail from Canada, and who have been for the past six or eight years an increasingly notorious figure in London financial circles of doubtfully substantial order. So far as I know you do not possess this particular kind of company on your side, and hence have reason to be thankful. Its modus operandi is simple—to form a company with as big a capital as possible and then through its agency to manufacture other companies also with gigantic nominal capital and to use what resources the greedy or gullible public may be willing to play for profit with the shares of the various creations. When profits come as a result of this kind of trading the correct thing is to arrange that these shall go to the operators behind the companies, and when losses accrue they are naturally dumped upon the companies, on the heads you lose, tails I win principle.

HOW THE COMPANY OPERATED.

This sort of business, really and essentially fraudulent, has been going on in the city for years under various forms, but until the promoter in this instance succeeded in capturing Lord Dufferin and the late Lord Loch, his partner, the dealings were on a comparatively small scale. A number of more or less sham Australian mining companies were concocted by him, and gambling was fomented in their shares, but they had all years ago so died down and became so worthless as agencies for playing Dick Turpin with the citizen's purse that it became necessary to smother them in a blanket company which still figures in the shares list, although its business is dead.

When two Lords, one a Marquis, came along, however, Whitaker Wright became bold, and instead of a £100,000 to £200,000 capital £500,000 to £1,000,000 became the figure, and such is our inveterate snobbishness that some of these monster bubble companies were subscribed by the public and their shares manipulated to high premiums. One reputably good gold mine was among the mass of rubbish, but it, too, after yielding wonderful results for a short time, betrayed symptoms of exhaustion, and for months back it has been obvious that the game was getting played out.

Perhaps the delusions might have endured a little longer had the ambitious promoter been satisfied with merely the concoction of sham companies and snaring the public with their shares, but, like all adventurers of the kind, he was ambitious to execute some important undertaking and so involved the corporations in an underground electric railway across London on a route not likely to yield a rich traffic. This was the last straw, and the attempt to float the railway as a company with about £1,000,000 plunder in its shares and capital failed early last month, and its dying spasms really came in the middle of December, although it was the end of the month before ruin was acknowledged and the Stock Exchange was let in for losses which may reach £5,000,000.

LORD DUFFERIN'S STATUS.

I tell you this story because it is from this typical kind of finance that London has been suffering for these past ten or twelve years. At all times since the modern facilities for share gambling were developed we have had incidents of a similar kind, but only within the period named can it be said that a continuous and systematic mystification of this description has come into fashion and helped to demoralize all classes of society, but especially the upper classes. Unless I am grievously misinformed, other titled people besides Dufferin will find themselves plunged into disrepute by this smash. One firm with a nobleman in it closely associated with the present Government, I am assured, managed to find money to tide over the crisis in the middle of December.

An effort is now being made to hush the thing up, and a certain class of newspapers are busy lading out whitewash on Dufferin and his associates. The meeting on Wednesday was filled with non-shareholders, creatures of the promotor, who made it their business to shout down all opposition and to cheer to the echo every platitude or falsehood; but it will not do, for the country is getting weary of this sort of thing, and even the fools who have lost are beginning to learn temporary wisdom.

It is difficult to say whether one should lament or rejoice over the downfall of a man like Dufferin, of high if fictitious reputation as diplomatist. Undoubtedly he possesses much superficial cleverness, ready eloquence, and a capacity for graceful posing, which have carried him well through the parts he had to play, but he never was a man of solid qualities for a statesman, and all his life long he has been, like too many other noblemen, hard up, partly through his own habits of extravagance, and partly because he is an Irish landlord. Pity, however, for him in his present degradation is checked by the thought that his conduct is relatively worse than that of hundreds of men of his order.

DECOYED BY NOBLE NAMES.

It has become the habit for those of our titled individuals whose rent rolls may have become slender or whose possessions are under mortgage to an extent which leaves them without a net income to sell their names to such adventurers as this Wright. They know nothing about business, and when the pinch comes are ready, as Dufferin was last Wednesday, to boast of their ignorance and plead it as an excuse. Why the public still faithfully follows these decoy names I cannot imagine, but it does as surely as the gudgeon a fly. Time after time revelations of the kind I have described warn it that noblemen are ornamental bipeds in general, perfectly useless in business, but a new crop of fools is born every week, they say in the city, and it obeys only its snobbish instincts. I can't help feeling, however, that in the silent breast of the great multitude there is a gathering wrath of open contempt of the immoral considerations so callously exhibited by the men who set themselves up under an artificial order of society as heads of the people and masters of the country's destiny.

Come we now to the Duke, his Grace of Norfolk, to wit, hereditary Earl Marshal and Chief Butler of England, and a man plastered all over with titles, more or less hoary with age. This gentleman is mentally a humble nonentity, who in private station might have attained to and filled successfully the position of a methodical and confidential secretary. His birth made him premier peer of England, and his devoutness sent him to Rome as a Catholic union pilgrim to pray for the restoration of the temporal power of the Pope. I judge no man's faith and have not one word of criticism to offer upon the Duke's attitude toward the head of the Roman Catholic Church, but politically his reckless indiscretion is something too awful to contemplate. It is not merely that all the sects of this country are aroused by the great peer daring to hold language of this kind toward the papacy but, because of the inflammable condition of Italy, Norfolk's words may prove like oil on fire there. The battle between clericalism and secularism in all its forms is ever ready to break out with fury in that unhappy country, and the position of the King and the monarchy is an altogether precarious one between the contending factions.

THE DUKE OF NORFOLK.

Our premier peer throws himself into the breach on the side of the irreconcilable clericals, and expresses a desire that can only be looked upon by Italians as a proclamation of hostility toward their State as now constituted. No immediate mischief, however, may follow beyond newspaper and pulpit outcry, but the ultimate consequences might be serious enough. We know quite well who the Duke of Norfolk is, what an amiable noodle he is, but it is impossible to convey that knowledge to the people of another country, least of all, perhaps, to Italy, whose associations with England are so intimate and whose noble Roman families are so much connected to ours by ties of blood. To Italians a great peer is a mighty personage, whether he carries an ass's head on his shoulders or not.

These have been welcome interludes, but South Africa haunts us still with a growing horror and dread. The veil has fallen between us and that country, thanks to the military press censorship and the alarming reticence of Kitchener. We try to assure ourselves that the Cape Dutch will not rise, that the skirmishes charily and half-reported mean British victories, and that the enemy is daily becoming more destitute and less willing to continue the conflict. Those Rhodesite administrators sent up to the Orange River Colony and to the Transvaal to represent the British civil Government have seemingly been concocting sham appeals for peace, just as they formerly concocted lying appeals for protection, and we try to believe all this, feeling all the time that the situation is growing steadily worse.

CONDITION OF THE CAPE DUTCH.

I do not believe that the Cape Dutch would rise even now if they were wisely handled, but what can you expect from a high-spirited people, resolute to maintain their independence, when they find themselves dragooned by men like Milner, their press silenced, their laws suspended, and soldiers, who may now and then be humane men, but who are oftener ignorant martinets, puffed up with their own importance, and capable only of playing the bully, placed in practically irresponsible authority over them? If inconceivable, it could be imagined how the people of New York State or any other State in the American Union would behave were they thus treated. The Cape Dutch are being compelled to rise, and at the best season of the year for the success of the movement. While this is the case, there is no disguising the fact that our army in the two annexed States is hungry and short of supplies, and held in check by handfuls of men at almost every point. The worst of it is we still refuse to look the facts severely in the face, and go meandering on with the Government, sullen and silent, just as we did during our dispute with the American colonies.

Affairs on the Continent get little heed from us unless when they seem to touch our interests, but some languid notice has been taken this week of the Austrian elections, because they are of sinister import. The new Austrian Parliament promises to be more unworkable than its predecessor because it will be more acutely sectionalized. The only party in the late Reichsrath that offered a chance of fusion between the several races or fragments of races composing the heterogeneous empire of the Hapsburgs was the Socialist one, and it has lost ground to the benefit of Nationalists of all hues. Therefore, the wrangle of tongues will be worse than ever, and probably bring about an early attempt to revert to absolutism, out of which Prussia may see her opportunity once more to extend the borders of the German Empire.

I do not set much store by the aspirations of the President of the French Chamber of Deputies, who dreams of a peaceful return of Alsace and Lorraine to the French Republic, but there is no knowing what may happen in Europe should Austria begin to go to pieces. Not only in the West, but in the East, that break-up must mean, at the very least, the danger of a general European war. And China, flaccid, passionless, but enduring, still plays disintegrator.

Appeal to Help a Young Man.

The Brooklyn Bureau of Charities appeals for $100 to pay for the maintenance in the Adirondacks of a young man with consumption. The young man has always been self-supporting, and in his last position, which he held for a number of years, was most valuable, and was highly thought of both for his honesty and competency. The young man is now in the Adirondacks, and there is good reason to believe that a longer stay there will result in such a measure of recovery that he can become again self-supporting.

Appeal for Aid to Deaf-Mutes.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As the general manager of the Church Mission to Deaf-Mutes, incorporated in 1872, I am daily needing money with which to minister to sick and needy deaf-mutes or their families, although the great majority of our silent friends are earning their living in various positions. I need just now $30 with which to pay the funeral expenses of a deaf-mute woman, who has died, after a long illness, leaving five children.

Express Trust Not Contemplated.

Senator Thomas C. Platt, President of the United States Express Company, yesterday denied the rumor from Chicago that J. Pierpont Morgan, James J. Hill, and others recently involved in railway deals would try to force the express companies out of the field in order to let the railroads gain absolute control of all express business.

BRITISH FEAR DECADENCE

London Papers Continue to Draw Comparisons with America.

American Machine May Revolutionize Woolen Trade—Inroads of American Confectionery and Fruit.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—Great Britain's decadence is becoming quite a popular theme. Self-debasement and self-flagellation seem to be congenial to the chastened spirit of the nation, forced to realize, through the accumulation of reverses, military, diplomatic, and industrial, that the dream of predominance is a thing of the past. It is almost a daily occurrence for some great London newspaper to parade the shortcomings of the country, instituting comparisons with the United States and Germany little complimentary to Great Britain. "Lost opportunities," says The Morning Post, "is the keynote, and the Britain which could dictate its will to the ends of the earth is to-day a myth."

The great woolen and allied trades threaten to be revolutionized by an American machine which is now operating at Bradford. "What it all will open up is not fully apparent at first sight," says The Bradford Observer, "but it looks as if the position at present occupied by Arkwright and Crompton in the world of inventors during the nineteenth century is to be superseded by Drury in the twentieth. How is it that this idea was left to a Yankee lawyer to bring out?"

Drury's invention is described as the simplest yet devised. It is capable of spinning the toughest yarns from asbestus or peat moss without difficulty. Drury left Boston two years ago.

The Daily Telegraph calls attention to the enormous increase in the use of American confectionery in England, which, it says, would be even greater than it is were the American manufacturers to show more elasticity in trade methods. It also declares that America is soon likely to be supplying "jaw-bricks." The most suitable campaigning samples have already been submitted to Lord Roberts, and have been sent back for improvements. These are now assured.

"Small wonder, indeed," says The Daily Telegraph, "that the British fruit-grower has cause for complaint that the demand is not what it was for his products." California fruit pulp appears to be making tremendous inroads into the English jam trade.

Even from the Philippines come recommendations to adopt American methods. Mr. Perceval of London, writing to The Times from Manila, urges the British troops in South Africa to use the tunic pleat, worn by the American troops, to protect the spine, and also their webbing cartridge belt, and method for preserving surgical dressing. The suggestion about the cartridge belt is already in force. An American firm has a newly erected factory here turning out, to its full capacity, these belts for the War Office.

Senator Proctor's Italian marble corner draws forth from to-day an indignant protest. It says:

"Who, for instance, is Senator Proctor, that he should create for his own enrichment a scarcity of Carrara marble, in which the highest art of all ages in Europe has found its noblest expression?" and so on in a similar strain, maintaining that the Senator has no right to assume a dictatorship of the world's art.

But it is not only in commerce that the spread of the American leaven is so patent. In Rugby football the British are now beginning to closely imitate the distinguishing features of grid-iron play. At the recent England and Wales match, when 40,000 spectators were present, the experts were amazed to see what was called "the puzzling hand-to-hand passing of the Welsh team." This is nothing more than the familiar "snapping back" practised by all American colleges, but which is a revelation here. It had no small effect in securing for Wales a sweeping victory.

NO AMERICAN ADVERTISEMENTS.

Certain Classes of German Trade Journals Will Not Accept Them.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—In compliance with special instructions from the State Department, Consul General Muson, at Berlin, has submitted a report setting forth the restrictions placed upon the publication of advertisements for certain American products by trade journals in Germany.

The movement, states the Consul General, dates back to 1896, when the growing competition of American bicycles began to alarm the German makers to a considerable extent. It was at first attempted to secure an advance in the rate of duty on American wheels, but, failing in this, the association of German manufacturers adopted the plan of boycotting, as far as possible, advertisements of American wheels and bicycle sundries in the trade papers of the country. These trade journals were given to understand that they were to choose between the patronage of German bicycle makers and their foreign competitors, especially those of American nationality. Under this pressure most, if not all, of the German bicycle publications refused to accept American advertisements, and still maintain their restriction.

Mr. Mason also states that a move to likewise exclude American sewing machine advertisements—even in the daily press—was set afoot. As far as the daily newspapers were concerned, this movement failed, as the papers refused to be bound by such a narrow policy, and freely accept advertisements of American products on the same terms as those of native origin. Some of the trade publications, however, which are dependent upon the patronage of the home trade, have been forced into excluding American advertisements of this character.

On the whole, the publications which have been dominated by these movements are relatively of small importance, states Mr. Mason. The bicycle companies state that, while at first the restriction hampered them somewhat, they now advertise in illustrated German periodicals to much better advantage.

SOCIETY IN WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Owing to the continued illness of the President, Secretary of War and Mrs. Root recalled their invitations for the Cabinet dinner that was to take place this evening.

Senator Depew this evening gave one of the largest dinner parties of the season, his niece, Miss Paulding, doing the honors. The guests were the British Ambassador and Lady Pauncefote, the German Ambassador, Justice and Mrs. Gray, Justice and Mrs. Brown, Gen. and Mrs. Miles, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne MacVeagh, Mr. and Mrs. Newlands, the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Mackey-Smith, Mrs. Slater, Mrs. Johnston, Mrs. Wallach, Senator Hale, Senator Allison, Mr. Kasson, Miss Barbey, and Mr. Edie.

Mrs. James W. Wadsworth, wife of Representative Wadsworth of Genesee, N. Y., was the hostess at a delightful tea to-day to introduce her daughter, Miss Wadsworth, to society. Receiving with the debutante and her mother were Mrs. George B. McClellan, Miss Loring, Miss Carlisle, Miss Carola de Peyster, and Miss May, the young ladies all being débutantes of the present season. Miss Wadsworth wore a becoming gown of light blue crêpe de chine. Miss Kean and Mrs. Mulligan did the honors of the tea room. Between 200 and 300 guests were present.

Miss Helen Hurst, daughter of Bishop Hurst of the Methodist University, gave a tea this afternoon at the family residence, on Connecticut Avenue, being assisted by Miss Austin and Miss Reed of Boston.

The wedding party selected to attend Miss Kathleen Beale Owen and William Gordon Crawford of New York, whose marriage on Jan. 24 will be an important social event, includes Miss Christine Owen, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, and Marshall J. Gasquet of New York as best man, with the following ushers: Acosta Nichols and Albert Fairfax of New York, Count Von Hacke of the German Embassy, Robert E. Lee, Jr., of Virginia, James Charles Crawford, Walter Davidge, Jr., William S. Reyburn, and John De Morant Crawford of Cornell University. The ceremony will take place at St. John's Church at noon, to be followed by a breakfast at the home of the bride, on Eighteenth Street.

Senator and Mrs. Fairbanks gave a dinner party this evening, among their guests being Justice McKenna and Miss McKenna, Senator Kean and Miss Kean, the Solicitor General and Mrs. Richards, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Patterson, the Controller of the Currency and Mrs. Dawes.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Townsend gave a dinner this evening to Mr. and Mrs. Von Bruening.

ART AT BUFFALO EXPOSITION.

Statuary and Sculptural Ornamentation Will Be a Feature.

Among the many remarkable features of the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo none will surpass in interest the exhibit of statuary and the elaborate sculptural adornment of the grounds, to which about thirty-five of the best known sculptors on the American continent will contribute their art creations.

There will be some 125 original groups of statuary, which will be used principally in the embellishment of the Triumphal Bridge, forming the grand entrance to the main court of the Exposition from the south, the fountains of the esplanade, the court of fountains, the electric tower, and the plaza.

Isidore Konti is modeling the sculpture for the Temple of Music, which will be one of the most profusely adorned. A striking group entitled "Heroic Music" will be one of four large groups to be placed over the entrances to the Temple of Music.

At the western end of the esplanade will be fountains having sculpture illustrating the meaning and purpose of the buildings in that portion of the grounds devoted to mines and mining, horticulture, &c. The "Fountain of Nature" will be the main fountain in this group. Other groups will illustrate such subjects as "Mineral Wealth," "Floral," and "Animal Wealth."

The United States Government is making the Philippines, Hawaii, Guam, and Tutuila properly represented at the exposition. A special building is in course of construction which forms one of the triangular groups arranged by the Government. This building is 150 feet square, decorated in keeping with the general plan of the Exposition.

The automobile and cyclist exhibit promises to be the most representative ever seen. There will be a large and complete display of bicycles, representing all stages of progress, from the heavy and clumsy irontired velocipedes to the pneumatic-tired modern machines, including the "good old ordinary" or high-wheel bicycle fitted with small solid rubber tires which was first exhibited in this country twenty-five years ago, at Philadelphia in 1876.

A grand carnival of cycle races will be held in the Stadium which is now being erected on the Pan-American grounds. This vast arena will be in many respects equal to the famous old Colosseum at Rome.

The leading men and women of the country are very much interested in the Exposition and particularly in their great convention on July 11. It is reported that many of them, particularly those from Buffalo, when registering at hotels all over the country, write "Buffalo, 1901," on the register as naturally as though it were a part of their names.

Visitors to the Exposition will have an opportunity to see the wonderful installation of the big power house of the Niagara Falls Power Company, which will supply the electric energy used on the Exposition grounds. It is considered the most marvelous electrical power plant of the time. The power house proper is a stone building nearly 500 feet long. The front section is occupied by the company's offices, and to the rear stretches the one-story section known as the dynamo room. Beneath this room there is a great slot, over 400 feet long and 179 feet deep, cut out of solid rock. It is this slot, or wheel-pit, that forms the home of the ten powerful turbines that give power to the dynamos or generators in the station. These turbines are each of 5,000 horse power capacity, and they are connected to the dynamos by a tube shaft which extends up the wheel-pit. The construction is such that the weight of the shaft and the revolving parts of the dynamos practically float upon the water that passes through the turbine.

The water that supplies the turbines is taken from an inlet canal connected with the upper Niagara River. This canal is 1,450 feet long, 100 feet wide at the tail end and 180 feet wide at the entrance. Its normal depth of water is 12 feet. Passing from this inlet canal, the water goes into penstocks and is carried down the wheel-pits upon the turbines, the head being about 136 feet. After passing through the turbines and developing power, the water flows into the big tunnel tail-race.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Mrs. Charles E. Russell.

Mrs. Charles E. Russell, whose husband is a member of the editorial staff of The New York Journal, died at her residence, 100 Columbia Heights, Brooklyn, yesterday, after several weeks' illness from typhoid fever. Her maiden name was Abby Osborne Rust, and she was born in St. Johnsbury, Vt., thirty-five years ago, her father, John R. Rust, being a well-known railroad constructor.

Mrs. Russell was an uncommonly well-educated and cultured woman. She was a classical student, and in 1895 published a "Paraphrase of Horace's Art of Poetry." She was also a noted Shakespearean scholar, and for several years had delivered lectures upon the poet's writings, in the course of the Brooklyn Institute.

Mrs. Russell was also a talented musician, and last Winter, when her husband delivered a series of lectures upon "Art Poetry," she accompanied him upon the piano, to expound the melody of various poets.

Her husband, son, and mother survive her.

Obituary Notes.

OREN B. EARL, a wealthy banker of Sandy Creek, N. Y., died suddenly yesterday, aged ninety years.

FREDERICK WICKHAM of The Norfolk (Ohio) Reflector, the oldest editor in Ohio, died yesterday after a long illness. He was eighty-nine years of age. He leaves a family of twelve children, among them ex-Congressman Wickham.

The Rev. JOHN SCHNEIDER, for sixteen years the Presiding Elder of the Evangelical Association of North America, died Friday night at his residence, in Chicago. He had been a clergymans since 1836. He was born in Bavaria in 1832, and came to this country in 1851.

JAMES F. CULLIGAN, proprietor of the Elmhurst Hotel, Carthage, N. Y., died suddenly of heart disease yesterday morning, aged fifty years. He was born in England, and spent the greater portion of his life in Utica. He served as Collector of Customs at Morristown under Mr. Cleveland.

WILLIAM J. WILLIAMS, forty-five years old, died at his home in Mount Vernon yesterday. He had been sick a long time. Mr. Williams was a prominent Republican and for many years was clerk of the Board of Education of Mount Vernon. He resigned a year ago on account of failing health. He was a brother of Postmaster David O. Williams of Mount Vernon. He leaves a family.

The Rev. DANIEL P. WARD, pastor of the Church of the Holy Name, died of heart disease at Kingston, N. Y., yesterday morning, aged forty-seven years. He was formerly pastor of St. Columba's Church and St. Brigid's Church, in New York, and St. Patrick's Church, in Newburg. He was well known for his activity and charity.

THOMAS H. TAYLOR, an importer of earthenware, at 60 Murray Street, died yesterday at his residence in Orange, N. J. He had been ill with the grip. Mr. Taylor was born in Henley, England, in 1832, and came to the United States in 1848. He leaves a wife and eight children. Funeral services will be held at the residence on Tuesday.

Dr. WILLIAM CAMPBELL DODGE, who settled in Chicago in the early sixties, died there yesterday. Dr. Dodge was born in Hartland, Vt., in 1842. He was active in the work of establishing the Evanston Avenue Congregational Church and practiced medicine in that neighborhood until his health became impaired in 1886. He then moved to Mount Dora, Fla., where he practiced his profession and took an active interest in the affairs of the South Florida Chautauqua. Dec. 31 he returned to Chicago.

Mrs. JANET MCADAM, mother of Supreme Court Justice David McAdam, died yesterday after a short illness at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary D. Moore, at 15 West One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Street, of old age. Mrs. McAdam's maiden name was Lauder, and she was born in Glasgow, Scotland, in 1810. She was married in 1830, and shortly after came to the United States. She leaves five children, twenty grandchildren, and five great-grandchildren. The funeral will probably take place on Tuesday.

DIED.

AMY.—On Friday, Jan. 11, 1901, at his residence, 18 West 27th St., after a lingering illness, Henry Amy, in the 73d year of his age.

Requiem mass at the Church of St. Vincent de Paul, West 23d St., on Monday morning, Jan. 14, at 10 o'clock. It is earnestly requested that no flowers be sent.

New York, January 12th, 1901.

At a special meeting of the Board of Trustees of the EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS BANK held at the Bank this day, it was

Resolved, That the members of this Board have heard with profound regret of the death of their friend and associate Trustee, HENRY AMY, who for twenty-six years, as a member of the Board, has by his valuable services, and genial, kindly manner endeared himself to all who knew him.

He was elected a member of this Board of Trustees January 21st, 1875, and served on the Finance Committee from 1879; being elected its Chairman in 1892, which position he held until his death.

His great financial ability was ever at the service of the Bank, and by his long years of practical experience in banking, his advice and services proved most valuable to this institution of which he was an honored member.

Resolved, That the Trustees extend to the family their sincere condolence; that an engrossed copy of these Resolutions be sent to them as an expression of sympathy, and that the Board attend his funeral in a body.

Committee { JAMES G. JOHNSON, JOHN BYRNE, JOHN CRANE.

JAMES MCMAHON, President.

At a special meeting of the IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY, held January 12th, 1901, the following Resolutions were unanimously adopted:

By the death of HENRY AMY the Irish Emigrant Society has lost one of its oldest, most useful and honored members.

For over twenty-five years he was prominent in its councils, active in its management, and heartily interested in its mission.

Though not of Irish birth or extraction, he was as zealous for the welfare of the emigrants from that country as his associates, who were its sons or their descendants. Much of this feeling was the outgrowth of his kindly impulses, coming from a generous heart, and inspired by his solid practical faith, which was manifested in his unostentatious Christian piety.

Mr. Amy was at the time of his death a member of the Finance Committee, upon which he had served for many years. His prominent position and long experience in financial affairs rendered his counsels valuable to the business management of the Society, and his genial manner and thoughtful consideration for others endeared him to all who came in contact with him, and especially to his fellow-members, who sincerely mourn his loss, and who will miss his presence amongst them.

In private life he was a model husband and father; an edifying examplar of the true Catholic; in public he bore an unblemished reputation.

His associates of the IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY, desiring to manifest their sorrow and sense of loss occasioned by his death—

Resolve, That this Memorial be inscribed upon the minute-book of the Society, and that an engrossed copy thereof be presented to his bereaved family, with the expression of their deepest regret and sympathy.

Committee { CHARLES V. FORNES, MICHAEL E. BANNIN, JAS. MCMAHON.

JAMES RORKE, President.

A BOAT TO BEAT COLUMBIA

Bristol Cup Defender Being Planned with That Idea.

DIMENSIONS OF NEW YACHT

Herreshoffs Will Have the Syndicate Yacht Overboard Before the Challenger Is Launched.

Special to The New York Times.

BRISTOL, Jan. 12.—As the construction of the Bristol cup defender progresses, many things have cropped out on the surface to substantiate the reports that the new Bristol craft would have longer ends, shoaler draught, and wider beam than the Columbia, giving her a power for carrying sail that could only be arrived at by the finest comprehension of speed as applied to racing boats worked out in the most scientific manner of the present day. Below are given some of the principal dimensions of the craft that it is thought will be the one to race against Shamrock II. next August, over the New York Yacht Club course.

The Bristol designer, it is stated from one who is in close touch with boatbuilding interests in Bristol, although apparently exerting his utmost ability to beat the Lawson and Lipton boats in turn, is in reality studying with all the science and skill at his command to beat the Columbia by a respectable margin, knowing that the old boat is endowed with speed that it will be difficult for all-comers to beat, if not to equal. It is said the object at Bristol is to produce a craft that will outsail the Columbia by eight minutes over a thirty-mile course.

In line with the early start of the Bristol designer in preparing a design and model of the boat now being built, he is now using the utmost endeavor in shaping his plans toward taking the lead over all others in the matter of speed in construction, with the double object of having a faster boat than either the challenger or other possible defenders, and of getting the Belmont syndicate boat in the water before any of the other boats are ready for launching. This plan of essaying the lead in everything pertaining to the production of fast yachts is now a new one. It has been characteristic of the Bristol man for a long time. It will be remembered that the Columbia was overboard two weeks or thereabout in 1899 before the Thorneycrofts had Shamrock in the water. Columbia was launched June 10 and was placed in commission by Mr. Iselin on June 25, the day the Shamrock was launched. Whether the Bristol man will lead Designer Watson in the launch this season or not it is now too early to predict, but this much is known, nearly all the metal for the Bristol boat has been received, and it will be a plain course of sailing with construction as soon as the frames are all beat.

Convenience is frequently sacrificed in Bristol in order to lead, as evidenced by the floating of former cup defenders at times when conservative minds would suggest that they be kept in the shop longer, where the work of fitting and finishing could be carried out more commodiously than it could be alongside a wharf quite a distance from the tools, material, and other things that figure in the construction.

The hustle is now going on in Bristol to get the boat afloat the third week in April. The Lawson boat and the Lipton craft being now all prepared for in the matter of measurements, it will work no disadvantage to any one to give here a few of the principal dimensions of the Bristol boat.

The length over all will be 135 feet, some 3 feet greater in length than the 1899 boat. With longer ends than that craft, the new creation will have less draught, a flatter floor, and more rounding bilge than was shown in the Iselin-Morgan boat of two years back. The draught will be 19 feet 3 or 4 inches—about a foot shoaler draught than her predecessor. It is claimed that no power is lost by less draught. The turn of the midship section frames in the blacksmith's shop is strong proof of the theory expressed of a flat floor and rounded bilges, besides showing that the boat will show on her midship section freeboard more of a "tumble home" than that of a "wall-sided" craft.

The waterline will be carried out almost to the last fraction of measurement to conform to the letter of the challenge, that is 90 feet. The beam of the Bristol boat is over a foot greater than the beam of the champion 90-footer of 1899. A steel tapeline laid athwartships from rail to rail will show a breadth of 25 feet 6 inches, or, to be more definite, a broader beam by 1 foot 6 inches than has the Columbia. The freeboard will be 11 feet 6 inches in height, a matter of only 3 inches less than appears in Columbia's freeboard. Again the benefits of the flat floor, fuller bilge, wider beam, and larger overhangs are seen to advantage in this respect—windage is eliminated greatly by a low freeboard. The deck crown is in height 10 inches, similar to that of Columbia. The depth of the Bristol boat from the surface of the crown of the deck down to the base line of the keel measures 23 feet 9 inches, or 1 foot 3 inches less depth than the cup defender of two years ago.

William Butler Duncan, Jr., visited Bristol yesterday to view the progress of the boat that he is to manage the coming yachting season. He was accompanied by another yachtsman, both going with the designer through the different departments of the Bristol shops and talking over plans for about three hours.

Mr. Duncan was asked if everything was getting along to his satisfaction relative to the building of the defender. His reply was that the progress was most satisfactory, that it could not be bettered. He had not the least idea when the craft would be ready for launching, but presumed it would occur early in the season; yet how early he was at present unable to say. The setting up of the frames on the lead keel would soon take place, yet he could not tell the exact time when the work would begin. As to the making of the boat's sails, he intimated that good headway had been acquired in the matter.

He was unable to tell the name the craft will be given. The conversation turning to the Boston boat, Mr. Duncan said he had heard that morning of the arrival of the lead for the keel.

It was evident that he did not care to say much about the Bristol boat at this time, and, assuming a serious mood, Mr. Duncan expressed regret at the recently published reports about the boat, saying, among other things, that he did not consider it at all patriotic to make public matters relating to dimensions of various parts of the craft, which he had noted quite recently. He likewise talked at length on the subject, adding, with some solicitude, that the possibilities of British yachtsmen benefiting by the published reports from this side of the water is a matter that should be considered. Continuing, he said: "If it should happen that the Bristol craft was defeated in the cup races by the challenger and the cup lost, then the persons connected with the management and ordering of plans for the defender would receive much blame from the public."

HANLEY SYNDICATE HOPEFUL.

Expect to Know To-morrow Whether the Boat Will Be Built.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 12.—The members of the Hanley syndicate were in session all this afternoon and evening. The yacht will, if built at all, probably be built of wood, and built in Hanley's yard from his original plans. Some of the members have been in favor of a metal boat, claiming that a wooden yacht will not stand the terrific strain which will be forced upon her. During the last few days several experts have been consulted on the matter, and they are of the opinion that the yacht, if built of wood, should stand the strain. Mr. Hanley has been of this opinion from the very start, and has put forth good arguments to back up his position. Only a few members who were against a wood yacht were not convinced.

After the meeting one of the members of the syndicate said:

"We have talked the matter over at length, but there are so many details that we have not yet made what might be called any decisions. The main question has been regarding the material of which the yacht should be constructed."

"When do you expect that you will know for a certainty whether you are to place the order or not?" was asked.

"We should know by the first of next week just where we stand. The money has been promised by those interested. There is more than enough. I stand ready with my share, as do some of the others. In fact, I will go a long way beyond my share to bring this thing to a close. I expect that by the first of the week I shall be able to give you a definite answer."

HOUSEBOAT FOR LORILLARD.

An Elaborate Craft Ordered to Replace the One Destroyed by Fire.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Jan. 12.—Pierre Lorillard has placed an order with Thomas S. Marvel & Co. of this city to construct for him a houseboat to be used by him on the rivers of Florida, in place of one formerly used, which was destroyed by fire about a year ago. The design is one entirely new and novel, and the specifications call for a craft most elaborate in all its fittings. Lorillard is now in Europe, but he has given instructions to have the boat ready for launching on Aug. 9, at which time he will be here to witness the ceremony. The boat will be taken at once to New York to receive her fittings and then towed to her future home. Her speed will be about eight miles an hour. The dimensions of the house boat as given out to-day are:

Length over all, 125 feet; length on water, 119 feet 6 inches; width of hull, 22 feet; width of interior on guard rails, 25 feet 4 inches; depth of hull, 8 feet 6 inches; draught of water displacement, 137.52 tons. The motive power will be two twenty-five-horse-power gasoline engines.

The hull is to be built of steel, and there will be three decks, containing seventeen staterooms. The lower deck will contain the quarters for the servants, ship officers, medical attendants, with sitting room, bathroom, kitchen, icehouse, storeroom, and the room for the gasoline engines.

The second deck will be for the owner. There will be two large sitting rooms, one forward and one aft; a large dining room aft, with pantry and wine room attached. A dumb waiter will connect the dining room and kitchen below. Each stateroom will have a bathroom. The upper deck will be open, except two large conservatories, smoking room, and bathroom. The latter will have hot and cold, salt, and fresh water. Everything on the boat will be of the best and latest improvements.

Defender's Skipper at Deer Isle.

DEER ISLE, Me., Jan. 12.—Capt. Rhodes, who is to command the Herreshoff cup defender, arrived at Deer Isle to-day to select a crew for the yacht. He was unable to make the trip about the island, however, on account of the storm, of blizzard severity, which prevailed all day. Capt. Rhodes will remain here with friends, and expects to select the crew early next week.

Dennys Building Shamrock II.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—The Dennys, officially corroborating the oft-denied statement that the firm is building Sir Thomas Lipton's America's Cup challenger, the Shamrock II., adds the following:

"Little progress has yet been made, but the arrangements are all completed for rapid construction in the immediate future."

Sir Thomas Lipton's Representative.

The Hon. George Keppel, one of the commercial representatives of Sir Thomas Lipton, arrived on the Cunard liner Umbria from Liverpool last night. He said that his visit was one of business and no way connected with the coming yacht race for the America's Cup.

HARVARD'S ROWING TANK.

Scientific Arrangement Obviates Greatest Possible Resistance of Water to the Oars.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 12.—Prof. Ira N. Hollis, Chairman of the Athletic Committee of Harvard University, has, with the aid of his class of engineering students in the Lawrence Scientific School, devised a rowing tank for the Crimson crew which is probably more satisfactory in its results than any tank which is now in use. The feature of the tank is that the water offers no resistance to the oars. From the time when crews first began to practice under cover this resistance has proved a mighty obstacle to effective work, and the fact that it has at last been overcome is due only to long experiment and investigation. Several months ago Prof. Hollis turned his students from the regular work of their course and put them upon the present device. The result is a machine which is wonderful in its ingenuity and which gives Harvard oarsmen perfect rowing exercise and training indoors.

The difficulty of the old tanks in the resistance of the water to the oars is obviated by two propellers run by electric motors and fixed at the bow of the boat. These are fitted with supplementary tubes, so that the water rushes by the sides of the boat in proportion to the speed with which the oars propel their oars. Underneath the boat, which is placed in the centre of the tank, is a pair of circular deflecting planes. These return the water when it has passed along the sides and make it ready for another passage.

The advantages of this tank over the old one are great. In the old one the water in the basin was dead, and, although holes were cut in the oars to let the water through, it took the greatest effort to send them along. Under the present device the crew are pulling with the water, and as they pull faster than the current there is no resistance but what they make themselves by the speed and vim with which they work.

The tank is in the new bonthouse. It is 65 feet long, 26 feet wide, rectangular in shape, with rounded corners, and has water 30 inches in depth.

THREE-YEAR-OLD WINNERS.

Large Sums Credited to This Class of the Thoroughbred Horse Last Year.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Jan. 12.—A careful compilation emanating from an authority here who stands first as a statistician on the thoroughbred horse shows that in 1900 thirty-three three-year-olds won $5,000 or over on the American turf. As these performers won a total of $321,715 in stakes and purses, it is likely that last year the two and three year olds racing in this country together earned at least $2,000,000 which goes to prove that racing has again reached the boom period of the early nineties. Since these thirty-three three-year-olds won $321,715, and as the two-year-old winners of $5,000 or over captured $373,788. It will be seen that so healthy was racing in 1900 that sixty-three horses captured the enormous sum of $695,503.

Of the thirty-three winning three-year-olds of 1900, David Garrick was the largest money earner, having brought home to his owner $25,610. His closest competitor was Prince of Melbourne, whose win in the Realization Stakes and other races enriched his owner $22,415. The American Derby victor, Sidney Lucas, is third on the list, with $20,759 won, while The Lady leads all the fillies, earning $13,109. She also leads in number of races won, having been first twenty-two times. No three-year-old filly has equaled this record in either England or this country. Of the colts, First Whip leads the list, having been returned the winner in eighteen races.

Of the sires of these stars, Bramble and Kingston tie for first honors. Each has three representatives, the former being the sire of Prince of Melbourne, Greenoch, and King Bramble, the latter of Ildrim, The Lady, and Vulcain. Foniso is represented by Mr. McMeekin and Gonfalon, Imp. Scorpion, by Larkspur, and John Yerkes, and Imp. Candlemas, by Standing and Kamara. Native sires have slightly the best of the argument over imported horses, although the finish is very close, as but seventeen of these stars are by stallions bred and foaled in this country.

The following table gives a complete list of three-year-old winners of $5,000 and over, the times they started, races won, &c., as well as the total amount won by each:

Times first	202
Times second	157
Times third	131
Times unplaced	212
Total amount won	$311,825

Of these crack performers, twenty-two were bred in Kentucky. The others hail from Tennessee, California, Maryland, and Texas, as follows: Sidney Lucas, Advance Guard, James, and Star Chamber are Tennessee's representatives; Vesuvian, Modrine, and Killashandra are from California; Contestor, Sam Phillips, and The Amazon from Maryland, and F. W. Brode from Texas.

The following table includes the largest winning three-year-olds each year from 1870 to 1900. Hanover leads all American three-year-olds, with $80,827, the amount he won in 1887, but he is far short of the world's record in this respect. Donovan, as a three-year-old, in England, in 1889 won the enormous sum of $190,400.

FUTURE FOOTBALL STARS.

Yale to Get Bulk of School Players—Cornelius Daly Goes to New Haven.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 12.—Among the preparatory school football players who graduate to the universities next Spring a larger proportion than ever before will enter Yale. Football leaders at Yale have looked over the field and are satisfied that next year's batch of youngsters will be overwhelmingly superior to the set of men who entered the freshman class last year. Of the freshmen who entered Yale last year, and who are available for football, Bloomer of Andover, of course, was leading favorite.

From Exeter will come Capt. J. J. Hogan, the brilliant right tackle, whose work was one of the mainstays of the team during the season; Rockwell, end, and Preston, half back. Andover, whose team played a fairly successful season, in spite of the game lost to Exeter, will send to Yale Levine and Stoddard, full backs; Reeves and Owsley, half backs, and Coonley, tackle.

St. Mark's nearly errorless season shows that a strong team, represented the school, and of the men who graduate Capt. Hinkle, brut back, and White, right guard, come to Yale. De Rham, half back; Bunting, full back, and Sard, tackle, go to Harvard.

From the Gunery School at Washington, Conn., four men enter Yale and five Harvard. Yale's contingent will be Squires, end; Leroude, centre; Fellows, tackle, and Pond, half back, and Harvard will get Putnam, guard; Sewall, guard; Hammond, half back, and Mead, end. Lawrenceville School's team last year was green and light, so that the five players who will enter Princeton are not above the average. The men who will go to Princeton are Kafer, half back; Keith, end; Tarbell, tackle, and Weatherhead, quarter back. St. Paul's (L. I.) School send from a light team Parsons, half back, to Princeton; Waud, left end, to Cornell, and Morgan, full back, to Harvard. From Mount Pleasant Academy comes to Yale the most noted prep. school player of the season, Cornelius Daly, the half back. Daly, it will be remembered, entered Columbia last Fall, and up to the time when he left the squad at Branford was looked upon as the star man under Coach Sanford. Daly has been at Mount Pleasant since he left the Columbia team preparing for Yale, and he will enter Yale next Fall. Cutler School, where the season was an up-hill struggle, sends no graduates to the colleges in the Fall. Hill School's remarkably strong eleven, which beat all comers with a final score for the season of 187 points to 0, will send six of the graduating players to Yale—Capt. Bowman, tackle; McClintock, end; Shevlin, tackle; Mills, quarter back; Knapp, guard, and Long, half back.

Shadyside Academy had last season the best team in the history of the school, and Andrews, centre, and Keifer, end, come to Yale. Keifer was regarded as one of the best ends in the prep. schools of 1900. The Northwestern Military Academy played a remarkably successful season, with the guards' back formation in regular use, but none of the players will come to Eastern colleges. Chicago University School will send two players to Yale. From the High Schools of this State the great majority of the graduating players come to Yale, as usual. Bridgeport sends four men to Columbia, New Britain High School sends one man to Yale, Hillhouse High School of this city sends four men to Yale, and Hopkins Grammar School of this city four also.

From the foregoing it appears that Yale is to receive the bulk of the football talent in the preparatory schools next Fall. Harvard comes second and Princeton, Columbia, and Cornell each draw several good men. The stars, however, will be Yale's. Yale's contingent will be on the whole made up of heavy men, and there is a dearth of end and quarter back material that will make the Yale coaches look thoughtful when the sizing up comes.

Last Night's Bowling Games.

In the tournament of the Wholesale Drug Trade Bowling Association on Reid's Church Street Alleys yesterday, the Seabury & Johnson team was the only one of six to win two games. The Merck & Co., Church, Dwight & Co., Parke, Davis & Co., and Colgate & Co. teams each won one game and lost one, and the Dodge & Olcott team lost two games and dropped from first to third place in the tournament in consequence. The scores:

FIRST GAME.—Dodge & Olcott—Ely, 149; Ulrich, 127; Ward, 114; Robinson, 163; Howe, 156. Total, 719.

SECOND GAME.—Seabury & Johnson—Zeller, 165; Withers, 109; Caughey, 127; Scrimshaw, 169; Judge, 137. Total, 767.

Dodge & Olcott—Ely, 132; Ulrich, 163; Ward, 158; Robinson, 144; Howe, 162. Total, 759.

THIRD GAME.—Merck & Co.—Darias, 187; Urbach, 116; Smith, 125; Heins, 130; Robinson, 134. Total, 692.

Seabury & Johnson—Zeller, 135; Withers, 126; Caughey, 145; Scrimshaw, 165; Judge, 168. Total, 739.

FOURTH GAME.—Church, Dwight & Co.—Brock, 170; Smith, 131; Parker, 152; Hahn, 127; Schierenbach, 121. Total, 701.

Parke, Davis & Co.—Doran, 137; Nale, 167; Blake, 180; Brunn, 142; Clark, 161. Total, 787.

SECOND GAME.—Colgate & Co.—Barnes, 169; Chrystal, 125; Brush, 126; Faulkner, 128; Colgate, 156. Total, 704.

Church, Dwight & Co.—Brock, 159; Smith, 145; Parker, 117; Hahn, 152; Schierenbach, 139. Total, 712.

THIRD GAME.—Parke, Davis & Co.—Doran, 154; Nale, 128; Blake, 136; Brunn, 135; Clark, 133. Total, 686.

Colgate & Co.—Barnes, 126; Chrystal, 180; Brush, 139; Faulkner, 218; Colgate, 176. Total, 839.

AT THE CRESCENT A. C. TRAPS.

Second Weekly Match for the January Cup Results in a Tie.

The second weekly match for the January Cup at the Crescent Athletic Club traps yesterday afternoon resulted in a tie between F. B. Stephenson and C. H. Chapman, both scoring 49 out of the possible 50. Stephenson broke 20 targets at the expert traps and 23 at the Mauga traps, which, with his allowances of 4 and 3, respectively, made the total of 49. Chapman's allowances were 12 and 10, respectively, and he broke 13 targets at the expert traps and 14 at the Mauga traps. The tie will be decided next Saturday.

Two trophy matches were shot, one ueing won by Dr. J. J. Keyes, after a tie with C. H. Chapman, and the other going to F. B. Stephenson. There were also several sweepstakes shot. The summary follows:

Second weekly shoot for January Cup, 25 targets, expert traps, and 25 targets, Mauga traps, handicaps added:

SHOOTING AT QUEENS.

High Wind Helps the Birds from the Inter-State Park Traps.

Special to The New York Times.

QUEENS, L. I., Jan. 12.—A high wind made good shooting difficult in the tournament of the New Utrecht Rod and Gun Club, held here to-day on the Inter-State Park traps.

The main event on the card was the New Utrecht Gun Club Handicap at ten live birds. In this event H. G. Chapman of New York, J. H. Jack of Brooklyn, J. A. Bennett of Queens, L. I.; A. A. Hegeman of New Utrecht, L. I., and Frank Ray of New York all tied at ten birds and decided to shoot off later for the trophy. President Walter F. Sykes, formerly of the Carteret Gun Club, gained first money in a ten-bird sweepstake race all alone, killing seven of his allotted birds. John E. Gaughen, after a tie with A. A. Hegeman and S. B. Jay, all killing seven straight, won on the shoot-off with a total of nine birds.

The closest competition of the day was a seven-bird sweepstake contest, in which S. B. Jay, H. G. Chapman, and Thomas W. Morfey tied at seven birds apiece, and in the shoot-off Chapman had to kill seven straight again to land the coin. The summaries:

New Utrecht Gun Club Handicap, Ten Live Birds per Man, Handicap Rises.—H. G. Chapman, (28 yards,) 10; A. A. Bennett, (28 yards,) 10; J. H. Jack, (28 yards,) 10; A. A. Hegeman, (29 yards,) 10; F. Ray, (28 yards,) 10; Walter F. Sykes, (29 yards,) 9; S. B. Jay, (28 yards,) 9; John E. Gaughen, (29 yards,) 9; J. H. Thompson, (28 yards,) 9; Charles M. Lincoln, (28 yards,) 8; Thomas W. Morfey, (30 yards,) 8.

Open Sweepstakes, Seven Live Birds.—S. B. Jay, (28 yards,) 7; A. A. Hegeman, (28 yards,) 7; John E. Gaughen, (29 yards,) 7; F. Ray, (28 yards,) 6; H. G. Chapman, (28 yards,) 6; J. A. Bennett, (28 yards,) 6; W. H. Mayer, (28 yards,) 5; W. H. Bischoff, (28 yards,) 3; P. D. Grumway, (28 yards,) 3; J. H. Jack, (28 yards,) 3. Shoot off, Miss and Out.—Gaughen, 9; Hegeman, 8; Jay, 2.

Sweepstakes Race, Seven Live Birds.—Chapman, (28 yards,) 7; Jay, (28 yards,) 7; Morfey, (30 yards,) 7; Major Brooks, (28 yards,) 5; Bennett, (28 yards,) 4.

Optional Sweepstakes Race, Seven Live Birds.—Chapman, (28 yards,) 7; Bennett, (28 yards,) 7; Thompson, (28 yards,) 7; Jack, (28 yards,) 7; Jay, (28 yards,) 7; Walter F. Sykes, (28 yards,) 5, and Brooklyn, (28 yards,) 3.

The Twilight Handicap, Ten Birds.—Sykes, (28 yards,) 7; Bennett, (28 yards,) 6; Ray, (28 yards,) 3; Chapman, (28 yards,) 2.

Squadron A Carbine Match.

Troop 2 of Squadron A duplicated its victory of last year by again winning the silver cup offered by the squadron for carbine proficiency on the armory range. Four teams, consisting of five men each, took part in the contest last night. Besides Troop 2, teams from Troops 1, 3, and a team composed of staff officers contested. Troop 2's score was 285. The team was made up as follows: Capt. Badgley, Sergt. Agnew, Corp. Bates, Privates Putnam and Tingue.

NAVY'S BASEBALL TEAM.

Renewed Interest in the Game at the Naval Academy.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 12.—Interest in the National game at the Naval Academy promises to be greatly increased this season for a number of reasons. First, in the fact that it is quite certain that the Army and Navy will meet at Annapolis on the diamond; then the cadets are seeking a coach for the first time in their baseball history, Capt. Hillebrand of Princeton being suggested for the position, and, then, last, but not least, the Fourth Class that has just come aboard ship has some good material in it to supply the vacancies that occur by graduation and other causes.

The team of 1900 lost, by graduation in June last, Capt. Barthalow and four other members of the nine, Cadets Berrien, Dodd, Ellis, and Osterhaus. Those of last season's team that remain in the Naval Academy are Cadets Byron Long of California, Edward C. Hammer, Jr., of Virginia; Seemes Read of West Virginia, Roy W. Ryden of Iowa, David A. Weaver of Georgia, Charles E. Smith of Ohio, and Harold D. Childs of Vermont. The Captain of the team is Cadet Hammer of Lynchburg, Va., and the manager is Cadet William Norris of Philadelphia.

The cadets have arranged the following games, subject to the approval of the Commandant: University of Maryland, March 23; Lafayette, March 30; Gallaudet, April 27. The games will be at Annapolis.

Almost all the baseball players left from last season's team belong to the football eleven. Long, Read, and Smith played in the game against West Point.

West Point Baseball Schedule.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Jan. 12.—Cadet John H. Poole, manager of the West Point baseball team, has scheduled the following games to be played at West Point: April 22, Union College; April 29, University of New York; May 4, Rutgers; May 11, Lehigh; May 18, Naval Academy, (Annapolis;) May 25, University of Maryland; June 1, Columbia College; June 8, Seventh Regiment. The Captain of the team is Frank P. Lahm of Ohio.

THE FIGHT IN DOUBT.

Saengerfest Officials Determined to Bring About Jeffries-Ruhlin Meeting.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Jan. 12.—The Directors of the Saengerfest Athletic Association to-day held several informal conferences with their attorneys, and then held a meeting with all the stockholders and members at 3 P. M., lasting until 6 P. M., when the following was given out to the press:

Notwithstanding the opposition and difficulties confronting us in the effort to carry out a project that we have felt from its incipiency was not only feasible and right but also permitted by law, we announce that we shall continue in the course heretofore outlined.

For several days the Directors of the Saengerfest Athletic Association have prepared bulletins for the press, but none has created as much local comment as the one issued to-night. It was universally believed, after the general meeting of the shareholders, that the Jeffries-Ruhlin fight and its preliminary would be declared off, but the Saengerfest Association now seems to be determined to fight it out themselves, notwithstanding the local betting is still at odds-on on the fight being finally declared off.

Before leaving his office to-day, Mayor Fleischmann announced that he would be in New York all of the coming week, and he repeated his statement that he would not issue a permit to the Saengerfest Athletic Association until two days previous to the fight, and that it would be a permit for a sparring exhibition, such as is permitted under the Ohio statute. There is very bitter feeling now between the members of the Saengerfest Athletic Association and the friends of Mayor Fleischmann.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 12.—A definite proposition is expected by mail within the next few days, or as soon as the Cincinnati bout shall have been called off definitely.

The Directors and persons who have been connected with boxing matches at Convention Hall are satisfied that the hall would be taxed to its utmost capacity at fancy prices if the permission of the city and county authorities to allow the contest can be secured.

After talking over the subject from every angle and as business men, outside of the benefits to be derived by Convention Hall, several of the hall Directors conceded that the fight would prove no more objectionable than the contests of a similar nature previously held in this building.

PRATT DOWNS COLUMBIA.

Schoolboys Defeat the Collegians in a Close Basket Ball Game.

Pratt Institute basket ball team defeated the Columbia University team by a score of 13 to 11, in a fast game played last night in the Pratt gymnasium, in Brooklyn. The game was hotly contested from start to finish, and was marred by much fouling on both sides. Columbia's play was especially marked with fouls, and it was to this that her defeat was due, as six of Pratt's points were goals after a foul.

The game started with a rush, the ball going into Pratt's territory, where Goodman fouled; Nash threw a goal, and made the first score for Pratt. On the line up the play again surged around Pratt's goal, when Varlan fouled for the Brooklyn team, and Allen threw a goal for Columbia, making the score one point each. On the next line up Benjamin assisted by Marston carried the ball down to Pratt's goal, and threw a pretty score. Varlan again fouled for Pratt, but Allen failed in try at goal. The next score was made for Columbia by Goodman, on a long throw from near the centre of the floor. In the play that followed Varlan fouled for a third time, and Allen was again unsuccessful in throwing for goal.

Then began the series of fouls which caused Columbia's defeat. In quick succession Columbia fouled four times, twice by Goodman and twice by Benjamin. Nash scored three goals on these fouls. Line up:

Columbia, 11.	Position.	Pratt Institute, 13.
Goodman	Right forward	Merwin
Marston	Left forward	Nash
Townsend	Centre	Varian
Benjamin	Right guard	Preston
Allen	Left guard	Ritter

Goals.—Pratt Institute—Nash, on fouls, 5; Merwin, 2; Preston, 2. Columbia—Allen, goals on fouls, 1; Marston, 1; Townsend, 1; Benjamin, 1; Goodman, 2. Umpire—Mr. Meehan. Referee—

LOCAL HOCKEY TEAM WON

Canadians Beaten in the Most Exciting Game Ever Played Here.

VICTORIAS LACKED DASH

Max Hornfeck Shot the Goal That Gained the Victory for the New York Team.

Amid the wildest excitement in which a crowd of 2,300 persons showed its enthusiasm in various ways, the All New York Hockey team made one of the most brilliant and sensational finishes ever seen in this city, and by the most superb play defeated the former champions of the world in the second and final international match last evening in the St. Nicholas Rink. For thirty-five minutes the two sevens battled fiercely for every trifling advantage that might ultimately help toward a score, and it was not until the last moment that Max Hornfeck gained the point that gave his team victory by a score of 2—1. The first half closed with the tally 1—0, in favor of the victors, who were unable to add to the tally they made shortly after play began. In the second half both teams played superb hockey, but the time went on, and all the efforts of New York proved vain. Five minutes were left to play, and defeat seemed sure for the local team. Suddenly the puck was sent skimming into the net, tying the score. A moment later the hard little disk went sliding into the Canadians' net again, and New York was finally in the lead.

Then incited and spurred on to recklessness the Victorias began an attack that was fascinating in its wonderful speed and aggressiveness. Down the rink the four forwards went time and again disregarding everything. But each time in that desperate fight Hunt, Fenwick, and O'Donnell, aided valiantly by Howard and Jennison, took away the puck and sent it hurtling on a return.

Except for the wild enthusiasm and magnificent playing of the last five minute the contest was not so entertaining as the one of the previous evening. The Victorias were not in the same fine condition as on Friday, due, it is said, to the attractions of the metropolis.

The New Yorks, consisting of five men from the New York Athletic Club, one from the St. Nicholas, and one from the Brooklyn Skating Club, played better than the team of the previous evening. O'Donnell had got over his case of "nerves," and played his usual effective game, stopping many slipping shoots. Jennison was an improvement over "Gus" Hornfeck, but K. Gordon fell far below Cobb. New York's defense had improved considerably, but their glaring fault that cropped up throughout the whole contest was inaccuracy in shooting goals. Again and again Howard, who tallied three times on long shoots on Friday, sent the puck with such wonderful velocity that if it had gone straight it could not have helped but land in the net, but on every occasion he missed the posts by a few inches.

When play began Victoria started a fierce attack, but New York brought the puck back and kept it sliding about the Victoria goal. Play continued with varying advantage with both teams putting up lively sort of work. There were frequent scrimmages, but both defenses were perfect. Finally, after Howard had shot crooked three times, Russell carried the puck down close to O'Donnell, where he passed it to Bowie, who shoved the disk into the net.

The second half found the New Yorks more aggressive, and they kept the rubber in their opponents' territory, but inaccurate shooting, combined with their antagonists' defense, prevented a score. Finally, when defeat apparently stared them in the face, Fenwick obtained the disk and carried it down to the corner of the rink by Victoria's goal. He fell, but Howard was close behind, and gaining possesion of the puck passed it to Gordon, directly in front of the Canadians' goal, who made a desperate effort, and shoved the puck into the net barely in the nick of time. Stuart and Gordon were ruled off for rough play. With three minutes to play the veteran Fenwick again got the puck, and by clever stick work and able dodging, carried the rubber down the rink. He passed it to Hornfeck, who sent it crashing toward the Canadian net. Strachan attempted to stop it, but the puck struck his skate on an angle, and carromed past Munro into the net. A thrilling scene of riotous enthusiasm followed this exhibition of New York's superiority. The line-up:

All New York, 2.	Position.	Victoria H. C., 1.
O'Donnell, N.Y.A.C.	Goal	Munro
Hunt, N.Y.A.C.	Point	Strachan
Fenwick, N.Y.A.C.	Cover Point	Yulle
Howard, N.Y.A.C.	Forward	Bowie, Davidson
Hornfeck, N.Y.A.C.	Forward	Russell
K. Gordon, St. N.S.C.	Forward	Locke
Jennison, B.S.C.	Forward	Sturat

Referee—T. W. Post, Brooklyn Skating Club. Goal umpires—"Crit" Ayres, St. Nicholas Skating Club, and Howard Walton, St. Nicholas Skating Club. Time of game—20-minute halves.

The detailed score of goals:

FIRST HALF.

Team and Player.	Score
Bowie, Victoria	1—0

SECOND HALF.

K. Gordon, All New York	1—1
M. Hornfeck, All New York	2—1

Standing of the Hockey Teams.

Hockey in the Amateur League is now in full swing and the struggle for the championship is already being warmly contested by the crack sevens of the New York and Crescent Athletic Clubs, who have each won two games and lost none. The Hockey Club ranks third, with one game lost and won, while the supposedly able team of the Quaker City Hockey Club brings up the rear with a record of two defeats and no victories.

The standing of the teams:

	Won.	Lost.	Tied.	P. C.
Crescent Athletic Club	2	0	0	1.000
New York Athletic Club	2	0	0	1.000
Hockey Club of New York	1	1	0	.500
St. Nicholas Skating Club	0	0	1	.250
Brooklyn Skating Club	0	0	1	.250
Quaker City Hockey Club	0	2	0	.000

Intercollegiate hockey will have its first local game on Jan. 19, when Yale meets Princeton at the St. Nicholas Rink. Princeton is expected to do well in view of the recent defeat she administered to the St. Nicholas Skating Club. The intercollegiate schedule will probably be completely revised this week in view of the fact that Columbia has had to withdraw her seven from the league on account of Faculty rules.

YALE'S TRACK TEAM.

Sheldon Will Be an Entry in the Shot-Put If No Objections Are Raised.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 12.—The Yale track team will be called out for the Winter practice preliminary to the Spring games in a short time. Capt. W. M. Fincke, who played quarterback and halfback last Fall on Capt. Brown's football team, will have charge of Yale's sprinters, jumpers, and strong men this year, and is making every effort to secure the co-operation of the best athletes of the college. Mike Murphy this year takes charge of the physical condition and the training of the men in the various events, and there is good reason to anticipate a successful season.

The hall is decorated rather more handsomely than usual with bunting, wide strips of muslin closing the space between the girders of the roof and gayly colored flags and streamers being displayed everywhere, but the effect of much of the decorative work is lost on account of the glare of the numerous illuminated signs.

The features of the present exhibition in contradistinction to those of the past may be briefly summarized as follows: The almost universal adoption of the coaster brake and the cushion frame, a notable strengthening of all parts, together with a greater refinement in finish, and the advent of the motor bicycle for road use. Another feature which is not a novelty, as it was introduced last year, is the successful application of the cushion frame and the coaster brake to the chainless wheel.

The motor bicycles are not quite as much in evidence as had been generally expected, showing that, although the development of this form of self-propelled vehicle has now reached a practicable stage, the success of the automobile is deterring makers from venturing into the extensive manufacture of the smaller vehicle.

There are few of the larger types of automobiles on exhibition, most of those shown being of the two or three wheeled varieties.

The total number of exhibitors in the present show is sixty-five, which shows to what large extent the consolidation of the trade has progressed. These sixty-five exhibitors, however, occupy some 160 spaces, so that the actual space occupied by the exhibits compares very favorably with that of former shows.

The souvenir collectors found few of the exhibitors ready for them last night, and small brass badges in the shape of a well-known lamp were almost the only souvenirs available aside from the mass of printed matter of every description. By Monday, however, the distribution of the usual advertising novelties will be begun.

The attendance last night was between 4,000 and 5,000, which is a good figure for the short time the show was open. Tomorrow the exhibition will open at 9 o'clock and will remain open until 11 o'clock in the evening, and a larger attendance is, of course, expected.

CYCLE SHOW OPENS.

Motor Vehicles Divide Attention with Latest Improved Cycling Novelties.

At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon the interior of Madison Square Garden presented such a scene of confusion that the opening of the annual Cycle Show at 8 o'clock seemed an impossibility. But the feverish activity of an army of exhibitors and helpers produced a marvelous transformation during the next three hours, and when the doors were finally thrown open the expectant sightseers found the exposition in perfect order, barring only a few vacant booths, for which the exhibits had not yet arrived. By to-morrow morning these, too, will be filled, and the exhibition will be complete.

The arrangement of the show is much the same as in former years. The bicycles and a few motor vehicles occupy the main floor, either grouped in the centre or disposed along the sides and the rear end. In the balcony in front of the first tier of boxes are the exhibits of lamps, tires, sundries, and parts, with an occasional bicycle. There is no track, and the speeding of the motor vehicles will be done in the basement.

INDOOR ATHLETIC GAMES.

Xavier's Middle Distance Runner Victorious in the Two-Mile Run.

An excellent array of events was provided last night in the joint athletic indoor meeting of the Star Athletic Club and Company I, Seventy-first Regiment, held in the Seventy-first Regiment Armory, Park Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street. The entry list was so large that nearly every event except the two-mile run was run off in heats, ranging from seven in the sixty-five-yard novice dash to two for both the one and two mile bicycle handicaps. Most of the finishes were close, and enthusiasm was kept at a high pitch throughout the evening.

The two-mile bicycle race narrowly escaped ending in disaster. In the first heat a bunch of men fell on one of the curves. W. G. Frank, the star indoor rider, and the only scratch contestant, went down in the mêlée, and C. Martin of the Eagle Cycling Club rolled over him. R. Blohm, a 120-yard man from the Brooklyn Athletic Club, came dashing around the curve, and in striving to avoid the spill ran off too far toward the wall and fell, striking a large radiator with such force as to bend one of the pipes. Blohm was unconscious for the time, and had to be carried into a company room on a stretcher. He had a bad cut over his forehead and was suffering from shock, but was not seriously hurt, and after having his head bandaged he was able to go home.

Frank pluckily remounted and got fourth place in the heat, giving him the right to ride in the final, which he won in grand style. J. Doherty of Battery E gave Frank a hot race for half a dozen laps, but when the former coolly forged ahead, Doherty was too worn out to continue and dropped out.

C. Brady, the clever Xavier Athletic Club middle-distance runner, made a grand race in the two-mile run, winning by 5 yards, from 130 yards' handicap, in 10:00 4-5. J. H. Kelly of the Pastime A. C. was second. This victory was Brady's tenth indoor triumph this season.

The regimental half-mile run produced as much enthusiasm as any event of the evening. Inter-company rivalry was expressed in the applause which the different favorites received as they passed their groups of friends, and the whole Armory was in a wild uproar during the race. J. P. Spindler of Company F and A. J. Dillon of Company I had a game run for honors in the last one hundred yards, the former getting the victory by about three feet. Dillon was second, and R. W. Taylor of Company K came third. The winner's time was 2:16 1-5 from 50 yards' handicap. As he finished there were loud cries of foul from many parts of the hall, and the second and third men protested Spindler on the ground that he had elbowed them off the track on the last lap. The judges, however, did not allow it. The summaries:

65-Yard Run, Novice.—First heat won by S. S. Van Clee, New York; time—0:07 3-5. Second heat won by P. B. McCahill, Company I, Seventy-first Regiment; time—0:07 3-5. Third heat won by W. J. Baseball in Regiment Armory.

The Eighth Regiment defeated the Sixty-ninth Regiment in the armory indoor baseball series at the Eighth Regiment Armory by a score of 22 to 8. The visitors were handicapped by the absence of two of their best men, Catcher Hall, who broke his ankle in a game on the preceding Saturday evening, and Centre Fielder Mulcahy. The score:

Circuit for American League.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—President Johnson of the American League said to-day that his league was considering a ten-club circuit. If the plans now under way are successful, the following will be the circuit next season: Chicago, Milwaukee, Cleveland, Indianapolis, Detroit, Boston, Baltimore, Washington, Philadelphia, and Buffalo.

When the question of adding Boston to the circuit first arose, Somers of Cleveland was sent East to spy out Boston, and when he returned, Johnson made a flying trip to Cleveland, where the matter was fully canvassed, and it was found that Boston would make a desirable addition to the League. Buffalo and Indianapolis will be retained, and it will be a stumbling block to the expansion policy of the Western League, which has planned to place a club in Indianapolis, and possibly in Buffalo.

Hugh Duffy is being considered as manager for one of the clubs, and Hugh Jennings is a likely candidate for another. With Manning in Washington, McGraw in Baltimore, Connie Mack in Philadelphia, and Jennings in Boston, all the cities would be provided for except Milwaukee, and there are two men under consideration for that town. They are Duffy and "Jimmy" Ryan.

With the exception of Boston and Philadelphia all the clubs have secured grounds. Mack has options on two locations in the Quaker City, and will take the old Athletic's park if the School Board and the City Council permit it.

AMATEUR SWIMMING RACES.

Three interesting swimming events were held last evening in the swimming tank of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club, being the first club contest of that character held this season. So as to give all grades of swimmers opportunity to show what they could do, the competitors were divided in three classes, and the respective events run off in heats. Those who qualified for the trials next Saturday were:

Class A.—100-Yard Handicap—First heat—Won by G. W. Van Cleaf, L. A. Goodwin second, J. A. Reddy third. Time—1:12 4-5. Second heat—Won by H. H. Reeder, W. C. Miller second. Time—1:08 1-5. Third heat—Won by P. A. Callahan, L. Handley second. Time—1:11 2-5.

Class B.—200-Foot Handicap—Won by J. L. Swope, H. Brocker second, R. Burton third. Time—0:53 1-5. Second heat—Won by A. G. Sivori, J. A. Patterson second, H. H. King third. Time—0:51.

Class C.—100-Foot Handicap—First Heat—Won by R. E. Lalendon, A. W. Roof second, J. Heff third. Time—0:24 1-5. Second Heat—Won by F. Stayley, E. Mott second. Time—0:30. Third Heat—Won by C. P. Osborne, H. H. Casson second, H. Anderson third. Time—0:21¼. Fourth Heat—Won by F. J. Quigg. Time—0:20 3-5.

Golf on Dyker Meadow Links.

Soggy greens and wet grounds presented a poor prospect to the Dyker Meadow golfers yesterday for their weekly competition, but the sportsman's instinct was strong in several enthusiasts, and two competitions were played. One was a bogy handicap, which was won by James C. Powers, who finished 2 down to bogy from 8 strokes handicap, playing the course in 98 strokes. M. T. Lyon, who had 12 handicap, made the best gross score of the day, 96 strokes, but was 4 down to bogy, getting second place, and H. T. Waldron got third, 4 down to bogy, playing the course in 104 strokes, with 14 handicap. The competition was one of a series for a cup presented by F. N. Doubleday.

An eighteen-hole medal-play handicap was the second feature, and this was won by M. T. Lyon. The scores were:

	Gross.	H'd'p.	Net.
M. T. Lyon	96	16	80
H. T. Waldron	104	18	86
James C. Powers	98	11	87

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Week's Business Points to a Quick Recovery of the Market.

INVESTOR BUYS 714 BROADWAY

Latest Dealings by Brokers—Voluntary Sales at Auction—Complete List of the Week's Offerings.

Business has given encouraging signs of a quick recovery from the set-back which it received during the holidays. Transactions actually completed have shown a resumption of activity in several sections, while from the state of pending negotiations, in many instances, it may be confidently asserted that these deals are but the forerunners of larger ones to follow.

Whether from the prospective effect of the rapid transit railroad or from some other cause which at present it is difficult to determine, that neglected section of Broadway between Longacre Square and the Grand Circle has suddenly become the scene of active buying. The deal affecting the Hotel Virginia was completed last week by the taking of title to that property by the Central Realty, Bond and Trust Company. It is only recently that the Livingston estate sold its plot at Broadway and Fiftieth Street, and the Clark estate its frontage of over 100 feet on the south side of Fifty-sixth Street, between Broadway and Seventh Avenue. D. H. McAlpin, only a few days ago, disposed of his holdings at Fifty-fifth Street, while Robert Ferguson bought an apartment-house site on Fifty-fifth Street, just west of Broadway. Still another large deal in vacant property in the same neighborhood is in an advanced stage of negotiation.

The erection of another fine mansion on Upper Fifth Avenue is foreshadowed by Henry Phipps's purchase of the plot 100 by 140 at the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Eighty-seventh Street. Two of the lots included in this site have changed hands three times during the last two years, and the figures made public in this connection are interesting in that they show that prices on that section of Fifth Avenue have very nearly doubled during that period.

A substantial transaction in mercantile property is that reported below, involving 714 Broadway. Of favorable bearing upon the market, also, were two deals in new apartment-house properties—the sale of Felt & Livingston's recently completed structure at the northwest corner of Manhattan Avenue and One Hundred and Eighteenth Street, and the purchase by Max and Simon Bernheimer of the El Nido, at St. Nicholas Avenue and One Hundred and Sixteenth Street.

Of greater general interest, perhaps, than any other event of the week in realty circles was the purchase of the old Real Estate Exchange property, in Liberty Street, by the Chamber of Commerce, which is an accomplished fact, although for some reason formal announcement of it is deferred. The importance of the purchase, from a real estate point of view, would seem to be in the effect upon adjoining properties, owing to the fact that the building to be erected on the plot by the Chamber of Commerce will be only three stories in height.

Latest Sales by Brokers.

Lalor & Berinser have sold for Stern & Schwartz, for $285,000, the twelve-story fireproof building 714 Broadway, 25 by 137.6.

Robert Bull has sold the plot, 50 by 100, on Fifth Avenue, 50.4 feet north of Eighty-ninth Street. It is reported that Joseph Hamershlag is the buyer.

Collins & Collins have sold the dwelling 50 West Fifty-fifth Street to Dr. Howard Collins, who will alter it into a house of the American basement type.

Thomas P. Payne has sold for J. Bentley Squier, Jr., for $55,000, the new five-story flat 255 West One Hundred and Twelfth Street, 37.6 by 100.11.

D. H. Scully and Brettell & Jackman have sold for Mitchell Halliday the three-story dwelling 8 East One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street, 20 by 99.11.

Dr. William Hirsch has bought the four-story dwelling 53 East Sixtieth Street.

William Stonebridge has sold, for Emile Collett, to Simon T. Stern, the plot, 75 by 100, at the southwest corner of One Hundred and Eighty-third Street and Belmont Avenue.

The Auction Room.

No large offerings at auction are yet in prospect, but voluntary and executor's sales of several small properties during the coming week may relieve somewhat the monotony of foreclosures.

Auctioneer Ryan will sell on Tuesday, by owners' orders, the tenements 228 West Twenty-eighth Street and 144 West Twenty-sixth Street. Other announcements by the same auctioneer affect the southwest corner of Grand and Corlears Street, 11 Cornelia Street, and 152 East Sixty-fourth Street.

Ryan L. Kennelly's offerings for Tuesday will include the two 27-foot apartment houses 15 and 17 Manhattan Avenue, the dwellings 2,113 and 2,115 Lexington Avenue, near One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street; 143 East Twenty-seventh Street, and 62 Washington Square South.

Under partition proceedings Auctioneer Smyth will offer on Friday several flats and vacant parcels at Courtlandt Avenue and One Hundred and Fifty-eighth and One Hundred and Fifty-ninth Streets. An adjourned sale of the old St. Nicholas Hotel property, at Mercer Street and Washington Place, is down for Thursday.

There were recorded last week 367 mortgages, for $5,030,797; of which 134, for $2,151,214, were at 5 per cent.; 139, for $1,293,192, were at more, and 94, for $1,576,-391, were at less. In the corresponding week last year there were recorded 402 mortgages, for $4,877,282; of which 127, for $1,652,450, were at 5 per cent.; 167, for $1,253,750, were at more and 108, for $1,991,082, were at less.

New Power-House Plans Filed.

Amended plans for the million-dollar power house to be erected by the Third Avenue Railroad Company on the east side of Ninth Avenue, between Two Hundred and Sixteenth and Two Hundred and Eighteenth Streets, and extending to the Harlem River, were received at the Department of Buildings yesterday. The original plans were filed in 1899 for the Third Avenue Company, while the amended plans are filed by Isaac A. Hopper as agent for the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, as lessee. The new plans specify in detail the iron work of the structure, a feature not contained in the original plans. Westinghouse, Church, Kerr & Co. are the architects.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

In the following list "mtg" stands for mortgage and "R S" for revenue stamps. The war revenue law provides that stamps shall be placed on all conveyances at the rate of 50 cents for each $500 of consideration. This "consideration" has been held to mean only the equity above the mortgage, except in the rare cases where the purchaser assumes payment of the mortgage. The amount of the mortgage plus 1,000 times the value of the revenue stamps on the conveyance should therefore show the true consideration:

REFUSE TO LIVE WITH FATHER.

Hill's Two Daughters Not Tempted by Offer of $1,000 Each.

Supreme Court Justice Gilbert Collins, at Jersey City, yesterday dismissed a writ of habeas corpus asked for by Vincent Hill of New Providence, N. J. Hill sought to recover the custody of his daughters, Emily and Ada, aged seventeen and fifteen years respectively, who had been committed to the custody of the Children's Guardians' Society by the Poormaster of their township. Hill's counsel said that $1,000 had been left to each of the children by their grandmother on condition that they should make their home with their father.

Miss Mary Philbrick, counsel for the society, opposed the motion to grant the writ. She said Hill was not a proper custodian for the girls. She also said that the girls, who were in court, would rather forfeit the legacies left them than return to their father.

Justice Collins questioned the girls privately, and after the interview he said he would dismiss the writ, with permission to the father to see his children at proper intervals, and also with permission to the girls to apply to be returned to their father's custody if at any time they saw fit to do so.

The girls shook hands with their father as they left the courtroom.

EXPLOSION UNDER DANCE HALL

Gas Jet Under the Brighton Broken and Escaping Gas Was Ignited.

An explosion of illuminating gas in the cellar of the Brighton saloon and dance hall, at 57 Great Jones Street, yesterday afternoon partly wrecked the cellar and burned Charles Devenlude about the hands, face, and shoulders.

The explosion, it is thought, was caused by some men in the employ of a brewing company, who were putting barrels of beer into the cellar, allowing one of the barrels to fall against the gas jet, breaking it. Devenlude went into the cellar a few minutes afterward to see that the beer was stowed properly. He carried a lighted candle in his hand and as soon as he reached the cellar the explosion occurred.

The report of the explosion was heard several blocks away. Some wooden platforms used to cover the gratings in the sidewalk were hurled across the street, and a sheet of flame came up the stairway to the street. The headquarters of an engine company are directly across the street, and the prompt arrival of the firemen prevented a serious blaze. Devenlude was found in the cellar painfully but not seriously burned. He was attended by an ambulance surgeon and went home. The damage is estimated at $500, mostly due to the explosion.

NEW TERMINAL AT CLEVELAND.

Old Dispute with the Pennsylvania Company May Be Settled.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 12.—The Pennsylvania Company has made the city a proposition for the settlement of the long-standing litigation for the possession of land on the lake front. The Mayor has passed upon it favorably, and its terms will be embodied in an ordinance which will be introduced in the City Council.

In return for the surrender of its claims upon the land in dispute, the city is to obtain land worth $66,000 needed for the widening of the river, which in itself entails the necessity of a new four-track railroad bridge to be built by the company, a bridge from the bluff at the Union Station over the railroad tracks to the harbor docks east of the river, and the expenditure by the company on Whisky Island, west of the river, of $3,000,000 for harbor docks, warehouses, and loading and unloading machinery.

If the proposition is accepted it will lead to the immediate utilization of the immense dock room on the lake front within the east and west breakwater structures.

FUNERAL OF W. L. TRENHOLM.

Service at the House—Burial Will Be in Charleston, S. C.

Funeral services over the remains of Col. William L. Trenholm, the banker and at one time the Controller of the Currency of the United States, were held yesterday afternoon at the residence, 312 West Seventy-third Street. The Rev. John Huske of St. Thomas's Church read the burial service.

The pall bearers were Col. John C. Calhoun, Heth Lorton, James Duane Livingston, John Thornley, ex-Gov. Hugh Thompson, R. W. Woolley, Julien J. Mason, W. De Saussure Trenholm, George M. Coffin, A. B. Quarrier, George A. Sullivan, and John J. Crawford. All the members of the family were present at the services. The body will be taken to Charleston, S. C., for burial, starting to-day.

Ladies' Night at Schoolmasters' Club.

The New York Schoolmasters' Club had a "Ladies' Night" at the St. Denis Hotel last night, at which about fifty members and their ladies sat down to dinner and afterward enjoyed an entertainment of vocal and instrumental music. The artists were Mrs. A. Douglas Brownlie, soprano; Albert T. Swaynie, violin; Karl Weissert, accompanist; with Miss Ella Moorhouse and Charles W. Pette as accompanists on the piano.

Another Appraisers' Stores Arrest.

Another arrest was made to-day at the Appraisers' Stores in connection with the many robberies that have been troubling Collector Bidwell for the past year. William Sullivan, a laborer, was arrested by United States Marshal Henkel. He had in his possession a small bag of seeds, the value of which was trifling. Sullivan was paroled until Wednesday.

THE CHARTER AMENDMENTS

Discussed Under the Auspices of the Manufacturers' Association.

President Robertson Attacks the Measures Relating to Schools—Passage of Act as a Whole Urged.

Under the auspices of the Manufacturers' Association of New York, about fifty business men and representatives of various commercial bodies met last evening in the rooms of the association, in Montague Street, Brooklyn, to discuss the proposed amendments to the charter as recommended by the Charter Revision Committee, and to urge the Legislature to take speedy action. Ex-Mayor Schieren, Isaac H. Kapper, and James McKeen, all members of the commission, were the principal speakers, after which a general discussion followed. Ludwig Nissen presided.

Toward the close of the evening President Charles Robertson of the Brooklyn Board of Education attacked the proposed amendments as relating to the schools and criticised the commission for not recommending decentralization so far as the school system is concerned and giving the Borough of Brooklyn home rule. Mr. Robertson declared, in effect, that the Borough of Manhattan oppressed the community across the East River, and he thought that Brooklyn would only have her just dues by a separation of the school system.

Ex-Mayor Schieren began the discussion. He gave a brief history of the present charter, and passing to the proposed remedial legislation, said that undoubtedly some mistakes had been made, but on the whole the commission had taken a distinct step in advance of existing measures.

"The principal defect of the present charter," said he, "is that too much thought was given to the idea of centralization and not enough to the people. We have tried to get down to the borough system as far as practicable." One of the strong features of the revision, Mr. Schieren said, is that it gives to the Borough President greater powers and carries out better the idea of home rule.

James McKeen said he had often been asked why there was so much of the charter. He explained that many attempts had been made before to get up "primer" charters, but it had turned out that the general grants to communities were so vague and the short charters had been followed by so much supplementary legislation that great confusion had followed.

"Practically speaking," said Mr. McKeen, "the people should urge the passage of the act as a whole. The danger is that the work will be broken up into separate bills in the Legislature, and the result will be a chaotic condition of affairs. Private interests will likely intervene unless the act is passed as a whole, and I must say that there is danger that the Legislature may get back into the old rut and pass amendments and supplementary legislation, to the detriment of the public good, unless public sentiment demands singleness of purpose." Mr. McKeen said that the recommendation that the Davis law be repealed brought upon the heads of the commission the wrath of the teachers, who felt that their interests were being disregarded.

"If," said he, "the people take the same interest in the revision that the teachers take, the teachers will be outvoted 10 to 1. If the Davis law is not repealed we might as well give up all idea of an independent municipality. If the Davis law principle should be applied to other departments, there is an end to our local independence. I doubt if a large part of the community realizes this."

Among other criticisms, many people had said that there was not enough done in the interests of economy. Mr. McKeen thought the existing Police bill vicious in that the Legislature fixes salaries.

"We propose," said he, "to leave that to the localities, where it should be, to carry out the principle of home rule." Mr. McKeen, after discussing some of the educational provisions, gave way to Mr. Kapper, who said that more vital than the educational subject, which he said he in no way belittled, was the question how to get every-day administration quickly. This led Mr. Kapper into a discussion of economy in administration and the amplification of the borough system. The commission felt, said he, that the Brooklyn authorities should have the power to initiate local improvements in the sewers, highways, lighting, and buildings departments.

"But," he added, "we could not include the police, fire, health, charities, correction, and docks in the plan of decentralization. The people want these to be single-headed commissions, and demand that the Mayor be made responsible, that he have full power of removal. The keynote is the responsibility of the Mayor."

In the general discussion, President Robertson, in attacking the educational recommendations, said that if they are carried, the Brooklyn school system might as well be effaced. Mr. Robertson went back into history beginning in 1898, saying that whenever Brooklyn wanted anything after consolidation, friction was always sure to follow.

"We are placed in a position of a resistless minority," said he, "and that's a grave charge in school affairs. I have been told that Brooklyn is narrow-minded and provincial, and I have also been told publicly that if Brooklyn wants 10 cents from the Public Treasury, she will have to debate for it. I am tired of such things. What had Brooklyn ever got out of the Central Board, and what will she get under the revision? Under this present Central Board you have not had a new building since Jan. 1, 1898, that's been erected on a site selected since consolidation. That's why 44,000 children in this borough are now on a four-hour basis. Chapter 221, (School Recommendations,) is a great mistake, and I want to tell that to the commission. I'll stand for the Davis law, which I opposed, rather than have this state of affairs exist."

"I want to say," said Mr. Schieren in reply, and after defending the commission, "that when we entered the discussion on schools which lasted a month, there was more united opposition to what was proposed than to anything else. When we had finished there was more unanimous approval of the recommendations than of anything else the commission discussed. If the revised charter passes, I believe that many if not most of the existing evils complained of will be eradicated."

Assemblyman Morgan of Kings urged the citizens of the borough to take united action for the passage of the revision as a whole, saying that if amendments are allowed to creep in, little likelihood of legislative action will follow this session. It is probable that a delegation will go to Albany as the bill will probably be introduced into the Legislature this week.

MORE NEW SMALLPOX CASES.

Three new cases of smallpox were discovered yesterday, one of the victims dying on the way to the hospital on North Brother Island. James Brown, twenty-nine years old, a colored stable keeper, who lives at 150 Wooster Street, was kicked by a horse several weeks ago, and was laid up in bed. Dr. Conterno of 1 Charlton Street, who attended the man, noticed Friday night that he had symptoms of smallpox. He notified the Board of Health, and yesterday an ambulance arrived to take Brown to the hospital. The patient had been placed in the vehicle, and the driver had gone but a short distance when the man died. Dr. Conterno said last night that he believed that Brown had contracted the disease after having been kicked. Many friends had called on the man.

John McKlumlisk, twenty-eight years old, of 51 Goerck Street, was removed to North Brother Island during the morning, suffering with smallpox. Margaret Tinto, ten years old, living on the third floor of the tenement at 274 Mott Street, was found to be suffering with smallpox on Friday night. She was removed to North Brother Island yesterday morning, and the officials of the Board of Health went to work to vaccinate all the dwellers in the big tenement who had been exposed to the disease.

Violet Buck, sixteen months old, of One Hundred and Forty-fourth Street and Wales Avenue, who was transferred to North Brother Island several days ago, died from the effects of smallpox yesterday morning.

Oswego's Smallpox Precautions.

OSWEGO, N. Y., Jan. 12.—The local authorities have taken steps to prevent the spread of smallpox now raging in the adjacent towns. A general vaccination of school children and teachers has been ordered, and permission has been obtained from the War Department to use the old hospital at Fort Ontario for smallpox patients. Fears are entertained that the disease may be communicated from Watertown by railroad men.

THE LOSS OF THE TILLAMOOK.

PORT TOWNSEND, Wash., Jan. 12.—The steamer Senator, which arrived to-day from Alaska, brought details of the loss of the steamer Tillamook.

On Thanksgiving Day, with the sea perfectly calm and the Captain and both pilots on the bridge, the Tillamook was run high and dry on the north end of Wood Island, just south of Kadiak Island. Her fifteen passengers and crew were all safely landed, together with their baggage and the steamer's freight. Everything was taken in small boats to Kadiak.

While on the beach at Wood Island it was necessary to post armed guards over the baggage and freight to prevent the crew from stealing everything of value. The passengers were compelled to remain at Kadiak for twenty-nine days. The steamer Aloha picked up the passengers, crew, and freight of the Tillamook at Kadiak and brought them to Juneau, arriving there Jan. 4. The Senator brought down the officers and crew of the Tillamook.

A WITCH HAZEL COMBINE.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 12.—The formation of an important combination of manufacturers of witch hazel is reported.

Though the leading firms interested in the plan refuse to give out any definite statement, it is understood that the combination will include the principal witch hazel makers in Connecticut, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island, these three States being the centre of the industry in this country.

The new company will be capitalized, it is said, at $3,000,000.

CANAL TREATY TAKEN UP.

Under Consideration by Lord Lansdowne—Washington Officials Now Expect Acceptance.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Official information has reached the State Department to the effect that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty as amended by the United States Senate is now under consideration by the British Cabinet officials with a view to finally determining whether the instrument in its amended form shall be agreed to or not. Lord Lansdowne, Minister of Foreign Affairs, now has the papers in hand and is going over them carefully. That the treaty is actually taken up gives promise that an answer one way or the other will be speedily forthcoming, and that there will be no long-drawn-out delay over the negotiations.

There is a prevailing feeling here, unofficially expressed by those who have followed the recent course of affairs, that the indications are favorable to an acceptance of the treaty. It was pointed out in this connection by an official that if a rejection was contemplated it probably would have been made at once, whereas the delay of about two weeks since the amended treaty reached the London Foreign Office gave evidence that there was a desire on the part of the Cabinet officials there to consider the matter with much deliberation in the hope of bringing the two Governments into agreement.

WIFE BEATER SHOOTS HIMSELF

Frederick Maidt, thirty years old, a German, went to his home at 2,266 Second Avenue, intoxicated last night, and after choking and beating his wife, drew a revolver, saying he was going to kill her, the children, and himself. She ran shrieking into the street, and while the police were coming in Maidt shot himself in the left breast. He was taken to the Harlem Hospital a prisoner.

Maidt got home from work in time for supper, but did not eat. He had been drinking, and in talking to his wife he became exasperated and knocked her down. Then he struck her a number of times, and seizing her by the throat, choked her till she could not breathe. He left off as the thought of the revolver struck him, and when he got the weapon he said he intended to kill the whole family.

The woman caught up one of the children in her arms and made the other two follow her. She ran out and Maidt did not run after them.

Neighbors got a policeman. The policeman ran into the house, and as he was going up the stairs he heard a shot, and entering the room found Maidt lying on the floor with a bullet wound in the left breast.

It was said later at the hospital that the wound was not dangerous.

Gave House to Lawyer; Heirs Contest.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Jan. 12.—An action was tried before Justice Dickey, in the Supreme Court, here, to-day, in which Catherine M. Peto and five other heirs of Caroline Ham, who died in Red Hook about a year ago, sued to have set aside a deed to Miss Ham's home in Red Hook, which she gave to her attorney, Frank S. Ormsbee, some time before her death. Miss Ham, in her will, gave the bulk of her estate of $30,000 to her lawyer, and her heirs have heretofore made unsuccessful efforts to break the will. She gave each of her heirs $450.

A petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed yesterday by nine creditors against Charles W. Morgan, who formerly did a stockbroking business as C. W. Morgan & Co. at 71 Broadway, and who is out on bail on a charge of swindling a number of his customers.

The claims of the petitioning creditors aggregate $3,913 for money deposited with him and for accrued profits. These creditors are George Hausmann, $153; Henric Anderson, $889; Nellie Cotter, $500; Thomas Ascaugh, $600; all of Philadelphia; Maggie MacKenzie of Tuxedo, $436; Lucine La Brunerie of Jersey City, $528; S. D. Ayers of Kansas, City, Mo., $100, and E. E. Moore of Washington, D. C., $107.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

New York City.

R. B. PATTERSON & Co.—The Sheriff, who has had a keeper in charge of the place of business of R. B. Patterson & Co., corporation, wholesale dealers in woolens at 15 West Twenty-eighth Street, for the past week, on an attachment for $3,950 in favor of John F. Brigg & Son, has received notice from Weeks, Battle & Marshall, representing Ed. J. Greacen, that the corporation had been adjudicated bankrupt in the United States District Court of New Jersey on Jan. 8. The concern is a New Jersey corporation.

WILLIAM H. EBLING, JR.—Schedules of William H. Ebling, Jr., real estate dealer of 801 Cauldwell Avenue, show liabilities of $422,718, nominal assets of $504,465, and actual assets of $110,956. Of the liabilities, $323,178 are mortgage debts and $09,540 other debts. The assets consist of real estate at the northeast corner of Madison Avenue and Ninety-second Street, valued at $400,000, subject to mortgages and liens of $251,558; Nos. 803, 805, 807, 809, 815, 817, 819, and 821 Cauldwell Avenue, valued at $100,000, mortgaged for $111,392; bills receivable, nominal, $4,465, and actual, $1,015.

Out of Town.

UNITED TANNERS' GLUE COMPANY.—Vice Chancellor Emery, at Trenton, N. J., has appointed Albert C. Wall of South Orange, N. J., and Albert F. Poor of Salem, Mass., as receivers of the United Tanners' Glue Company, a New Jersey corporation with its place of business at Peabody, Mass. The receivers were appointed upon the application of Myer Hecht of New York and Edward L. White of Lowell, Mass. The liabilities of the company are placed at $77,000 and the assets at $85,000. The company is required to show cause at Jersey City on Jan. 28, why the receivers should not be made permanent.

PETITIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

MAX STRAUSS.—Max Strauss, residing at 928 Second Avenue, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $4,104 and no assets.

JOHN T. COUGHLIN.—John T. Coughlin of Watervliet, N. Y., filed a petition in bankruptcy in Utica yesterday. Debts, $2,037.40; assets, nothing.

WILLARD F. CHURTON.—Willard F. Churton of Vernon Centre, N. Y., filed a petition in bankruptcy in Utica, N. Y. Debts, $6,616.03; assets, $247, exempt.

JOSEPH H. CLARK.—Joseph H. Clark, residing at 14 Attorney Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $3,143 and no assets. The debts were contracted principally at Plymouth, Mass., in 1890 and 1891.

LUCIUS W. CONKEY.—Financial troubles which affected the firm of Boyse Fay & Conkey of Chicago, in 1883, resulted in the filing of a petition in bankruptcy by Lucius W. Conkey in that city yesterday. The liabilities are placed at $216,035.

DANIEL CONNOLLEY.—Daniel Connolley of Ithaca, whose hotel was destroyed by fire on Jan. 2, was yesterday adjudicated a bankrupt in the United States District Court, at Utica. His debts amount to $9,440. The assets include fire insurance policies amounting to $5,000, which are now in process of adjustment.

ELIAS ROTHSTEIN.—A petition in involuntary bankruptcy has been filed against Elias Rothstein, women's tailor, at 464 Columbus Avenue, by two creditors: W. J. Davidson & Co., $594, and E. H. Van Ingen & Co., $134. It was alleged that while insolvent he transferred assets to certain creditors. He has been in business five years.

WILLIAM H. C. JACKSON.—William H. C. Jackson of 141 Broadway has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $51,469 and assets $3 in cash in a trust company. He filed the petition to get rid of a deficiency judgment for $51,469 obtained against him on Nov. 2, 1898, by Louis and Samuel Sachs, growing out of the foreclosure sale of 632 and 634 Broadway.

WILLIAM A. BUTTS.—William A. Butts, salesman, buyer, and superintendent at 52 Howard Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $16,014 and no assets. Of the liabilities $8,750 were contracted at Fort Worth, Texas, in 1886 and 1887, and the balance is on account of goods sold to the Union Cloak and Suit Company of this city, of which he was an officer.

CLOTILDE ALKAN.—Clotilde Alkan, residing at 128 East Sixty-first Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $13,517 and nominal assets $5,000, a debt due her by Henry Alkan. She is the wife of Henry Alkan, who filed a petition in bankruptcy on the 10th inst., and her liabilities are as guarantor for his indebtedness to the Bank of Buffalo, N. Y., $10,017, and the City Bank of Buffalo, $3,500.

HENRY J. FISHER.—Henry J. Fisher of Fisher Brothers, decorators, formerly at 103 West Eighty-seventh Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $35,339, of which $32,261 are firm liabilities and $3,078 individual liabilities, and nominal assets $1,624 cash in the hands of the receiver, which was realized from a sale of the firm's assets. A receiver was appointed for the firm in September, 1897. Charles N. Fisher, the other partner, refused to join in the bankruptcy petition.

S. OTTENBERG & BROTHERS.—A petition in involuntary bankruptcy has been filed against Simon and Henry Ottenberg, composing the firm of S. Ottenberg & Brothers, cigar manufacturers, at 1,015 Seoond Avenue and at Tampa, Fla., by Blumenstiel & Hirsch, for the following creditors: People's Bank, $2,273; Chemical National Bank, $650, and Harry R. Farjeon, $600. It was alleged that the firm between Nov. 1 and Jan. 1, while insolvent, had paid various sums of money to divers persons to give preference, that they have acknowledged insolvency and inability to meet their obligations, and have an excess of liabilities over assets. Judge Brown of the United States District Court has appointed Benjamin Barker receiver of the assets of the firm with a bond of $100,000 on the petition of Morris J. Hirsch, whose firm, Blumenstiel & Hirsch, represent claims of creditors to the amount of $50,000. Mr. Hirsch stated in his petition that the firm have cigar factories at 382 Second Avenue and 305 East Twenty-second Street, that they have a large quantity of tobacco manufactured and in process of manufacture, on hand that is of a perishable nature, and that the firm has been paying preferences from the proceeds of the business. The firm became embarrassed in November last and have since been endeavoring to effect a compromise with their creditors at 30 cents on the dollar. Their mercantile liabilities were reported to be $350,000, principally to banks, in addition to which they were reported to have a mortgage indebtedness of $475,000 on their real estate. Their assets, Mr. Hirsch stated, at a fair valuation, exceed $100,000.

Judgments.

The following judgments were filed yesterday, the first name being that of the debtor:

FOUR HOUSES WRECKED

Borough of Bronx Visited by a Furious Gale.

Destroyed Buildings Were Only About Three-quarters Completed and No One Was Injured.

Four three-story frame dwellings in course of construction at La Fontaine Avenue and One Hundred and Eightieth Street were blown down and completely demolished by a windstorm which struck the Borough of the Bronx a few minutes before 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The four buildings went down like card houses, but there were no workmen in or about them at the time, as the storm had prevented any work yesterday. For a few minutes after the collapse the greatest excitement prevailed in the neighborhood, as some of the women were of the opinion that workmen had been buried in the ruins.

James Rice, the builder, who left the houses after making a tour of inspection not ten minutes before they were blown down, assured them that there was nobody in the wreck, he being the last one to leave the houses. The four houses were about three-quarters finished, the skeleton work being completed and the roofs on and they were four of a row of twelve which Rice was building. Two of the wrecked buildings stood on La Fontaine Avenue and two on One Hundred and Eightieth Street. The corner house was arranged for a store on the ground floor.

When the windstorm struck the buildings, which stand on the hill back of the new elevated road yards, it entered the open front left for the store and blew the back of the building completely out. This crashed into the side of the buildings on One Hundred and Eightieth Street, and caused the roofs to fall in. Then there was a general collapse of the four buildings, and with a crash that startled the neighborhood the buildings fell to the ground. Huge pieces of joist and timber were twisted and broken in the wreck, which looked as though the foundations of the buildings had been undermined instead of their being blown down, so compact was the mass of joist and planking.

The storm, which blew several fences down in the neighborhood, besides wrecking numerous chimneys and signs, lasted only a few minutes.

SNOWSTORM IN THE BRONX.

Section of the City North of Harlem Has Winter Weather.

To the residents of the Bronx it looked for a time yesterday as if real Winter had come to town. There were snow and rain and plenty of wind, but during the same hours the residents of the remaining portions of New York enjoyed Easter weather, and a mild form of Easter weather at that.

The Bronx snowstorm started about 8 o'clock in the morning and lasted until 10:30 o'clock. It was thought that sufficient snow would fall to permit of sleighing, but owing to the rain of the last few days and the moisture in the ground, the white flakes melted as fast as they fell. Following the snow there was a rainstorm, which lasted for fifteen minutes, and then came the windstorm. The latter continued for a couple of hours.

MOTOR VEHICLE MAKERS LEARN A LAW OF TRADE

Need of Costly and Frequent Repairs Lessens the Sales.

Automobiling Not a Fad or Short-Lived Fancy—French Makers Have Had an Expensive Lesson.

When it is very still in the automobile camp, as it is at present, it is safe to infer that something important is going on in the brains of those who shape the automobile movement. Otherwise they would make a noise on general principles. A great discovery has been made, however, and all, actual and intending, manufacturers of motor vehicles, their mechanical engineers, their advertising managers, and not a few capitalists, who have been watching the automobile movement with a view to investment, are holding their breath and chewing the cud of reflection. This discovery is not like a burst of light suddenly revealing new mechanical resources or laying bare a colossal fallacy by one flash of truth. It is based on a mere accumulation of evidence. Many have seen this evidence day after day for a year grow, but have been disinclined to believe it, because apparently the rest of the world disregarded it. The long and short of the discovery is simply this, that automobile building is not play, and automobile commerce is not very largely a bluffing game.

Translated into the terms of financiering, this peculiar discovery—as yet unappreciated as such—means that automobile building demands a large investment from the start, because there is no way of inducing the public at large to not only pay for the manufacturer's experimenting, but pay a goodly profit on it to boot, as the public were kind enough to do in the beginning of the bicycle industry.

It has been a great blow to many intending manufacturers to find that it is quite impossible to work enthusiasm for an inferior vehicle up to the point of purchasing by hiring a few glib-tongued young men to prate on "talking points" and running the vehicle around a racing track.

So long as the public and the makers both thought that automobilism was going to be a new kind of fun, in which the big words would be novelty, speed, style, special construction, there seemed to be hope of smooth sailing for all who had audacity enough to enter upon manufacture, but as it has come out that the key words are utility, efficiency, durability, and range of performance, or, rather, the plain work-a-day qualities that these long abstract words stand for, there is very little room for word jugglery, salesmen's mesmerism, or hurrahing of any kind.

Almost from the beginning the automobile business is on that hard basis that the buyer knows fully as well whether the goods offered him will suit as the seller. Nearly all the demerits of an automobile stick out visibly after a little trial as so many sore thumbs. But there are a few hidden and doubtful points, and these, which, in goods of small value, would be waived by the purchaser, are reckoned against the seller of automobiles.

Such points are those relating to the cost and frequency of battery renewal in electric vehicles, cost of tire repairs in all automobiles weighing from 1,500 pounds up, amount of skill and caretaking required for keeping steam automobiles in good running order. If manufacturers had known more about these half-hidden defects or had concealed less what they did know, the public might have thought less about them now.

But this is the great discovery which is finally laid bare to all, that the public knows more about what it wants in automobiles than the manufacturers know about supplying it.

It is an awful disappointment for the commercial end of the automobile movement, and a very salutary one of course. It reduces in practice the number of automobile manufacturers to the very few who have, (1) money enough to manufacture economically; (2) ability to make a vehicle that is real value for its selling price.

The disappointment would not have been so keen if the industry and trade, upon taking hold of automobilism, had not received the impression that automobilism in its home, France, was developing very rapidly and successfully along the lines of sport, play, fad, and very high prices. It was following those lines in France. But the difference in social conditions between France and the United States made it impossible that the French policy could be adopted here with success. And now comes news from France, authentic and indisputable, that the French automobile industry has been mired by its wrong start; that the French public has at last tired of buying impracticable vehicles at high prices, and that industry and commerce have come to a dead stop for lack of public support, and must be remodeled before they may hope to regain it. It is the news of this stagnation (demarasme, as it is already commonly called,) which more than any other one thing has called a halt among those manufacturers in the United States who had tacitly assumed that they, too, could bluff the public.

At the same time, as new reflection on the possible consequences of rash action is staying the hands of enterprise, the engineering profession is veering around to a new attitude in regard to the construction of hydro-carbon motors. It is becoming weary of the ottocycle engine of the carburettor system of generating an explosive charge, of the poppet valve, and of the whole hit-and-miss method of operating high-speed gasoline motors. It is fast losing faith in the whole thermal theory which, with a view to high pressures and high power with small weights, favors a high heat development by a rapid succession of explosions, followed by a waste of the greater portion of the heat thus produced through a cumbersome water-cooling system.

The possibilities of the hydro-carbon motor constructed upon these orthodox lines have been pretty well worked out. In the future we may expect to see the thermal units and the theoretical power sacrificed somewhat in favor of new methods for converting all the power actually developed—even though it be smaller per pound of motor—into vehicle work and without any necessity for cooling water or special provisions for radiation of heat. CIVIC FEDERATION PLANS.

Programme for the Organization of Non-Political Bodies.

The Committee of One Hundred of the Civic Federation has issued a statement defining its aims and objects, which will be submitted to a conference of delegates of trades unions and reform societies at Cooper Union to-morrow night.

The programme provides that the federation shall be non-partisan, and that no one holding a political office will be admitted as a member. Its purpose, the statement says, "is to voice the will of the people of New York, and particularly the wage-earners of the city, upon civic and social matters pertaining to the lives and homes of the people, such as the tenement problem, the sweating system, the hours of labor, and kindred subjects; to demand that legislators frame the will of the people upon these matters into law; to insist upon the enforcement of laws passed, particularly affecting the welfare of wage-workers."

TO TUNNEL THE NARROWS.

New Jersey and Staten Island Junction Railroad Increases Stock to $10,000,000.

The Directors and stockholders of the New Jersey and Staten Island Junction Railroad Company held a meeting yesterday afternoon in the office of President Stephen M. Hoye, on Montague Street, Brooklyn, and voted to increase the capital stock of the corporation from $5,000 to $10,000,000. President Hoye was authorized to begin negotiations at once for the construction of the railroad and tunnel which the company proposes to build. The following resolution was adopted:

"That the President is authorized to make the proper searches and abstracts of title of property acquired by said railroad for its entire right of way on Staten Island, and is to draw the proper and necessary papers and institute the necessary proceedings for condemnation of any and all property required for the right of way, railroad tracks, stations, &c., along the entire route of said railroad."

Mr. Hoye said after the meeting that he would begin the condemnation proceedings at once for the route across Staten Island, from the Kill von Kull bridge to Stapleton. He had enough capital in sight already, he said, to insure the construction of the road.

The proposed railroad is to connect with several lines on the New Jersey side, and cross the Kill von Kull bridge and Staten Island to Stapleton. From that point it is proposed to tunnel the Narrows to Bay Ridge, on the Brooklyn shore. The tunnel will then be continued to Sixty-fifth Street, where a terminal will be built. Another terminal will be built at Thirty-ninth Street, to which point the tunnel will be extended. The road was projected by Erastus Wiman, who secured the franchises. The plan of the company is to handle freight and passengers for Brooklyn who come in on the New Jersey roads. It also aims to carry passengers from Staten Island to Manhattan by means of the tunnel to Brooklyn and the surface and elevated railroads of Brooklyn.

No Trace of Editor Todd.

PROPOSED IMMIGRATION LAW.

Knights of Labor Want Foreigners Admitted Only When There is Work for Them.

Local Assembly 1,562 of the Knights of Labor has submitted a proposed amendment to the immigration laws which it intends to bring before Congress. The bill provides that it shall be the duty of the Commissioner General of Immigration to collect information from the proper State officials regarding the condition of trade and industry, and ascertain where a demand exists for labor that can be supplied with laborers from other parts of the country. Such information is to be forwarded to all immigration officials, and to all United States Consuls to foreign countries.

The bill further provides that all aliens intending to embark for the United States must apply to the United States Consul for a certificate of admission to the United States. Such certificates can be granted only, the proposed measure says, to those who intend to engage in occupations that are not congested, and who do not intend to accept less than the current rate of wages, or take the places of striking or locked out workers. They must also show that they intend to become citizens of the United States.

Section 5 of the proposed law provides that it shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Immigration to return all aliens who are not provided with Consular certificates. He is also, according to the bill, to take charge of all aliens entitled to admission and distribute them to those parts of the country where there is a demand for their labor.

MARCHED HUSBAND TO LOCK-UP.

After Arresting Him, Mrs. Fivey Relented and Refused to Prosecute.

Mrs. Mary Fivey of 316 Fifth Street, Jersey City, yesterday arrested her husband and marched him to the Gregory Street Police Station, where she charged him with assault and battery. As a warrant had been issued for his arrest, he was locked up.

Then Mrs. Fivey relented, and when her husband was arraigned before Police Justice Hoos she withdrew the complaint, and she and her husband walked out of court apparently as happy as if they were just starting on their wedding trip.

Besides being so effective with the worst colds, another good feature is that it is safe for the tenderest infant.—Jayne's Expectorant.—Adv.

LEGAL NOTES.

LATENT DEFECT IN APPLIANCE.—The question of the liability of a master to a servant for injuries to the latter in consequence of a latent defect in an appliance was the subject of a recent decision by the Court of Appeals. Jacob Smith was employed by the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company as a blacksmith in repairing the drawbridge at Spuyten Duyvil Creek, by removing an old wire cable and replacing it with a new one. A weight which was being raised by an engine to the top of a tower seventy-five feet high became caught under a timber of the tower, and the foreman called Smith to dislodge it and guide the weight from under the timber. He then told him to get upon it and ride up, so as to keep it clear from other projecting timbers of the tower. Smith mounted the weight and rode up about thirty feet, when the weight, he says, must have caught on a beam and the ring of the chain at the top of the tower broke, precipitating him and the weight to the ground. For the injuries he received, consisting of a broken ankle, which is a permanent disability, and various bruises, a jury in his suit against the company for damages gave Smith a verdict for $10,800. This judgment was affirmed by the Appellate Division, at Rochester, but the Court of Appeals has directed a reversal. The Court holds, by Justice O'Brien, that the master was not liable, as the evidence showed that the material furnished by the master for the manufacture of the appliance and out of which it was made was proper; that there was nothing in its appearance to indicate inefficiency, and that it was made by competent and skilled workmen, and was subjected to frequent and thorough inspections of such a character as to reveal any flaw or defect that could be discovered in that way.

***

DUTY OF STEAMBOATS NAVIGATING THE HUDSON.—Annie Bell was the owner, in May, 1898, of the canalboat Dema and Willie, which, while moored to a dock at Coxsackie, on the Hudson River, was driven against the dock by the suction and swells of the steamboat Adirondack, owned by the New Jersey Steamboat Company, with such force that she was crushed and sunk. A judgment rendered on a verdict in favor of Mrs. Bell in her suit against the company has been reversed by the Appellate Division, in Brooklyn, because of error in the Court's charge to the jury. The Judge told the jury that, "in navigating rivers where small boats are accustomed to ply and may be reasonably expected, steamboats are bound to navigate with caution, and at a rate of speed sufficiently slow to avoid danger from her attending swells." Presiding Justice Goodrich, giving the opinion of the Appellate Division, said: "The Court might properly charge that 'it was the duty of a steam vessel passing near docks or other mooring places to pass at such a rate of speed that no danger would be likely to result from her swells, provided she had timely notice of the presence of other vessels at such docks as were likely to be damaged from suction and swells of such boats.'"

BAKERS' STRIKE SETTLED.

Bosses Agree to a Ten-Hour Day and Promise to Keep Shops Clean.

The capture of the meeting of non-union bakers by the strike leaders on Friday, and the consequent stopping of their anti-strike parade, resulted in practically ending the strike yesterday. A committee of union and non-union bakers went to the bake-shops and notified the bakers at work that a strike of the non-union bakers was declared. A general exodus from all the bakeries followed.

Bread was again scarce on the east side yesterday, and the members of the Boss Bakers' Association stampeded to the headquarters of the strikers, at 86 Attorney Street, to settle. Thirty of them signed the agreement for a ten-hour workday, clean bakeshops, and to pay $10 for the privilege of being supplied with union labels. The others will sign to-morrow.

Some of the non-union men said yesterday that after the capture of the meeting they were afraid not to strike.

MISSING CHECK CAME BACK.

Had Been Given to the Wrong Messenger Boy and Worry Resulted.

A check for $3,000 drawn by Post & Flagg in favor of J. M. Martin & Co., both Stock Exchange houses, was the cause of no little worry to both houses on day Friday—and all through the innocent mistake of handing the check to the wrong messenger boy.

J. M. Martin & Co., whose office is at 20 Broad Street, and in whose favor the check was drawn, being notified that the check was waiting them, sent one of their boys for it to Post & Flagg, whose office is in the Mills Building. In short order the boy returned and informed his employers that another boy had gotten it and was bringing it over. Patiently the firm waited—a half hour, one hour, two hours, but still no check. Then, becoming concerned, J. M. Martin & Co. sent another messenger over to Post & Flagg, only to learn that the check had actually been handed over to some boy, understood to be from J. M. Martin & Co. At once visions of an absconding messenger boy began to haunt both offices, and the Bank of Commerce, on whom the check was drawn, was notified to stop payment.

Finally, to make a long story short, about 3 o'clock a wan, frail lad walked up to the cashier's office of Post & Flagg and meekly said: "Say, Mister, I guess you gave me the wrong check," at the same time depositing the missing paper, which was seized without delay.

Investigation revealed that the check had been handed over, as stated, by mistake to the wrong boy, no suspicion of dishonesty attaching.

OLIVER ADAMS HELD.

He Impersonated an Officer and Took Money from Two Victims.

Oliver Adams, alias "Harry" Adams, who was arrested several days ago by Central Office detectives on a charge of impersonating an officer, was arraigned in the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday.

One week ago yesterday Adams, according to the police, accosted William G. Reynolds of 6 West Twenty-second Street on Fifth Avenue, and, representing himself as an officer, took him to a saloon in Sixth Avenue, where he took from him $3,000 worth of bonds, a watch, some pocket money, and other articles.

The case was in the police court two days ago, when the prisoner was remanded for forty-eight hours to give the police time to work up the case. When the case came up again yesterday, another complainant was on hand in the person of Walter Brooks of 210 East Tenth Street, who charged that on June 23 last he met Adams in a saloon at Twelfth Street and Third Avenue, where, under pretense of measuring his chest, Adams got his watch.

The prisoner was held in $2,000 bail for trial on both charges at the General Sessions.

NEW YORK TIMES IN PARIS.

Ambassador Cambon's Reasons for Wishing the Exposition Edition Could Have Been Made Permanent.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Jules Cambon, the French Ambassador to the United States, to-day expressed the opinion that it would have been well if the Paris Exposition Edition of THE NEW YORK TIMES could have been made permanent. M. Cambon is strongly impressed with the merits of such an edition of an American paper as THE NEW YORK TIMES published in Paris last year, and particularly with the advantage to both nations in affording to them a means to learn more of each other and understand each other better.

"It is much to be regretted," said the Ambassador, "that Americans know so little of the real France and Frenchmen so little of the real America. The great value of the publication of THE NEW YORK TIMES in Paris was that it was so thoroughly American, and therefore afforded readers in Europe an excellent idea of American thought and feeling. The French and English papers contain only brief telegrams about American affairs, giving only the general news. THE NEW YORK TIMES in Paris gave a full idea of American events, and very important and interesting glimpses of the life of America.

"Of course that was mainly for the benefit of Americans in Paris, since most Frenchmen do not understand English. Paris, by the way, is a great American city, the greatest American city in Europe. The American colony there is far larger than that in London.

"Aside from the fact that the number of Parisians familiar with English is limited, there has not been any general demand in France for American news. But this is the very reason why I should like to see that edition made permanent. It would belong to such a newspaper to create that demand, to foster French interest in things American, and during the short life of the Exposition Edition its influence in that direction was no doubt considerable. Interest in American affairs would be created and stimulated by the constant appearance of such a journal as the Exposition Edition of THE NEW YORK TIMES, containing articles which reflect American life and thought. It would be the source of French knowledge of America. It would create a demand which would grow, and in my opinion it is only to such an enterprise that we can look for a complete understanding between the two countries.

"I say the two countries, because American knowledge of the real France is also very limited. The two countries have the same aims and are united in a bond of sympathy and affection. But full knowledge of each other they have not, and no greater public service can be performed by an American newspaper than in conducting an enterprise which will infallibly strengthen the ties between them by leading each to a clearer understanding and hence to a fuller sympathy with the other. Better knowledge will lead to this, and the work can best be done by the interchange of news between the two countries through such a medium as the excellent paper which was published in Paris last year."

FRENCH-CANADIAN THREATS.

Montreal Paper Says that on a Sign Americans Will Take Quebec.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Jan. 12.—On top of the threatening articles that have lately appeared against the power of Great Britain in Canada, comes now the most violent of them all in La Verité, a weighty paper, devoted to French Canadian and ultra-Catholic interests, which reads as follows:

"There is a limit to human patience. Mr. Ross says that England will always guard Quebec. Well, we tell him that she will guard Quebec just as long as the French Canadians wish her to, and not an instant longer; and if the fanatics of Ontario and elsewhere were not blinded by passion, they would comprehend it also. If they continue to reward our loyalty toward the English throne by covering us with injuries and flooding us with threats, there will be an explosion of anger among the French Canadians which will astonish those who are accustomed to regard us as 'good sheep.' The incident last Winter in Montreal, provoked by the insolence of McGill, should make our insulters reflect.

"If the anti-French campaign does not soon stop there will be some fine morning a movement in which that which we have seen in Montreal will be multiplied by ten, by twenty, by one hundred. The French Canadians have only to make a sign to Uncle Sam and in fifteen days an American army would occupy Quebec, Montreal and Toronto. We certainly do not hope to see these things, but they will come if the campaign of insult does not cease.

"The day when we are pushed by these insults to the point of appealing to Uncle Sam, that day will end the power of these impotent jingoes to guard Canada for England."

NOVELTY EMBROIDERIES—Superb Stocks—We go to the fountain head of production, to St. Gall, to makers whose repeated successes (season after season) are due to extraordinary originality and skill. You will see individual art of the rarest type, characteristic designs confined strictly here, wherein everything is subordinated to best effect, carried out along broad, bold lines.

The Cloths are mainly Swiss and Nainsook, but Batiste will be a leading material in narrow bandings, insertions, edges, flounces and all-overs to match.

Designs embrace L'Art Nouveau, leaves and copies of Nature's prominent floral features.

SPECIAL POPULAR EMBROIDERIES.

A RECORD IN FRENCH UNDERWEAR. We handle the fine Art Underwear of France in great lines, as most houses handle domestic goods—we show and sell more American made garments in a week than are disposed of in a month by average retailing. French lingerie comes to us from private Parisian sources and from our own factories in French provincial towns, where designers have a free hand. Cleanliness reigns supreme, and careful making is a tradition. The daintiness and diversity of trimmings are heightened by ample, unskimped cutting. Nothing is too fine, nothing too rich for us to sell and you to buy.

The outlet we control is phenomenal.
We created and hold it by stirring values.

Our French Underwear embraces trimmings of Real Valenciennes, Cluny, Torchon, Guipure and Alencon Laces, profusely applied on the filmiest fabrics, artistic in the highest degree.

A Group of Models.—French Chemise, Drawers and Gowns, exquisitely lace trimmed and hand embroidered on soft Nainsook . . . 3.98 and 4.98

French Corset Covers, Chemise and Drawers . . . 2.98

French Chemise, Nainsook, beautifully lace trimmed, French Drawers to match, French Corset Covers, hand embroidered and lace trimmed in bolero effects . . . 1.49

French hand embroidered Chemise, Corset Covers and Drawers; the Chemise in large plastron front, the Drawers of much fineness . . . 98c

Domestic Underwear is headed by the great special 98c. collection of all garments, ranging over more styles and finer trimmings than the price ever covered before. New Model Gowns are added in Empire, low neck, Chemise, square back and front, in Nainsook, Cambric and Muslin, Marie Antoinette yoke, fichus, etc., very rich in laces and embroidery.

The Chemises, Drawers, Corset Covers and Skirts match in many cases the above gowns, forming sets; choice from entire line . . . 98c

Chemise, Drawers and Corset Covers, in fine Cambric, Torchon and Val. Trimmings . . . 50c

CLOSING IMPORTED MODEL TEA GOWNS. The point to note is this: At least a hundred Tea Gowns and Wrappers arrived during the past few days. For all that they are included with the balance of earlier importations at identically the same absurdly low prices.

The best known masters of Paris designed these models—only one of a style, and that style the best and most desirable in fabric and trimming.

WHITE HORSE CAMP MINES.

Remarkably Rich Finds of Copper in New Northwest Territory District.

Special to The New York Times.

TACOMA, Washington, Jan. 12.—The copper mines of White Horse camp, Northwest Territory, are exciting great interest among mining men. This is a new district, scarcely over a year old, but owing to the richness and size of the ore bodies uncovered it has made strides almost unprecedented in the history of Western mining camps. Several properties are already shipping ore to the Tacoma and Everett smelters.

Experts who have been investigating the district for Eastern and English capitalists report the camp as being exceptionally rich in copper ores of great extent. The mineral belt now being developed is about fourteen miles long and three miles wide, and seems equally rich throughout. The ores run from seven to 75 per cent. copper, and returns of $165 a ton have just been received from a ten-ton shipment of copper, silver, and gold ore sent to the Tacoma smelter from the Copper King group. The smelter test disclosed values of 46 per cent. copper, 11 ounces of silver, and $2 in gold a ton. There is an inexhaustible supply of this ore, which can be laid down at the smelter, the owners claim, for less than $8 a ton. A hundred tons of similar ore were taken from two sixteen-feet shafts and a crosscut twelve feet long.

The Copper King group is owned by W. P. Grainger and John McIntyre, the discoverers of the district. They first found copper there in July, 1898, while en route to the Klondike. The northern end of the belt was the first discovered, and it is from this section that ore is now being shipped. In this portion of the belt are situated the Copper King group, the War Eagle, Le Roy, Anaconda, and Rabbit Foot groups, besides several other properties running high in bornite and chalcocite ores. In the southern end of the district lie the rich Valarie and Graftin groups, all carrying about the same grade of ores. At a depth of 60 feet the Pueblo has been crosscut 116 feet in solid ore, and the wall is not yet reached. This property belongs to White & Larson, Montana miners, and is bonded to the British-American Corporation for $1,000,000. This corporation is the largest concern engaged in developing the White Horse mines. It owns the Carlisle, Pueblo, and other claims aggregating over 3,000 acres in extent. The Pueblo has the lowest grade ore of any of the company's properties, but even on it the assays show upward of 25 per cent. of copper, with enough gold and silver to pay all the expenses of economical working. The assays of the Copper King run in the neighborhood of 40 per cent.

Four workingmen of Mount Vernon in this State own the Anaconda and Rabbit's Foot, which in all probability will make them millionaires within the next two years. They have traced a rich vein on the Anaconda for a distance of 2,500 feet along the surface. A tunnel has been driven in 150 feet, and within 70 feet more will cut the vein, which, from surface indications, will be 30 to 40 feet wide. With one or two exceptions all of the mines contain bornite and chalcocite ores, with iron, porphyry, and lime formation, the gangue being felcite and spar. The country rock is granitic.

Reading Street Car Strike Ended.

READING, Penn., Jan. 12.—The strike of the employes of the United Traction Company came to an end to-day, the Board of Arbitrators having granted nearly every demand made by the strikers. The agreement calls for the reinstatement of all employes discharged since Jan. 1, that 16 2-3 cents an hour be paid beginning Jan. 16, nine hours to constitute a day's work; one week early and one week late shifts, and whenever a dispute arises between employer and employes which cannot be satisfactorily adjusted it shall be referred to a Board of Arbitrators. The agreement is to remain in force one year from ratification.

Street Car Company Raises Wages.

BETHLEHEM, Penn., Jan. 12.—Announcement was made to-day by President Johnson of the Lehigh Valley Traction Company that the wages of the motormen and conductors of that system, 200 in number, have been advanced on an equal basis of $1.85 per week. The scale gives new men 15 cents an hour and a one-cent an hour advance per year, five-year men receiving 20 cents. The advance was made without solicitation on the part of the crews.

Three Killed in Michigan Train Wreck.

DETROIT, Jan. 12.—A disastrous collision occurred on the Père Marquette Railway to-day about a mile and a half northwest of Plymouth, a village about forty miles from Detroit, which resulted in the death of three men and injury to several others. The collision was head on, between a passenger train coming to Detroit from Saginaw and a freight engine. How the accident occurred is not known, but it is supposed to be due to the snowstorm which has been prevailing all day.

Engineer Moore and John Kennedy, his fireman, were instantly killed, Moore being pinned against the boiler of his engine. None of the passengers, it is said, was injured.

Little Girl Found Dead in Bed.

RIVERHEAD, L. I., Jan. 12.—Laura Brown, the thirteen-year-old daughter of George Brown, a letter carrier living at Flanders, a village a few miles from this place, was found dead in bed this morning. It is supposed that death was caused by heart disease, although it was not known that the child's heart was affected.

To Vaccinate Department Store Clerks.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 12.—Health Officer Chandler of this city has completed arrangements with all the department stores to vaccinate the employes. Each of the big stores has set aside a room where the vaccine can be applied. The vaccination will not be compulsory.

PASSING OF ANCIENT EGYPT

Occidental Improvements Changing the Land of the Pharaohs.

TRANSFORMATION IN CAIRO

Golf Links at the First Cataract—Historic Ruins Fenced In—Enterprising Mummy Manufacturers.

Foreign Correspondence NEW YORK TIMES.

CAIRO, Dec. 26, 1900.—To the man who revisits Cairo, after an interval of twenty years, it is not difficult to believe in the transformation scenes of the Arabian Nights. When I was last in Cairo it was wholly an Eastern city, for the Brummagem Paris built over the swamps beyond the Esbekiah were an incongruous addition to the old city which one could easily ignore. But to-day Cairo has been torn up, and disemboweled, and generally improved, until it is rather less Oriental than the Rue du Caire of Paris.

The matting that once roofed the whole length of the Mooskee, and gently filtered dust and bits of straw down upon the pedestrian, is gone. The street itself has been partially widened and paved. Sidewalks take the place of the charpoys upon which Arab porters used to sleep at night, and be fallen over by belated foreigners. Electric lights have banished the darkness. The Arab cafés have given place to European shops, and all the vagrant pariah dogs that haunted the place by day and night, and filled the visitor with thoughts of hydrophobia, have been poisoned. Through the heart of Cairo wide streets have been driven, and the work is still going on and threatening to wipe out of existence the native houses, with their latticed balconies, and the houris who might be imagined to be behind them. Electric trams run in every direction, and there is a race course where the beauty and fashion of the large English colony assemble.

Which reminds me of a lady whom I met not long ago in London, who told me that she spent last Winter in Cairo. "Did I know the race course? If I went to Cairo I must not fail to see it." I asked her a question as to the pyramids, but she said that she had not seen them. She knew the race course, but she considered the pyramids not worth seeing. Cairo is rapidly becoming a congenial place for persons with similar views of race courses and pyramids.

With the widening of the streets carriages are multiplying. It is now rather bad form for the foreign visitor to ride a donkey. Formerly the donkey, and an occasional camel, were the only quadrupeds seen in the city. Now the Cairene cabs driven by drivers, who have all the vices of the London cabby and none of his virtues, beset you whenever you leave your hotel.

Alas! Cairo has been moved fully 1,000 miles to the west since the days of Ismail. If you want to see the East you must now go at least as far as Damascus. All Egypt is following the example of the Occidentalized Cairo. The traveler now goes up the Nile in a steamer, instead of a dahabeah—unless, indeed, he prefers to go by rail in the sleeping car, and dine in the dining car. At Luxor and Assouan he finds big hotels with electric light and all other modern infamies, and there is even a big caravansary of the same description at Khartoum, and by the side of the first cataract there are golf links. The ruins of Upper Egypt are fenced in, and a ticket of admission to the whole of them costs a guinea. In a year or two Karnak will probably be lighted with the electric light for the benefit of tourists who wish to have late suppers amid the ruins. As for the tombs of the Kings at Thebes, I expect to see them let to small parties as Winter villas. Prof. Flinders Petrie says that an Egyptian tomb is the best possible place in which to sleep, being dry and warm in the Winter and cool in the Summer. I cannot see how modern improvements can ever touch the pyramids, but some day a way to utilize them will probably be discovered.

TURKS ON BICYCLES.

Even the bicycle has invaded Egypt. In the streets of Cairo nothing is more common than the sight of a fat Turk riding in his baggy breeches and red tarboosh an American-made bicycle. I could not at first think what made the fat Turk on a bicycle seem a familiar figure, but suddenly I remembered the women I had seen so often on Sundays on the Ripley Road riding in "rationals." That explained it. The advantage in appearance was rather with the Turk, but the resemblance between the two varieties of breeched riders was very great.

On the other hand, the spectacle of an Arab in his long blue cotton gown bestriding a bicycle is not a pleasing one. He suggests some maiden lady of advanced years who has, under the stress of necessity, mounted her brother's machine. But only fancy the Arab riding a bicycle instead of the traditional Arab steed or the swift dromedary. I foresee a great future for bicycles in the desert. If they should be made with wide flat rims that would ride over the sand, they would soon supersede the camel in the estimation of the wild Bedouin. Unlike the camel, they never require to be fed, and, although unlike that ingenious beast, they are not built in watertight compartments at present, it would be easy to adapt their tubes to the purposes of water reservoirs, in which case they would have all the advantages and none of the disanvantages of the camel.

I do not personally mourn over the decline and fall off of the Ghawazee. Twenty-five years ago the Ghawazee were dancers, and their dancing, although it was not beautiful, was certainly worth seeing. But the Egyptian Ghawazee have become demoralized—that is to say, assuming that they ever had any morals. They are now dirty and unattractive, and they do very poorly what their imitators in Paris do very much better. If any one were to see the dancing girls of Esneh to-day, and then read Curtis's rhapsody concerning Kushek Arnim, he would wonder what was the matter with Curtis, and would begin to doubt whether he ever saw the Ghawazee.

Well! There is no help for it. Egypt is undergoing renovation, and we might as well try to bring back the Pharaohs as to bring back the Egypt that Curtis saw. It is only fair to say that from the practical point of view Egypt is improved. The traveler can now see the Nile at a fourth of the expense that was once necessary, and he can stop at the Cairene hotels without contracting the typhoid fever. He can go anywhere in the country without fear of molestation, for the Egyptian police, organized by British officers, is an admirable body of men. And then in Upper Egypt he will meet with small garrisons, of, say, twenty men, commanded by a young British subaltern, and he knows that should any riot break out those twenty Soudanese and that young subaltern represent the might of the British Empire. The work that England has done policing the country, and in securing justice to the fellahin, can never be overestimated. The old Egypt is going, but in its place there is going to be very soon a prosperous, contented Egypt that will have to be reckoned with as the strongest Mediterranean power outside of Europe.

GERMAN VS. BRITISH STEAMERS.

I came down to Egypt in a North German Lloyd steamer. I mention the fact because I learned during the voyage why the German steamships are proving such formidable competitors to the English steamships. Take the Peninsular and Oriental Company. Only a few years ago no self-respecting Englishman would go to the East in anything but a P. and O. boat. Now the German ships are crowded with Englishmen. The reason is that, while the P. and O. Line is admirably managed, so far as the running of the ships is concerned, the company has the air of only tolerating passengers, while the German companies make it their business to provide for the comfort of their passengers. The P. and O. Company runs two very fast steamers between Brindisi and Port Said, but they are very small—only about 1,800 tons—and they are about as lively as torpedo boats. Nothing more uncomfortable than to go to sea in one of these boats can well be imagined. These two boats carry the Indian mails. The majority of passengers by the P. and O. Line take the larger ships from Marseilles. Now, these are fine big ships, but, like most modern steamers, they carry the greater part of their passengers on deck, and, being thus topheavy, roll tremendously. The Germans counteract this tendency to roll in their ships by fitting them with bilge keels, and the result is that, although some of them are even higher out of the water than the P. and O. boats, they roll very little. The English company has steadily refused to fit its ships with bilge keels, and consequently its passengers suffer much inconvenience.

Then there is the matter of dinner. On board the P. and O. boats every one is expected to come to dinner in evening dress, and if a man appears in a jacket or a morning coat he very soon receives a note from the steward calling his attention to the fact that evening dress at dinner is expected of every one. Far be it from me to object to this custom on land. Dinner is a sacred thing in the estimation of the average Englishman, and must be approached with awe and solemnity. But to require a half seasick man to spend half an hour in his close cabin dressing himself for dinner is absurd. The German ships do not have this ridiculous rule, and English people who have not entire confidence in their stomachs while at sea naturally prefer them.

The Germans are now running about ten or a dozen 10,000-ton twin-screw boats between Southampton and the East, by way of the Suez Canal, and they are always crowded. If the P. and O. Company took the same pains to make passengers comfortable they would of course be preferred by Englishmen, for the safety of a P. and O. ship is one of the earliest lessons instilled into British youth. But hitherto they have declined to do so, and the result is that the Germans are in a fair way to beat them on their own element. The same thing is going on elsewhere than in the Mediterranean. The German ships are gaining in popularity every day, and unless the English companies comprehend that passengers want to be carried in comfort as well as in safety, they will soon be beaten badly.

To come back to Egypt. There is one thing that has not improved in the last quarter of a century, and that is the climate of Lower Egypt. Years ago it rained once in a long while in Alexandria, and hardly ever in Cairo. Now Alexandria is decidedly rainy in Winter, and showers are frequent in Cairo. There is a theory that this is due to the Suez Canal, but I doubt it. It would be almost equally probable to ascribe it to the planting of eucalyptus trees in Italy. My own belief is that the change in the climate is due to the improved government. Wherever you have good government you have an objectionable climate. This theory I have more than once elaborated, and I therefore spare your readers the proofs of it. However, they have only to note how the Italian climate has been ruined by free goverament, and how superb was the Egyptian climate in the days when it was the worst governed country in the world, to perceive that there is much to be said in favor of my theory. Last year I was told that it had not rained in Assouan but once in thirty years. This boastful spirit met with its due reward. Only a few weeks later Assouan was visited by a tremendous shower that nearly drowned the unfortunate fellahin in their crumbling mud huts. In a few years more of British rule Egypt will probably become habitually addicted to rain, and it may even go the length of fogs. When it loses its climate it will lose its Cairene racecourse, and then, unless some one starts a gambling house on the Monte Carlo pattern, Egypt will be deserted by those tourists who find the Pyramids a bore.

A LAND OF THIRST.

There is one improvement in Egypt which is greatly needed, but which is as yet so far away as to be out of sight. There should be some means of allaying the thirst which the usually dry climate creates. There is, of course, the Nile water, which the natives drink with impunity, and which they insist is the best water in the world—though in view of the fact that they have never tasted any other water, their judgment in the matter cannot be accepted unreservedly. The simple fact is that the Nile, being the only sewer of all Egypt, is better stocked with microbes than any other river, always excepting the Seine.

Now if you are in Egypt, and are a water drinker, you must either risk typhoid fever or drink boiled water. The latter you cannot get unless you carry with you a spirit lamp and secretly boil your water in your room, and thereby incur the suspicion among the Arab servants that you are a necromancer, performing strange and terrible rites. At the hotels you can get extremely poor claret for 2s. a bottle, but at that price any man with a thirst that is worthy of respect must bankrupt himself in the course of a Winter. A supply of cheap and good claret is the chief necessity of Egypt, and the British Government ought to have thought of this before spending vast sums of money to dam the Nile, and thereby insure a perennial and plentiful supply of sewage. A vast reservoir, to hold millions of gallons of sound claret, to be sold at the rats of a franc a bottle, would be a blessing to the foreigner in Egypt which could not be overestimated.

Still, in spite of the fact that it is a land of thirst, Egypt will never lose its charm. Its ruins are of the very best quality, and the supply is sufficient to meet any demand. Its mummies are similarly inexhaustible, though it is to be feared that some of the enterprising mummy manufacturers of Alexandria will overstock the market. It is the best place in the world in which to rest. Nobody can rest in the nineteenth or twentieth century. The tired man needs to get back at least 7,000 years before he can thoroughly rest, and Egypt is the one place in which he can do this.

TUNG-FU-SIANG'S TYRANNY

Letter from Sian-Foo Says Chinese Court Is at His Mercy.

HIS THREAT TO THE EMPEROR

He Made Use of Language That Formerly Would Have Caused the Loss of His Head Without Delay.

Foreign Correspondence NEW YORK TIMES.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 24.—Reports here from the imperial refuge at Sian-Foo confirm the diplomatic advices at Peking of the tyranny which Tung-Fu-Siang, the Mohammedan leader, is exercising over the Empress and the Court. He is in personal command at the palace, where not only has he stationed a special and devoted guard of troops, but where his spies and emissaries are located in such numbers that the most minute occurrences are reported to him. The Empress apparently has not been able to consult with any of her advisers without Tung knowing all about what happens, whether he may be present in person or not, and her official acts, if not incited by him, can become effective only with his approval. His offensive attitude is said to keep the Empress in a state bordering on nervous collapse and to have added to the terrors of the Emperor that of assassination.

What kind of bed Tung-Fu-Siang may think he is making for himself can only be surmised. Possibly the couch of royalty may not be beyond his aspirations. He seems deliberately to have put himself out of the pale of foreign consideration. Having burned his bridges behind him, the picture that his mind conjures of the future must certainly keep him high in power, if not at the pinnacle. He is not only anti-foreign, but anti-Christian. Mohammedans abound in the northwest region from which he comes, and he may hope to inject the religious feature into the anti-foreign sentiment already prevailing in the southwest. There would be little use in it elsewhere in the empire, because the people at large are not at all fanatical over such little religion as they profess.

If the orders going out to the viceroys to assemble troops in various provinces to expel the foreigners emanated from Tung-Fu-Siang, as naturally they would, either his ambitions may soon be defined or his career ended, for there is little fear that such an order will meet with generous or cheerful response, and the failure of that order must increase the discontent already felt at Court.

Every one conversant with imperial affairs credits the Empress with considerable ingenuity in handling men and in shaping circumstances to her own advantage, and while she is now under eclipse, the instinct of self-preservation may come to her aid and enable her to get from under the espionage that now oppresses her.

LETTER FROM COURT OFFICIAL.

A letter lately received from a Court official by a friend in Che-Kiang, near here, relates an incident which shows how Tung-Fu-Siang carries himself in the imperial presence. The writer says:

"While there is a body of Manchus of military rank—about 250 in number—who are called by courtesy 'Imperial Guardsmen,' who take turns in holding the great gates of the Governor's yamen, which now does duty as an imperial palace for the Empress Dowager and the Emperor, pending the completion of the repairs now being done to a part of the old palace of previous dynasties, the real guards of the palace are furnished by a Kan-Soo battalion composed entirely of Gen. Tung-Fu-Siang's fellow-townsmen and clansmen from Ning-Hsia, who are devoted heart and soul to him and recognize no authority but his. Gen. Tung himself has his headquarters hard by in the residence of a notable, who is a mandarin in a southern province.

"I even have reason to believe that the present palace is filled with creatures of Gen. Tung, who report to him everything they hear and see at Court. For instance, the Empress Dowager, the Emperor, myself, and a high Manchu officer were two days ago talking privately over the present crisis and the demands of the foreign powers for the punishment of the Princes and Ministers who instigated and encouraged the Boxers of Pe-chi-Li and Shan-Tung, also about the question of the Emperor's return to Peking. There was no one within hearing of our group, except two or three confidential eunuchs of the Empress Dowager's retinue; and yet the whole substance of our conversation was reported to Gen. Tung within four hours of its taking place!

"Gen. Tung strutted in haughtily to where the Empress Dowager and Emperor were sitting soon afterward, and, after going through in a slipshod manner the usual three prostrations and nine kowtows, as if he did not care how he performed the ceremony, he at once, without any circumlocution, abruptly asked the Empress Dowager what she intended doing about the dealing out of her punishment upon the 'faithful' Princes and Ministers. There was no attempt on Tung's part to cover the fact of his having obtained his news through spies, while his behavior of late is as different now from the reverence and humility he used to show in Peking—even during the acme of power of Prince Tuan last Summer—as heaven is from earth.

"Fortunately, there had been no decision made during our conversation in the fore part of the day, so the Empress Dowager merely raised her eyebrows in mild surprise, as it were, at Tung's abrupt intrusion, and said: 'No. Perhaps you have a plan to help us in bringing it about?' Naturally at first we were all completely taken by surprise by Tung's knowledge of what was going on in the palace—while the Emperor was especially indignant at Tung's disrespectful manner; so an unpleasant pause ensued.

"The silence was broken at last by Gen. Tung, who, eying the Emperor in a threatening sort of manner, (which rather frightened me and involuntarily made me move forward a step to throw myself between the Emperor and Tung; an act from which I restrained myself in time,) appeared at last to gulp down the wrathful and disrespectful words on the tip of his tongue, and then suavely said: 'I beg your Majesty to pardon the military abruptness and coarseness of your slave, (Nu-ts'ai.) It was only my devotion to the sacred dynasty that led me to ask the Empress Dowager. Your Majesty also doubtless remembers Wang-Mang of the Han dynasty. He was originally also a coarse, uneducated military officer; but he prevented the Han Emperor from entering into a disgraceful treaty with foreign barbarians!'

NO ONE TO PROTECT THE EMPEROR.

"This utterance of Gen. Tung was clearly a traitorous one, and at any other time such a speech would have caused the speaker's head to roll in the dust, struck off the next instant by the swords of the Imperial Guardsmen on duty below the Emperor's divan. But who was there to do this, situated as the Court is at present? Not a soul dared to make a single deprecatory remark, and Tung's traitorous speech was allowed to pass by in grim silence. Alas for our poor, unfortunate empire!

"Finally Gen. Tung left the presence as abruptly as he had come, like a whirlwind. He had shown us in so many words what we in our hearts already felt—that is to say, that we were all in Gen. Tung's power, to do with as it pleases him best on the spur of the moment. So long as there does not rise up some loyal, devoted servant of the Emperor to save the Court, we are here simply as prisoners and hostages, as it were, for Gen. Tung-Fu-Siang's head.

"I have long suspected the disloyalty of Gen. Tung, and I have proofs that he is ready to rebel at any moment. If possible, he will wait for the money, arms, and ammunition on their way to this city from the southern provinces and Ho-Nan. All these Tung is determined to seize at all costs. I despair of seeing my native city any more, and will try to resign, if I can; yet how can I bear to desert my sovereign in his hour of dire necessity? Rebellion and foreign aggression are fast approaching these regions, and our only hope of escape from harm is that his Majesty's good providence, which has hitherto protected him during the most dangerous crisis, will still stand firmly by him, for no other agency can save us all.

"The Empress Dowager has greatly thinned down since August, and I suspect is suffering from some internal disease. In spite of her iron will and natural determination of character, all these trials and dangers are manifestly undermining her health, for you must remember she is pretty nearly seventy years old now.

GEN. MA A FRAIL SUPPORT.

"Gen. Ma, who is considered by some here to be the last protection of the throne should Tung fail, and who is a hereditary enemy of Gen. Tung, according to my mind, will be a frail support at the last moment, because he is first a Mahommedan, and last a Mahommedan also. A civil war among Buddhists will doubtlessly be hailed with joy by the whole Mahommedan subjects of the throne without a single exception!"

The allusion by Tung to Wang-Mang, in his remarks to the Emperor, was a gross piece of impudence, and, as the writer of the letter says, it veiled a threat which in ordinary times would have been construed as traitorous. Wang-Mang lived at the beginning of the Christian era, under the Han dynasty. The Emperor wished to make a treaty with the Turks, who were encroaching upon the borders of the present Province of Kan-Soo, in the northwest. Wang-Mang interposed, prevented the treaty, and in the following year murdered the Emperor and his infant successor and usurped the throne. Tung's hint to Kuang-Su that history might repeat itself, with another royal life as the forfeit, may well have stirred hope in the hearts of all who witnessed the incident that, as the writer expressed it, some devoted servant of the Emperor may rise up to save the Court now acting the part of hostage for Tung's head.

LIBERAL CONCESSIONS TO ARMENIANS IN PERSIA.—When, last Summer, it was expected that the Shah of Persia would visit London, a memorial was drawn up by prominent Armenians in England, which, after alluding in terms of praise to the father of the present Shah, begged that the Armenians in Persia might not only be "sustained and encouraged by the knowledge of the security of their possessions, but also receive adequate encouragement in all their educational, commercial, and industrial enterprises, as Persian subjects."

When it became known that the Shah would not visit London the memorial was conveyed to Ostend through the Persian Minister to Great Britain, and was there presented to his Majesty. On his way home to Persia the Shah visited the Sultan of Turkey, and while in Constantinople took occasion to send a most gracious message to the Armenian Patriarch there. It is now learned from Persia that one of the first acts of Muzaffer-ed-Din on reaching Tabriz has been to issue orders to the Governors of the Persian provinces, commanding them to give every facility to his Armenian subjects for opening and establishing schools, for delivering public addresses and lectures on all educational matters, and for forming or founding national and commercial societies without being obliged on each occasion to make a formal application to the Central Government at Teheran for permission.

AN ALLEGED DESCENDANT OF THE GREAT NAPOLEON.—Owing to a story that has recently been going the rounds of the German press, some American papers have printed articles to the effect that there is still in existence a son of Napoleon II., known in history as the Duke of Reichstadt, and upon whose brief career M. Rostand's play of "L'Aiglon" is founded. The German story is that a man named Charles Gustave Louis Bonaparte, who died the other day at Chemnitz, in Saxony, was the direct descendant of the great Napoleon. This story is ridiculed in Paris, where the story of the controversy over an alleged Dauphin son of Louis XVI., and the claims of the Dutch Nauendorffs to the French Crown are recalled. It is suggested that the only resemblance between the late M. Bonaparte of Chemnitz and the son of the First Napoleon was that both spoke French with a strong Teutonic accent. Nauendorff, who put forward his claims to be regarded as Louis XVII., was a clockmaker in a town in Holland, and the late Charles Louis Bonaparte of Chemnitz is discovered to have been a tailor. He died at the age of sixty-eight, and leaves a widow, whose mourning notice of her husband appeared in a local paper, and caused the propagation of the report that the humble Chemnitz tailor was the real Napoleon III.

RADICAL CHANGES IN FRENCH RECRUITING CONTEMPLATED.—In the course of the debate on the army estimates the other day in the French Chamber several Deputies advocated a reduction in the cost of the national defense, which, one Deputy said, could be brought about by the reduction of the military service from three years to twelve months, this change to be accompanied by the organization of a permanent contingent of non-commissioned officers and of re-enlisted men; thus by the side of 200,000 conscripts there might be 300,000 men who had re-enlisted. Another plan also advocated re-engagements, with a reduction of service to two years.

These interpellations caused the Minister of War, Gen. André, to disclose the outline of a scheme for reorganization, which, he said, was as yet far from complete. He stated that he proposed to make an experiment in re-enlistment so as to ascertain how quickly and at what cost the system might be brought into operation in an emergency, but meanwhile he objected to a two years' service law, for the third year men would be disbanded without any equivalent. They must first abolish the system under which men were allowed to serve for one year only, for the men of that class at present in the army could not without breach of faith be detained for a second year. There was, he said, a deficiency of officers, especially in the reserve, and he had prepared a bill for increasing the reserve officers by 1,000. As to privates, the minimum height of 4 feet 11 inches had had its day, for in present warfare it was better to be short than tall, and there was no reason for excluding small but robust men, who gained in vigor what they lost in height.

The net increase in the present estimates, Gen. André continued, was 3,000,000f., and he regretted that it was not more, but by dint of economy the most urgent matters were provided for. Bizerta, in the Mediterranean, would have 2,500,000f. for coast defenses, and for shooting ranges 5,000,000f. To these last, he said, he attached great importance. One million francs were assigned for barracks, which would eventually require 10,000,000f. or 20,000,000f., and the operations in Southern Algeria would take 3,500,000f. The 3,000,000f. of increased pay to officers would have a good effect. As to the moral amelioration, it was necessary to revive in all the officers the sentiments of mutual confidence and esteem which had always marked the French Army, and without which there could be no strong army.

THE SITUATION IN THE BALKANS.—While the papers of Vienna and St. Petersburg are congratulating their respective Governments that the Austro-Hungarian-Russian intervention has prevented a collision between Roumania, Servia, and Bulgaria, or an armed union of two of these States against Turkey, the Macedonian Committee through its Paris agents is publishing accounts of increasing lawlessness in the Balkans themselves, which is attributed, particularly in Macedonia, to the encouragement that the Porte has received from the attitude of Austria-Hungary and Russia. Moreover, it is alleged that the Sultan fully believes that the Cretan Assembly, ignoring the wish of the powers, will presently vote for the incorporation of Crete with Greece, when he can with less regard for consequences inflict severe punishment upon the Greeks and Armenians within the dominions of the Porte. To place these people in the proper state of revolt is said to be the object of the recent massacres in Albania and Armenia. In the former, it is authoritatively stated from Constantinople, one Mussulman chief alone, carrying on operations where it was said an insurrection was meditated, put to death 200 Christians. Then, again, notwithstanding the energetic remonstrances of both Austrian and Russian diplomacy, there have been several hundred assassinations in Macedonia. In the small towns like Vodena, Coumentza, and even in the neighborhood of Salonika, Bulgarian ruffians who are said to be in the pay of the Turkish officials rob and assault respectable Greek merchants or levy blackmail upon them, for which there is no redress from the Turkish authorities.

In Athens it is openly charged that the indifference manifested by the Ottomans in power is directly due to a desire on the part of the Sultan to convince the Greeks that the state of Macedonia is such that in case of annexation of Crete an insurrection with fatal results for the Greek population would be inevitable.

HOLLAND AND HER PEOPLE.

Slowness of Business Methods—Children Taught Thrift—American Fruit Popular.

Foreign Correspondence NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Dec. 31, 1900.—When you consider the slow methods—compared with those of America—employed in Europe for the expedition of business, Holland is far from being behind greater and larger countries of the Old World. Her people, if their vision is not one extending over a boundless area, are liberal in mind. They are solid, simple, self-contained men and women; taught from their earliest years to be thrifty, but not to go ragged, and save.

There is a system for children easily understood by them of banking at the Post Office. A book is given with places for stamps. The child brings its money, and a little gummed bit of paper is given in return, stating the sum deposited, usually 5 Dutch cents, for the children love to take the book frequently. This paper they stick themselves on the place allotted in the book. To-day, the last of the year, the Post Office is full of children for the year's savings of the family in "coppers" are taken out of the green earthernware pig, which is a Dutch "spaarpot" (savings bank) and divided among the little ones. Thus youth begins to think out for itself the great wherewithal of life.

These small and slow ways are carried into man and womanhood, and must be met with in business life to a certain degree. The slowness annoys the American business man, when he arrives fresh from the United States with "hurry up" for his motto, keen on making changes and on revolutionizing things, &c. In principle he is right, as a case which occurred not long since in Rotterdam will illustrate. A ship for a certain firm had arrived outside the port, and through some mistake there was no place for her to come into dock. The young American, who was waiting for her cargo, did not intend to let her lie outside a day or two, as he was informed she must do, so he had piles driven in near the dock and landed his cargo on the day fixed. Of course such boldness was astonishing to old Rotterdamers, who did not do business "that way," but when they heard that the act had saved the firm a small fortune, the business men along the Boompjes took another view of the matter.

American canned fruits have always been considered here the best for the price, and I am told by a leading grocer that this year they have taken only American canned fruits. The Holland fruit is the finest in the world, but also the dearest. It is too dear for daily consumption, and cannot be had under 1 gulden and 20 (Dutch) cents, whereas the American fruits can be sold for 85 (Dutch) cents, the same size of can and is brought from California, alas! via England, or it would be cheaper still, for all the dealers agree in saying that if there was a commission house in Holland for American products like those of Liverpool, where the dealer could go and buy, the cost would be less.

The American dried apple and the California apricot have a good sale here. Apricots also were not to be found in the retail stores six or seven years ago. Canned corn I had brought over by my grocer, and he told me this week he ordered a dozen cases now where he ordered only one less than five years ago.

There is one fruit that is very cheap in American markets, and which is here eaten only by the rich. That is pineapple. The cheapest to be had in the market in Holland is $1 the piece. A really fine one costs $2. Bananas also fetch fabulous prices, and we never see American oranges. This last is accounted for, of course, because Spain and Italy are so near.

MEVROUW HANKEN PARKER.

APPALACHIAN FOREST RESERVE

Secretary Wilson's Plans for Preserving a Great Hardwood Forest for Scientific Forestry Study and Experimentation.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

One of the most interesting matters now before Congress, and one which should attract general attention, is the proposition for the establishment of the Appalachian Forest reserve, for which a bill was introduced in Congress a few days ago. This proposed measure directs the Secretary of Agriculture to purchase not to exceed 2,000,000 acres of forest land in the Appalachian Mountains within the States of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, and Tennessee, for the establishment of the park, and gives him the control of it. Five million dollars is to be appropriated for the purchase of the land and development of the park. The reservation will be known as the Southern Appalachian Forest Reserve.

There is no National park or forestry reservation east of the Mississippi River. The establishment of a forestry reserve is deemed preferable to that of simply a large National park, by which the area embraced would be taken from public use and development, and the forests, streams, and animals preserved. The forestry reserve idea is that the great forest wealth of the region within its boundaries shall be made use of; that they shall be protected by lumbering in systematic and scientific manner, so that our great forests shall not be killed, nor yet be made useless. The reserve will also serve as a great park, where the attractions of nature will not only not be done away with, but will be made more accessible.

The region selected for this proposed reserve is one of the most picturesque and attractive in the United States. The centre of it is that portion of the mountain district in Western North Carolina, in the vicinity of Asheville. It is a territory peculiarly adapted to forestry reserve purposes. The Appalachians there reach their greatest height and afford their wildest and most picturesque scenery. In that region are found the richest hardwood forests of the United States. These forests are still largely in their primitive condition. The Northern and Southern species of woods meet there, and the proposed area embraces a greater variety of hardwoods than are found elsewhere in this country. This reserve would be in that region about which are situated the head waters of the Ohio, Tennessee, Savannah, Yadkin, and Roanoke Rivers. It is within a day's ride of nearly two-thirds of the people of the United States.

There have been so far set aside west of the Mississippi 70,000 square miles for National parks and forestry reserves. East of that river there is nothing of this kind. If there is ever to be a National forestry reserve of the hardwood forests of the country, now is the time to establish it. These great Southern forests are valuable. The lumberman is after them; they are rising in value steadily, and unless the Government moves soon it will be too late to secure the area needed, and with the primitive forests untouched.

The people of the United States are all vitally interested in this proposition. It is much more than a question of mere dollars and cents at the present time. It is a question which looks to the whole future, so far as our timber supply goes, and even, in large manner, of our whole industrial character. One problem is whether, by the destruction of this magnificent forest area the streams now furnishing water power to vast industries and having hundreds of undeveloped powers, and which feed many of our great rivers, shall be shrunken to insignificance or dried up. Another is the vast benefit to be derived from the educational work carried on by such a forestry reserve. The preservation of the forests and cutting of the timber in a scientific way will give a steady available supply of timber for all time, and will teach the people of all sections the proper care and utilization of our forests. The reserve will set aside a limited portion of our hardwood areas, and that portion which is the most suitable, for the examination and study of future generations.

The interest in forest preservation is increasing in this country. There is a growing demand for the establishment of this reserve. The demand comes from many different portions of the Union. In response to this demand, Secretary of Agriculture Wilson has had extensive investigations made of the areas proposed to be embraced in the reserve, and these investigations emphasize the great need for and advantages to be derived from it. It is important that the people of the country awake to the full importance of this laudable project, and bring their influence to its support.

Dinner to Col. William H. Boyle.

The committee appointed by the army associates and his friends in the Military Order of Loyal Legion and the Grand Army of the Republic to arrange for a testimonial dinner and reception to Col. William Henry Boyle of the army, has completed all the details. The dinner will be given at the Hotel St. Denis on the evening of Jan. 17, and will be preceded by a reception. About 200 have already subscribed, and among the speakers will be Gen. O. O. Howard, who will preside, and Major James Regan, an old army comrade, and who was with the Ninth Regiment during the China campaign, and who succeeded to the temporary command of the regiment after Col. E. H. Liscum was shot. Provisions have been made for ladies in the gallery of the banquet hall. The souvenir menu will be unique and elaborate.

The Vanderbilt-French wedding, to be celebrated at Newport to-morrow, will be the chief event of the week. The guests from the wedding will return from Newport on Monday evening and Tuesday morning to attend the dance to be given by Mrs. John Jacob Astor on Tuesday evening. The same day will bring the wedding of W.V. B. Kip and Miss Elsa Strong, daughter of Col. J. M. Strong of Syracuse; a dinner dance at Mrs. Robert McAllister Lloyd's for Miss Eleanor Morris; a dinner for Miss Frederica Vanderbilt Webb, to be given by Mrs. Morgan Dix, and other dinners to be given by Dr. Everett M. Culver and Mrs. Culver, for Dr. Lewis Rutherfurd Morris and Mrs. Morris; by Mrs. Maturin Livingston, and Mrs. Pembroke Jones, and by Mr. and Mrs. Philip Livingston, the last in the Metropolitan Club annex.

On Wednesday Mrs. Daniel Butterfield will give the second and last of her receptions, with music; Mrs. Philip Livingston the first of two large receptions to introduce Miss Caroline Livingston, a daughter of Mrs. Robert Cambridge Livingston, and Mrs. Ramsay Turnbull, the second of two receptions. In the evening will take place the dance to be given by Dr. W. Seward Webb and Mrs. Webb at their residence, 680 Fifth Avenue, for their daughter, Miss Frederica Vanderbilt Webb.

***

Thursday will be marked by the wedding of E. Parmelee Prentice of Chicago and Miss Alta Rockefeller; large dinners to be given by Mrs. Frederic Kernochan and Mrs. William Street, and a dance to be given by Mrs. Henry Lewis Morris for Miss Eleanor Russell Morris, in the Metropolitan Club Annex.

***

Friday, as usual, will not be particularly gay. There is a dance scheduled for the evening, to be given by Mrs. H. McK. Twombly at her residence for her débutante daughter, Miss Florence Twombly. Among the dinners of the evening will be one to be given by Mrs. J. Pierrepont Edwards. The week will close on Saturday with a meeting of Mrs. Charles R. Huntington's dancing class at Delmonico's; the second and last of two receptions to be given by M. and Mme. Chartran at M. Chartran's studio, and a dinner, followed by informal dancing, to be given by Mrs. Lucius K. Wilmerding.

***

The annual Charity Ball for the benefit of the Nursery and Child's Hospital will take place on Tuesday evening, Jan. 29, at the Astoria. For the last few years, and since this ball has finally found a home in the beautiful ballroom of the Astoria, it has regained to a great extent its former prestige. There is every reason to expect that the ball will be a greater success this year than ever before, and that a goodly sum of money will be raised for the charity for which it is to be given.

***

Among the incidents of the week will be the eleventh anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Gibert Thebaud, which they will celebrate by a dinner at their residence, 158 Madison Avenue, to be followed by a parlor vaudeville show. Last year, as will be remembered, Mr. and Mrs. Thebaud celebrated their tin wedding and gave a notable entertainment. Mrs. Reynal, the mother of Mrs. Thebaud, has recently returned from a visit to her son, Eugene Reynal, at Aiken, S. C., where the latter is spending the Winter.

***

The continued open Winter has enabled the members of the hunt clubs at Hempstead, Lakewood, and elsewhere to keep up their meets and runs. Some of the best runs that the Meadowbrook Club has ever held have taken place within the past fortnight. These conditions have kept the Hempstead colony in the country much later than usual and have also prevented the usual exodus to Aiken and England. With colder weather, and especially with snow, the men and women who are prominent in the hunting field will leave for the South.

***

There have as yet been few prominent arrivals in Florida, where the great hotels are just opening. The vestibuled trains will this week begin their trips, and it will not be long before there will be news of social interest from Palm Beach, Aiken, Jekyl Island, Nassau, and New Orleans. The New Orleans Carnival, which will follow a Winter of exceptional gayety in that city, will be witnessed by many prominent New Yorkers this year. From all indications Egypt and the Riviera are to take second place in the coming late Winter and early Spring to Florida and Nassau. New Yorkers last year discovered that in the lower east coast of Florida, the Bahamas, and even Cuba and Porto Rico, they have an accessible Riviera of their own.

***

The past week brought two notable dancing events, namely, Mrs. Astor's annual ball on Monday night and Mrs. Ogden Mills's annual dance on Friday night. Both events were of exceeding interest to the more exclusive and fashionable element in New York society. Mrs. Astor's ball was the largest she has given in a decade, and was a superbly appointed and beautiful affair. The hostess, who is much improved in health, looked extremely well, and to all appearances bore the fatigue of the long night quite as well as some of her younger guests. The cotillion was an exceptionally large one, and was led from either end by Harry Lehr and Richard Peters, who was later succeeded by Craig Wadsworth. Mr. Wadsworth was ill on the day of the ball, and it was feared for a time that he would not be able to lead, so that Richard Peters began the figures. Some of the most striking and effective gowns exhibited this Winter were in evidence at Mrs. Astor's ball, and the display of jewels was almost phenomenal. The pearls worn by Mrs. Frederick Pearson, especially her strings of immense pearls, draped across the bodice and looped on the shoulders, have been the talk of the town ever since. Had she been present even Mrs. Gould's ropes of pearls would have paled in comparison to Mrs. Pearson's matchless jewels. It is said that these pearls represented a purchase price of $1,000,000. Mrs. Astor wore all her famous diamonds, which have been so often described. Mrs. Astor's special flower for decorating has been the American Beauty rose, but this year there were quite as many orchids in evidence, and the drawing room where Mrs. Astor received was decorated by Hodgeson with superb clusters of orchids, and the same flower was used in profusion on the supper tables.

***

Perhaps the most beautifully gowned woman at the Astor ball was Mrs. Charles Astor Bristed (Miss Donnelly) of Lenox. This was of rose pink velvet. She wore a marvelous tiara of diamonds and pearls. The design was one of oak leaves and acorns, the diamonds forming the leaves and immense pearls the acorns. Miss Rebecca Darlington of Pittsburg, who danced with Prince Ruspoli, was one of the belles of the ball. She wore a gown of white tulle, embroidered in silver, and a fillet of silver leaves in her coiffure.

***

There were many from out of town at Mrs. Astor's ball. Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer and Mrs. De Forest Danielson of Boston attracted much attention by their beautiful gowns and jewels. Lady Cunard, who came with Mrs. Francis H. Leggett, was also beautifully gowned, and Mrs. Leggett looked remarkably well in a velvet gown and wore some handsome jewels.

***

The feature of Mrs. Ogden Mills's dance on Friday night was, as usual, its restricted list of guests. Only those who constitute what is called "Mrs. Mills's court," and who number some 200, were invited. Through the many varying conditions of the New York society world, Mrs. Mills's list, like the laws of the Medes and Persians, altereth not. The cotillion was, as always, led by Worthington Whitehouse, who danced with Mrs. Mills, and the favors chosen by Mrs. Mills, many from Paris, and others selected by Mrs. Collins, were dainty and novel. There were no unusual features to this dance.

***

After their long period of mourning, the Vanderbilt family connection will come forward prominently this week. The wedding of young Alfred Vanderbilt and Miss Elsie French, at Newport to-morrow, will be followed by a dance to be given by Dr. W. Seward Webb and Mrs. Webb (Miss Leila Vanderbilt) for their daughter Miss Frederica Vanderbilt Webb at their residence, on Wednesday evening. On Friday night there is a dance scheduled to be given by Mr. and Mrs. H. McK. Twombly for their débutante daughter, Miss Florence Twombly.

***

The abandonment of a dinner dance appointed for last Thursday night by Mrs. Frederic Gallatin in consequence of the serious illness at her residence of an old and valued nurse who had been with the family for more than a score of years, caused widespread comment. It is not often that a New York hostess abandons a notable entertainment for such a reason, and the opinion is generally held and expressed that Mrs. Gallatin showed rare kindness of heart and consideration by her action. Not only did Mrs. Gallatin recall the invitations to the dance, but none of her family have taken any part in the gayeties of the week in consequence of the old servant's illness.

***

The wedding of William V. B. Kip, whose sister, Adelaide Kip, married Philip Rhinelander, and Miss Elsa Strong, daughter of Col. John M. Strong, of Syracuse, N. Y., a niece of Mrs. Samuel Penniman and Mrs. Benjamin Knower of this city, will be celebrated at the residence of Mrs. Penniman on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock by the Rev. Dr. Vibbert of Trinity Chapel. Miss Constance Knower, Miss Strong's cousin, will be maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will be Miss Marie Cebalos Hewitt and Cornelle Bradley Harris. The best man will be Matthew Astor Wilks, and the ushers will be Philip Rhinelander, Philip Livingston, Gerald H. Gray, and Cecil Landale. Mr. Kip and Miss Strong have been dined and wined almost continuously for the past three weeks, and no young couple in years have been so much entertained previous to their wedding.

***

The two subscription dances of the week of note unfortunately fell on the same evening. These were the Fortnightly and Junior Cotillion, danced at the Astoria and Sherry's, respectively. These dances are exceedingly popular with the younger element, and created almost as much anticipatory excitement among the débutantes and younger men as do the Assembly balls. Both were remarkably pretty and enjoyable affairs. The Fortnightly had a Christmas flavor in its decorations and favors.

***

The second and last Assembly ball of the season will take place at the Astoria on Thursday evening, Jan. 24. The guests will be received by Mrs. Duncan Cryder, Mrs. W. Bayard Cutting, Mrs. William D. Sloane, and Mrs. Edmund L. Baylies.

***

Miss Annie Leary gave a handsome dinner of fourteen covers on Wednesday last, and afterward took her guests to the opera. The table was beautifully decorated with American Beauty roses and an orchestra played during the dinner. The favors were boxes of pink satin trimmed with delicately tinted roses. Miss Leary's guests were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Astor Bristed, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Burrall Hoffman, Mrs. Frederick Pearson, Mrs. John Vinton Dahlgren, Matthew Astor Wilks, Creighton Webb, Prince Ruspoli, Mr. Richards, Mr. Van Rennselaer, and Prince Henri de Croy. The dinner was given for Miss Rebecca Darlington of Pittsburg.

***

Mrs. Francis Burrall Hoffman gave a luncheon last Sunday, which was followed by a reception. Her guests included, among others, the Baroness de Seilliere, the Marquise de Talleyrand-Perigord, Mrs. Maturin Livingston, Mrs. Wickham Hoffman, and of young girls the Misses Lily Oelrichs, Nathalie Henderson, and Rebecca Darlington. Among the men were Isaac Iselin, Archibald Harrison, Forsythe Wicks, John Mackay, and D. O. Mills.

***

Mrs. J. West Roosevelt of 110 East Thirty-first Street will give at her residence on Friday, Jan. 25, a tea for Mrs. Marion Crawford. Mrs. Frederic J. de Peyster and the Misses de Peyster sent out cards for "at homes" on Thursdays in January. Mrs. Louis J. Pooler of 17 East Sixty-fifth Street has cards out for Tuesdays, and Mrs. William E. Ver Planck has issued cards for the last three Tuesdays in January.

***

Mrs. Astor has sent out cards for a dinner, to be given at her Fifth Avenue house on Tuesday, Jan. 22, and it is probable that she will give two more before sailing for Europe late in February. Mrs. H. Mortimer Brooks will give a large dinner on Tuesday, Jan. 29.

***

At the large and handsome dance to be given by Mrs. John Jacob Astor on Tuesday night, Craig Wadsworth will, as usual, lead the cotillion, dancing with the hostess. This will be a larger dance than Mrs. John Jacob Astor usually gives, and the favors and decorations will be exceptionally beautiful.

***

Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish will, as announced in these columns yesterday, give a dance at her town house on the evening of Wednesday, Feb. 6. This will probably be a dinner dance, and many of the guests will come to it from dinners to be given by other prominent women. On the previous night, Feb. 5, Mrs. George Gould is to give a large and elaborate dinner and musicale at her Fifth Avenue house, and on the night following the Fish ball a dance for young people will be given at Sherry's in honor of Miss Eleanor Jay, the débutante daughter of Col. William Jay and Mrs. Jay.

***

Mrs. Fish is also scheduled to give an unusually large dinner on the evening of Monday, Jan. 28. Mrs. Fish, it is said, has in mind some especially attractive features to follow this dinner. It is also said that Mme. Bernhardt and M. Coquelin are to appear at one of Mrs. Fish's functions.

***

William V. B. Kip, whose marriage to Miss Strong is to be celebrated on Tuesday next, will give his bachelor dinner at the Metropolitan Club on Monday night. His guests will include his brother-in-law, Philip Rhinelander; his cousin, Philip Livingston; Gerald H. Gray, and Cecil Landale, the ushers, and Matthew Astor Wilkes, who is to be Mr. Kip's best man, and several others.

***

On Friday evening, Jan. 25, Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Olyphant are to give a large theatre party for their daughter, Miss Amy Gordon Olyphant, who made her début last Winter. A supper and informal dancing in the Metropolitan Club Annex will follow the theatre party.

***

To-day the New York Yacht Club will open its new house, on Forty-fourth Street, with a large but informal reception. In the evening Mrs. Henry Clews will give a dinner. Miss De Forest and Miss Callender will give a large but informal musicale in the afternoon.

***

Dinners were given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. Francis Burton Harrison at the house they have leased for the Winter, at 6 West Fifty-sixth Street. The superb house that is being finished for Mr. and Mrs. Harrison on Upper Fifth Avenue, and near that of William C. Whitney, will probably be completed and ready for their occupancy next Autumn. Other dinners given last night were those at which Mrs. H. De Berkeley Parsons and Mrs. Henry Mills Day and Mrs. Alfred P. Dix were the hostesses. Mrs. John Murray Mitchell of 9 East Sixty-seventh Street gave a large reception yesterday afternoon, and will give a dinner on Thursday next.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Norman De R. Whitehouse are going to Philadelphia on Friday next for the Paul ball. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Moore Robinson have issued invitations for a dinner to be given in their honor the night of the ball.

***

The St. Nicholas Club has issued cards for a ladies' reception on Saturday evening, Jan. 26, at 9 o'clock, at the clubhouse, West Forty-fourth Street. The patronesses of the reception are Mrs. Cortlandt S. Van Rensselaer, Mrs. Gen. Charles F. Roe, Mrs. Walter Rutherford, Mrs. Henry F. S. Davis, Mrs. Thomas Bloodgood Peck, Mrs. Eugene Schieffelin, Mrs. Sackett W. Barclay, Mrs. Charles H. Stout, Mrs. Walden Pell, Mrs. Henry L. Wardwell, and Mrs. William Gordon Ver Planck.

***

Mrs. Borden Harriman is reorganizing the sewing class of the Post-Graduate Hospital's babies' wards. The meetings of this class are scheduled as follows: Feb. 6, Mrs. W. J. Schieffelin, 5 East Sixty-sixth Street; Feb. 13, Mrs. Hitchcock, 8 East Twenty-ninth Street; Feb. 20, Mrs. Bradish Johnson, 102 Fifth Avenue; Feb. 27, Mrs. E. Livingston Ludlow, 6 East Seventy-sixth Street; March 6, Miss Sands, 385 Fifth Avenue; March 13, Mrs. Edward J. Berwind, 2 East Sixty-fourth Street; March 20, Mrs. Victor Sorchan, 207 Madison Avenue, and March 27, Mrs. Valentine G. Hall, 11 West Thirty-seventh Street.

***

The wedding of Henry R. Andrew of Boston and Miss Mary Raymond Garrettson, daughter of Rutland M. Garrettson, will be celebrated at noon on Wednesday next at the residence of the bride's father, 230 West Ninety-seventh Street, by the Rev. Dr. John Peters. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Andrew will sail for Europe and will not return to this country until Summer.

SOCIETY NOTES.

The engagement of Edwin Joseffy and Miss Clarice Spiero is announced.

The engagement has just been announced of Milton Katzenberg and Miss Fannie Stern of 1,468 Lexington Avenue.

The marriage of Mr. Louis Rosenfeld and Miss Bianca Blum will take place on Tuesday evening next, Jan. 15, at Delmonico's.

The marriage of Miss Matilda Rosenstein, daughter of Mr. Isaac Rosenstein, and William P. Schoen took place at Delmonico's, Drs. F. Kohler and S. Schulman officiating.

Miss Rosalind Shiel of Columbia Heights, Brooklyn, who has been in Colorado, at Denver and Manitou, with her sister, Mrs. Franklin Cobb of Denver, will not, as had been anticipated, return to Brooklyn this season, but will spend the Winter in Colorado. Miss Shiel is a member of the Amaranth Dramatic Society of Brooklyn.

The Bachelor Circle of the Freundschaft Club gave its annual ball last evening, which proved a great success. The large ballroom was tastefully decorated, and the numerous non-members who look forward to this affair as the only one which gives them access to the Freundschaft Club entertainments, enjoyed it quite as well as the members.

George C. Perries and Helen E. Carr, daughter of Sara A. Carr, were married last week at 436A Hancock Street, Brooklyn. The bride's gown was of blue Persian fouiard with trimmings of panne velvet and Cluny lace, and her bouquet was of Bride roses. Among the invited guests were Mr. and Mrs. William Herries, Mr. and Mrs. John Herries, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hasenohr, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Clark, Mrs. Sarah A. Carr, Miss Mary E. Herries, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Harris of Sagua, Cuba; Mr. Alexander Cunningham of Glasgow, Scotland; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lindsay, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chambers, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Harper, Mr. and Mrs. H. Hodging and family, Willard Chambers, Allen Chambers, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Yandell, Miss Christobell Yandell, E. Riffiard, Edgar Robic, Mrs. A. Allen, the Rev. and Mrs. A. J. Herries, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Crouns and family, Russel Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cowle, Tyler F. Blackwell, Miss Grace Byrnes, Miss Carrie McGrath, Frank McGrath, Andrew Dunbar, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wheeler of Chicago, Miss Jackson, and Eugene Hale. The bride and bridegroom are to make their home in Sagua La Grande, Cuba.

Mr. Simon Uhlmann of 19 East Sixty-third Street gave a fancy masque dance for his youngest daughter, Edith, last night at Delmonico's, in the grand salon, which was elaborately decorated. The guests numbered 150, and included principally the young friends of Miss Uhlmann. The cotillion was danced with novel variations. Many of the old proverbs were exemplified by the gowns and costumes of the ladies and gentlemen. The unmasking occurred at midnight. Supper was served at small tables in the large supper room. Miss Uhlmann is a sister of Mrs. David Heller and a niece of Frederick Uhlmann. Among the guests were Frederick Uhlmann, Mrs. David Heller, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Rothschild, the Misses Sichel, Edith Abraham of Brooklyn, Milly Levine, the Misses Stadler, Elsie Sidenberg, Irma Boskowitz, Madeline Hecht, Lulu Hecht, Edith Jacobi, Renee Jacobi, Florence Levine, Elsie Weil, Etta Schwab, Irma Wimpfheimer, Claire Falkenau, Viola Solomon, Miss Tim, Miss Dittenhoefer, Jennie M. Dreyfus, Clara Wechsler, Miss Gutman, Louise Bijur, Grace Goldsmith, Estelle Goldsmith, Amy Sommers, Mignon Sommers, Lena Goldberger, and Charles S. Guggenheimer, Melville Stern, Edgar M. Leventritt, Charles Heinsheimer, George Ranger, Stanley Ranger, Lawrence Abraham of Brooklyn, Arthur Hahlo, Algernon L. Schaefer, Edward Schaefer, Leonard Schaefer, Samuel Lieberman, Charles Lieb, Edwin Lorsch, Arthur Lorsch, Joseph Loewi, Oscar Loewi, William Sidenberg, Leopold Lowenstein, Bernard Naumberg, John Duveen, George Coblens, Sidney G. Wise, Milton Gans, Elbert Brussels, Herbert Spenser Brussels, and Milton H. Gans.

THE WEEK AT LAKEWOOD.

Ice in Fine Condition Attracts Big Crowds of Skaters—Popularity of the Speedway.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Jan. 12.—With the exception of the dinner given last Wednesday by Mrs. Kingdon at Georgian Court, Lakewood society has been very quiet. At this dinner covers were laid for fourteen guests. The dining room and table were beautifully decorated, pink being the prevailing color. This was the only notable affair in the cottage colony during the week.

Skating has led in popularity, and all week long the ice has been crowded. It is many years since there has been so long a season of skating, and every one has seemed determined to make the most of it. An occasional thaw, followed by a sharp freeze, has kept the ice in splendid condition, and the glory of a full moon has enabled the skaters to enjoy the exhilarating exercise at night.

The speedway is steadily growing in favor, and is quite as popular as its namesake in New York. Every afternoon exciting impromptu races take place, and owners of road horses enjoy a spin out to Forest Inn and back.

A pleasure-loving, self-entertaining crowd is a boon to a hotel manager, and that is what Mr. Berry has at the Lakewood. With a half dozen good leaders it is easy to make time pass quickly and pleasantly. The guests include a number of fine amateur musicians, who are generous with their gifts. Among them is Mrs. A. White of New York, who is always willing to entertain her friends.

The young ladies of the house have organized a pool tournament, and each night there are exciting contests. Miss Estelle Samuels holds first place by a narrow margin, with Miss Cyrelle Aronson second.

On Wednesday last, Mrs. G. Putzel of New York gave a Geisha Tea, which was uniquely beautiful, and a great success. One of the Lakewood parlors was transformed into a Japanese tea room, by means of palms, potted plants, screens, &c., and when the guests arrived dressed in National costume it looked like a scene from San Toy.

Oscar Straus has come to the Lakewood for the hydrotherapy baths, and for a rest. He has never fully regained his health since his return from Turkey, and his physician ordered a course of baths. Mrs. Straus and Master Roger W. Straus are with him, and they will probably remain all Winter.

Miss C. Le Montagne, Miss C. Woodhull, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Barrett, Miss Barrett, Miss Ullman, Mr. and Mrs. Leopold Peck, C. O. Farwell, A. Brisbane, L. J. O'Reily, L. G. Whitney, Thomas W. Walsh, Mr. and Mrs. L. Tim, Lawrence Godwin, Harry S. Harkness, Bedelle Varned, Miss A. R. Maguire, Miss M. Sanford, Thomas W. Fergus, Mrs. R. M. Sedgwick, Mrs. Lucy T. Griffith, Edward Griffith, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Goodkind, Miss Goodkind, Mrs. Charles Fechheimer, Mr. and Mrs. G. Putzel of New York, Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] A. Wooley, John J. Robinson, Mrs. [illegible] C. Treswell, Mrs. A. Bryan, G. Watts Bagley, Mr. and Mrs. Emil H. Frank of Brooklyn, D. W. Hanson, Mrs. L. Wampold, Miss Wampold, Mrs. C. Horine, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Westcott, Richfield Springs; T. F. Quincy, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence K. Arnold, Philadelphia; Miss Anthony, London, England; H. W. Leeds, Atlantic City; G. W. Hinkley, Fairfield, Me., are registered at the Lakewood.

The Laurel-in-the-Pines has been rather quiet during the past week. Among the latest arrivals are C. B. Alexander, Miss Alexander, Miss Janetta Alexander, Miss Mary Crocker Alexander, Judge S. P. McConnell, Mrs. H. P. Toler, Miss Dorothy Toler, H. P. Toler, Jr., John D. Rockefeller, Jr., J. J. McCook, the Misses McCook, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Chauncey, the Misses Chauncey, Daniel Chauncey, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Morris, and Mr. and Mrs. A. Lanman of New York, Miss Alger of Detroit, Dr. and Mrs. Wheeler, Miss Wheeler, and Charles J. Sise, Jr., of Montreal; Miss Slee of Elmira, Mrs. M. Trowbridge, John T. Hallock, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Salmon and son, and Mrs. D. V. B. Hegemant of Brooklyn.

Miss Martha Minor, the soprano, of New York, has been stopping for a week at the Laurel-in-the-Pines. She is just convalescent from an attack of typhoid fever. She returned home on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederic R. Coudert entertained Justice and Mrs. Edward Patterson last week at the Laurel House. Among other guests were the Rev. Dr. De Lancey Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. James B. Mahon and family, Mr. and Mrs. Abel I. Smith, Mrs. A. C. Cheney, Mrs. Minser, Mrs. R. S. Engle, C. A. Vermilye, P. A. Hiller, John Jay White, Miss White, Alan C. White, Mrs. A. A. Anderson, Miss Gallaudet, Miss Hare, and Livingston Hare of New York; Mr. Justice Street and Mrs. Street of Toronto, Willis E. Ford of Utica, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Curtis of Cambridge, Mass.

SOCIETY IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—The visit of the Prince of Wales to the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, at Chatsworth, was one of the most brilliant affairs of the kind ever known. Earls and Countesses and other members of the nobility elbowed each other in the spacious halls. The women were magnificently dressed, wearing their family diamonds.

The private theatre was transformed into a veritable grotto of beauty. Miss Muriel Wilson was generally admitted to be the handsomest of the performers who elected to play "The Pantomime Rehearsal"—a burlesque of the shortcomings of amateurs themselves. The visit terminated to-day.

William Waldorf Astor entertained a big party at Cliveden on Thursday. A few Americans were invited, and no very great ladies were present. This was the first time Miss Astor had taken up the position of mistress of her father's house. She performed the duties with particular grace, and was dressed in white and gold gauze. The Countess of Arran, resplendent in black velvet and diamonds, chaperoned her pretty young daughter, Miss Stopford, who was dressed in pink, and Miss Ruby Spencer Churchill, daughter of Lord Edward Churchill, the Duke of Marlborough's uncle. One of the prettiest American girls present was Mrs. Harry Higgins's daughter, Miss Breese, who was in black, with a becoming Alsatian bow in her hair.

Among the very few military men present was Capt. Ames of the Life Guards, the tallest man in the British Army.

Mrs. Arthur Paget sails for New York on Wednesday. She will stay at the Waldorf-Astoria for six weeks, when she returns to London. There she will go to the Riviera. Miss Lela Paget goes on a yachting trip with the Drexels on their fine new yacht.

The Drexels are taking all their children, and also Lord Athlumney. Before returning, by way of the West Indies, they will stop at Cannes, picking up Lady De Grey and Miss Yznaga.

THE OLD GUARD BALL.

Many Distinguished Persons Have Accepted Invitations.

Gov. Benjamin B. Odell, Jr., Vice President-elect Roosevelt, Major Gen. John R. Brooke, United States Army, commanding the Department of the East; Adjt. Gen. Hoffman, and many other distinguished men in military and municipal circles have accepted the invitation of Major Briggs to attend this year's Old Guard ball, which takes place in the Metropolitan Opera House on Thursday evening, Jan. 24. The decorations, it is said, are to include some striking features of a novel character.

In the military march at midnight, escorted by Old Guardsmen, will be seen members of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston; of the Governor's Foot Guard of New Haven, and of the City Troop of Philadelphia; also many officers of the army, navy, and the National Guard of this and neighboring States.

Never since the first Old Guard ball was given, in the Academy of Music, on April 6, 1869, has the demand for tickets and boxes been so great as now. These are obtainable from Capt. James T. Wenman, at 12 Old Slip, only after an invitation, however, the officers being determined to make this ball as exclusive as possible.

The Chairmen of the principal committees at the ball will be: Floor—Adjt. Robert P. Lyon; Police—Lieut. F. H. Clement; Decoration—Capt. C. S. Halstead; Music—Lieut. Byron Alger; House—Capt. Charles H. Huestis; Press—Capt. F. Frank Barry.

TO JUDGE WOMEN'S GOWNS.

A Jury Will Determine Whether Mrs. Howard Gould's Dresses Fit and Are in Style.

A jury of twelve men, all more or less steeped in ignorance of the intricacies and mysteries of the apparel feminine, will sit in judgment and determine as best they may whether Mrs. Howard Gould's gowns fit her properly, and whether she must pay for the same. The latest decision regarding the merits of the bill rendered against Mrs. Gould by Mary F. Smith and Margaretta Dillon, her dressmakers, was handed down yesterday by the General Term of the City Court.

The decision is rendered upon an appeal taken from an order made by Justice Hascall, in October, that the testimony in the case be heard before a referee. Former Supreme Court Justice Henry Bookstaver was appointed referee.

At the time of the argument before Justice Hascall counsel for the defendant argued that a jury of men was not sufficiently versed in the intricacies of the dressmaker's art to pass upon the question of proper fit and exquisiteness of style. Justice Hascall took this view of the matter. The trial is set for Feb. 5.

Howard Gould is named as defendant in the suit. The plaintiffs are dressmakers at 7 West Forty-fifth Street. The amount involved is $1,175, a balance on a bill of $2,185. Mrs. Gould refused payment, on the ground that several gowns made for her by the plaintiffs were miserable fits and had no style whatever about them.

MOHICANS' BEEFSTEAK PARTY.

Some of the Steaks to be Served Will Represent a Cost of $18 a Pound.

A beefsteak party will be given at the Grand Central Palace Feb. 14 by the Mohican Club, the Tammany Hall organization of the Twenty-second Assembly District. The affair will be by invitation, and arrangements have been made for 8,000 guests. Contracts have been made for 750 head of cattle on the hoof.

Selecting the beef on the hoof means a loss of 65 pounds to each 100 pounds, as only 35 pounds of each 100 pounds is good steak. The club has also purchased the famous Chicago prize bullock weighing 1,450 pounds. Chicago bid $2,000 for him, but New York offered $2,100, and got him. When the choice portions are carved up for the Mohicans and their guests it will represent $18 a pound. It will require 1,000 waiters, who will be dressed as Mohican Indians, to serve the steak. Capt. Wendel's Battery and a few companies of local militia in uniform will add to the picturesque features.

The Committee of Arrangements include Commissioner Francis J. Lantry, Isaac Fromme, M. Warley Platzek, N. O. Fanning, John F. Carroll, William H. Hornidge, Edward R. Carroll, Henry W. Unger, John J. Harrington, Frank C. Cooper, Will Carroll, Michael Haggerty, and Thomas E. Munday.

GERMAN CHARITY BALL.

It Will Take Place at the Waldorf-Astoria on Thursday, Jan. 31.

The eleventh German Charity Ball under the auspices of the Bachelor Circle, German Liederkranz, Jung Arion, Arion, and Beethoven Bachelors, Beethoven Maennerchor, will be held at the Waldorf-Astoria on Thursday, Jan. 31. The proceeds will be divided among the different charities.

The following officers have been appointed: Chairman of Committee—Julius Rohe; Treasurer—Hubert Cillis; Recording Secretary—Emil H. Schwed; Corresponding Secretary—Charles Gunther; Press—Oscar B. Weber, Charles Forster, and C. L. Georgia; Patron—A. C. G. Hupfel, M. H. Hartmann, and G. J. Fox; Music—R. C. Kammerer, C. F. Vollmer, and Fred F. A. Treuleb; Hall—Frank Thorn, George H. Diehl, Jr., and Frank Brickelmaier; Finance—F. Fechteler, H. G. Friedmann, and A. P. Windolph; Catering—William Klenke, D. H. A. Wolters, and H. J. Hindes; Printing—H. Cillis, J. Halk, and M. G. Jantzen; Charity—E. M. Burghard, R. J. Schaeffer, and Charles Brandt; Box—C. Lucius and R. Kammerer.

GET-TOGETHER CLUB MEETING.

Topics of Municipal Affairs Will Be Discussed at To-morrow's Session.

Civic topics will be discussed at the meeting of the Get-Together Club, at the Hotel St. George, Brooklyn, to-morrow evening. Bishop Potter will preside, and the general subject for discussion will be, "The Anti-Vice Crusade: After

AT THE THEATRES

Recent New Plays and Others To Come and Other Topics of Interest.

Musical farce, gorgeously dressed, but actually entertaining only in its few relapses into acrobatic vaudeville; domestic comedy of the utterly insincere quality of the late H. J. Byron's plays, and a character sketch taken bodily from a novel, without any regard for coherence or reality, made up last week's programme of new plays. It is not worth while to dwell long in review of them. The dramatic stage in New York at the dawn of the new century is still far from the ideal, but it has advanced quite above the artistic plane of these plays. Both Hugh Morton and Gustave Kerker are below the level of their own best work in "The Girl from Up There," while in "My Lady Dainty" only the acting of Effie Shannon is of interest, and this, in the circumstances, is of scarcely more artistic account than a detached object lesson in the expression of emotion under certain imagined conditions for the benefit of students of acting would be, because it lends only momentary illusion to certain scenes in a namby-pamby and impossible play.

Mr. Willard's acting at the Garden Theatre is even better than Miss Shannon's at the Madison Square, of course, and the most hardened playgoer could not honestly find fault with its interpretative quality, its informing spirit, or its technical detail in the little plays to which he is at present devoting his large abilities. But something more may fairly be expected of an actor of his talent and vigor in an era when the good actor's rewards are so large.

Miss Shannon has always been an uncommonly interesting figure on our stage since she was first seen here as meek little Marie in Augustus Piton's revival of "The Marble Heart," when Robert Mantell was regarded as a gleaming possibility in theatricals. Her unusual comic ability was denoted some time afterward when she acted Shelah in "Dandy Dick" at Daly's. She had scarcely another chance in that company, but she was a charming actress of ingénues at the Lyceum for three or four years, and one remembers particularly the simple pathos of her portrayal of the riding master's overeducated daughter, who sadly reflected that it was "better to be born a cripple than to be born common," in "Lady Bountiful," and the whimsical humor of her acting as the perturbed young wife in "The Gray Mare." In "Denise," supporting Miss Nethersole at the Empire Theatre some years ago, also, her denotement of the traits of Martha, the hero's sister, first revealed to American playgoers the possibilities of that rôle.

It cannot be said, therefore, that her capable and varied acting as Jemima in "My Lady Dainty" is a revelation of new and unsuspected powers. But it deserves cordial recognition not the less.

It seems that Julia Marlowe is to have a prodigious welcome at the Criterion Theatre to-morrow night. Probably the great and well-deserved success of her acting of Barbara Frietchie in Fitch's play last season and the uncommon merit of that play have served to place her higher in the public esteem than ever before. Miss Marlowe returns with a new romantic drama made out of a novel.

The first of two new plays by Clyde Fitch will also be made known here this week. "The Climbers" purports to be a serious study of social life in New York in the present hour. Mr. Fitch's studies of contemporary life are apt to have a fantastic tone that other people fail to note in the life itself. That was the case with that otherwise powerful piece "The Moth and the Flame," and it seems to be also with the comedy lately produced in Philadelphia, and soon to be put on view here at the Lyceum. "Capt. Jinks of the Horse Marines," even the title in that instance giving the play an air of extravaganza, while the plot concerns a wager that one of three young men shall marry a certain young lady within a specified time. But even good extravaganza is welcome, and so long as a dramatic piece is vital and entertaining the spectator never minds what classification it may have on the programme.

There are a great many expressions of surprise in the London newspapers over Irving's choice of "Coriolanus" for the Spring play at the Lyceum. It is recalled that the only really successful British Coriolanus was John Philip Kemble, who had the aspect of the traditional noble Roman, and was, above all else, a rhetorical actor. Englishmen do not recall Forrest in the rôle, and would not mention him with admiration if they did, in spite of the "understanding" and the entente cordiale. But probably Forrest was a great Coriolanus.

There was splendid power, too, in Salvini's portrayal. Of course, Irving will present an entirely different type. He will view the character from a new standpoint. There is more in the play than mere rhetoric. Certainly Irving's production will be splendid, and his acting worth seeing. One does not so readily "see" Miss Terry in Volumnia, but she must be in the cast, of course.

William Archer's review of the London stage in the last century is probably the best of the whole lot of similar reviews, but it is strikingly deficient and most assuredly colored by Archer's prejudices. He is very hard on Sheridan Knowles and Bulwer, and gives Boucicault far less than his due as a vital force in middle-century theatricals. He is uncommonly polite to the group of London playwriters of the present hour. He is sure that Father Ibsen has exerted some potent influence on the English-speaking stage.

As a matter of fact, Knowles and Bulwer were precisely men of their own hour and leaders in theatrical thought and activity. Presumably they overestimated their own worth, but so, presumably, does Mr. Archer. So do we all of us. As for Westland Marston, whom as a dramatist Mr. Archer dismisses with something very like a sneer, he wrote a book of theatrical reminiscences full of information and pleasingly biased criticism which seems to the unprejudiced collector and student of the stage much more interesting than many other books of theatrical history and criticism, including some of Mr. Archer's.

Mr. William T. Price is seriously of the opinion that his establishment of a School of Playwriting will not lead to "the stimulation of idle writing." On the contrary, he declares, "it should diminish that great of a manager's life—the overwhelming burden of unskilled plays." If it has that result Mr. Price's school will be blessed. Playwriting will be taught as an art in the school. There will be lectures and classes on the literature, critical history, and stage requirements of a play. To ask Mr. Price why he does not write a famous play himself, (and get it produced,) would be as inappropriate as to ask Mr. Franklin Sargent why he does not go and be a great actor.

At last the Comédie Française is restored to its own theatre in Paris. The rebuilt house seems to meet all expectations. The loss to the ancient institution by the fire of last March has been very great. The reserve fund of $200,000 has been cut down one-half. The value of a Sociétaire's full share this year is only about $3,200, and very few of the members of the Comédie have full shares. E. A. D.

THIS WEEK'S PLAYBILLS.

Two new plays are to be seen in Broadway theatres this week. "When Knighthood Was in Flower," with Julia Marlowe in the rôle of Mary Tudor, will be acted to-morrow night at the Criterion Theatre, and Amelia Bingham begins her season at the Bijou Tuesday with "The Climbers." Miss Marlowe's play, a dramatization of the widely advertised novel of the same name, has already been presented in other cities with reputed great success. Bruce Macrae is the hero, Charles Harbury the King, (Henry VIII.) and Donald MacLaren Sir Edwin Caskoden.

In Miss Bingham's play, which is a modern drama by Clyde Fitch, the plot has to do with a young married woman of New York, one who has been disappointed by matrimony, but who, although besieged by multifold temptations, walks in the straight and narrow way.

Two other new productions of the week are to be "The Man from Mexico," a revival at the Murray Hill Theatre, and "Uriel Acosta," to be given at the Irving Place Theatre, with Carl Emmeritch in the title rôle. This latter will have a single performance at popular prices to-morrow night. "Die Strengen Herren" will run the rest of the week.

"My Lady Dainty" will remain the attraction at the Madison Square Theatre for one week longer. In the Lyceum, Annie Russell, with "A Royal Family," has a fortnight left before the termination of her engagement. William H. Crane's "David Harum" continues to draw big audiences to the Garrick, where he will probably remain through all the rest of the season. His one hundred and fiftieth performance falls on next Friday night.

E. S. Willard seems to have made a popular hit at the Garden Theatre in "Tom Pinch," but this piece will be abandoned for the Wednesday and Saturday matinées in favor of "The Professor's Love Story." At Daly's R. C. Carton's admirable comedy, "Lady Huntworth's Experiment," continues.

Henry Arthur Jones's "Mrs. Dane's Defence" is still on the Empire bill, and will run until hot weather closes the house in June. Edna May, Virginia Earl, Edna Aug, and their fellow-musical comedy players are entering upon their second week in "The Girl from Up There" at the Herald Square Theatre.

In the Theatre Republic, Viola Allen's portrayal of Dolores in "In the Palace of the King" continues. "The Burgomaster" a combination of melody, comedy, and extravaganza—holds its own at the Manhattan. Jefferson De Angelis will to-morrow night enter on his fourth and last week at the Broadway Theatre in "A Royal Rogue," which is to be succeeded by the new piece from the German, "Vienna Life." "The Ensign," a melodramatic production of four or five years ago, is to be revived at the American Theatre by the stock company of that house.

In the Fourteenth Street Theatre, Chauncey Olcott's "Garrett O'Magh," with its songs and adventures and love making, is to have a long run. Ward and Vokes are coming to the Grand Opera House with their musical farce, "The Floor Walkers."

A real drama is announced for the Children's Theatre, in Carnegie Lyceum. It is called "The Clown and the Locket," and they say that it is just such a play as might be seen by grown-up folks, except that the hero and heroine are a little boy and a little girl.

Mary Mannering begins her sixth week at Wallack's in "Janice Meredith." The play is as popular as ever. "Sweet Nell of Old Drury," Ada Rehan's piece, at the Knickerbocker Theatre, has not proved as remunerative as it might have been. This is to be its last week here, after which it will be sent to Philadelphia, being succeeded by Nat C. Goodwin and Maxine Elliot in "When We Were Twenty-One." The last two weeks of the production of "Quo Vadis" at the Academy of Music begin tomorrow night. "The Giddy Throng," its cast including Lady Francis Hope (May Yohe) and Mabel Fenton, is still on at the New York Theatre, and some travesties are to be introduced into it within the next few days. Marie Dressler's "Miss Printy," at the Victoria Theatre, enters its fourth week, which is also its last. "Florodora," a piece that the press agent describes as "full of alluring lyrics," will continue to be played at the Casino.

Weber & Fields continue their conglomeration of fun and music called "Fiddle-dee-Dee," but every night or so finds so many new features introduced that one can hardly tell whether it is the same old thing or not. The production to be put on at the Metropolis Theatre, over in the Bronx, is the lively pantomime called "Eight Bells," and frequenters of the Third Avenue Theatre will see "Mr. Coney's Isle."

John Hare, of late at the Criterion, will go to the Harlem Opera House with "The Gay Lord Quex."

THE VAUDEVILLE SHOWS.

Many new features are to be introduced in the vaudeville theatres this week. At Keith's Della Fox will head the bill. They say her health has come back, and for the past few weeks she has been "on the road." Besides her songs, there will be other musical numbers on the programme, one of them being that of the Quaker City Quartet, which is a sketch called "Fun in a Barber Shop."

Other attractions scheduled are Techow's performing cats and dogs, Lew Sully, Stanley and Wilson, Max Cincinnati, the juggler; C. W. Littlefield, Louise Gunning, and a varied collection of acrobats and tricksters: Mrs. Katherine Bloodgood is to sing a song entitled "Mine," composed by Max Bendix.

To-night's concert at Koster & Bial's will include Milton and Dollie Nobles, Blockson and Burns, Gus Williams, Prevost and Prevost, the Willett-Thorne company, the three Westons, and Casey and Le Clair.

For the week's bill, beginning to-morrow afternoon, the chief attractions are the Tavary Graud Opera Company and Louis Simons and company. In the former organization are Mme. Tavary, Julius Perotti, with his high C, and A. S. Veron, their number being the famous trio in the last act of "Faust." Among the rest of those who make up the long programme are Harvey de Clair, Annie Hart, Lavender and Tomson, the Hiatts, Fox and Foxie, Morrell and Evans, and Scott and Wilson.

Trained animals in plenty will be exhibited at Huber's Fourteenth Street Theatre. Prof. Miett's dogs include one that does things on the flying trapeze, and Clark's trick goats eat newspapers for the spectators. The trained rats of Prof. Farrier are not to be forgotten. The member of the week's company who is advertised as "the star of the bill" is the Canadian giantess, Leah May, who is 6 feet and 4 inches in height. She will be followed by J. Paige, clay modeler; the Le Roys, people with hair of wire; Olivia, the sword walker, and Carlo, the Indian magician. While all these are on view in the museum, a variety farce will be going on in the theatre.

In the Eden Musée several new wax groups are on exhibition. One of them is a butcher's boy, stopping to look at an advertisement as he is delivering his meats; another represents a newsboy selling his papers, and a third shows a woman explaining a phonograph to her little daughter, while a number of wax spectators stand around and look on. New moving pictures are to be shown in the afternoons and evenings, and the concerts will be given twice a day as usual.

The managers of Hurtig & Seamon's Music Hall have re-engaged Daniel E. Bandman to appear in his one-act condensation of Robertson's "David Garrick." He will be supported by Mrs. Bandman and the rest of his regular company. Ameta is billed for her French illusion act and a few new dances; Milton and Dolly Nobles are to present their comedy, "Why Walker Reformed"; other acts will be those of the four Collinis, Florence Bindley, comedienne; Alf Grant, comedian; Baker and Lynn, in "Harry's Visit"; Manning and Davis, and Howard, the trickster.

At the Dewey Theatre, T. W. Dinkin's Utopian Burlesquers will appear in a burlesque called "In Grand Utopia." A department store travesty will also be in the bill.

Besides the standing attractions at Mr. Proctor's four theatres, such as kaleidoscopic views, comic monologues, and the like, there will be not a few new specialties on the bills of the coming week. In Proctor's Palace, for instance, Tom Nawn, the Irish comedian, presents a farce called "Pat and the Genii"; Carroll Johnstone does a minstrel "turn," Ralph Johnstone climbs stairs on the back of his neck, the three Mascagnos give acrobatic performances, the Hawaiian Queens sing songs, Ida Van Siclen and her company give "A Sporty Education," Adele Purvis Onri does tricks with revolving globes, the Caspard brothers juggle, and other people do all sorts of things.

Up in the Harlem Theatre, in One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, George W. Monroe appears in his monologue, "My Aunt Bridget"; Al Leech and the Three Rosebuds are to be seen in "Examination Day at School," Lew Hawkins represents what he calls the Chesterfield of minstrelsy, Maxwell and Simpson sing and act at the same time, Carl Reinhold shows how to do sand painting, May Evans has a good song or two, and the three Barretts play at magic.

Down in Twenty-third Street Clayton White, Marie Stuart, and Belle D'Arcy are playing in the sketch "Dickey." Mlle. Theresa Delbosq walks wires and exhibits her spirited horses, Johnnie Carroll sings in dialect, Press Eldridge delivers himself of parodies of his own composition, Winona and Banks Winter appear in "Cousin Edwin's Visit," and Vernon, the ventriloquist, talks in the gallery while he stands on the stage.

In the Fifth Avenue Theatre, Papinta, the dancer, and Marcel, the reproducer of paintings and marbles, are the features. Other attractions are a skit called "The Two Flats," the Newsky troupe of Russian dancers, "The Half-Way House," Sager Midgeley and Gertie Carlisle, Charles R. Sweet, Alf Grant, and Charles B. Ward. In all the four houses there will be the usual Sunday concerts, lasting from early in the afternoon until late in the evening.

William Jefferson to Marry in June.

Special to The New York Times.

MATTOON, Ill., Jan. 12.—William Jefferson, son of Joseph Jefferson, is to wed Christie McDonald, the actress, in June. Such is the admission of the bridegroom-elect's half-brother, Thomas Jefferson, who, with his company, presented "Rip Van Winkle" here this evening. Thomas Jefferson says the story that there is parental objection to the match is untrue, and that the elder Jefferson, who is now in Florida, is favorably inclined toward the young actress.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

"Hearts are Trumps," which was seen last year at the Garden Theatre, will be revived at the Grand Opera House on Monday night of next week.

Charles Frohman has arranged with Gilmore & Thompson for a production of "Barbara Frietchie" in the Academy of Music on the 28th. Miss Effie Ellsler will play the title rôle. The pictorial effects will be on a large scale.

The sixteenth of Ted D. Marks's Sunday concerts will be given to-night at the Grand Opera House. On the programme are Pat Rooney, Bartell and Morris, Campbell and Caulfield, Joseph Hardman, Bessie Taylor Hickey, Harry Wright, the Carmen sisters, Gilson and Countess, Hurd, the magician; Radie Furman, and Al Hovet.

EARNINGS OF COLUMBIA MEN.

Many Vocations Followed Temporarily by the Students.

The report of Albert Britt, the graduate Secretary of the Committee on Aid for Students at Columbia University, shows many interesting things in regard to the students who are compelled to provide either wholly or in part for their own support. The report states that about half of the students, exclusive of the Medical School, during the past year were at least partially self-supporting, while only 10 per cent. were wholly so. Included in this number are some who are paying their expenses with money earned before they entered college.

Thus far in the present college year 140 students have been recommended by the committee to sixty different positions. Thirty-six of these have secured positions which have paid them from $150 to $350, the whole amount being $2,454.25.

During the academic year 1899-1900 over 200 men made application to the committee for positions. Seventy-five per cent. of this number, however, either gave up the idea of earning money or received assistance from outside sources.

"It is therefore plain," says Mr. Britt, "that the majority of students obtain their positions through outside influence, or possibly through their own unaided efforts. The methods employed by Columbia students in earning money are many and diversified, and perhaps the most popular is tutoring. This occupation is not at all arduous and pays anything from $1 to $6 per hour. These positions, however, are usually filled by seniors and graduate students. Some men obtain positions as stenographers and typewriters and obtain salaries of about $9 a week. The positions for students to act as waiters in hotels which are open to New England students are not possible here in New York, yet a few men find such places in the boarding house near the university.

"Those students who are proficient in translating and interpreting earn good money in this line of work. Some men earn money taking subscriptions and getting advertisements for the college papers, on commission, while others who own cameras find it profitable to take snap shots of different college or athletic events and sell them to their classmates."

Mr. Britt's report shows that the Summer is the time when the students are the most active. Some of the different vocations followed last Summer were collecting gas bills, running second-hand bookstores, singing in comic opera, acting as streetcar conductors, clerking in hotels, writing insurance, tending bathhouses, acting as ushers in theatres, and as telegraph and telephone operators.

GIFT TO BROOKLYN INSTITUTE.

The Hulst Botanical Collection to be Placed in the Museum.

The Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences has been presented with the botanical collection of the Rev. Dr. George D. Hulst of Brooklyn, by Mrs. Magdalene Hulst, the widow of Dr. Hulst. The collection numbers approximately 12,000 specimens, all mounted, classified, and labeled by Dr. Hulst.

The collection will be placed in the museum of the institute, on Eastern Parkway.

TEMPERANCE AMONG UNION MEN.

Agreements Not to Drink During Working Hours Are More Numerous.

A temperance wave, it was said yesterday, is spreading among the labor unions. In cities of the Western States unions have temperance planks in their Constitutions. At Toledo it was reported the ore handlers and longshoremen have entered into an agreement with the operators on the docks along Lake Erie ports that no intoxicants shall be used by the men during working hours, and it is said that it means the saving of thousands of dollars to the men.

William A. Perrine, walking delegate of the Iron Moulders' Conference Board of New York and vicinity, said yesterday that there is less beer drinking during working hours than formerly. Whisky drinking was on the decline and there was a general tendency against drinking beer during working hours.

Several walking delegates in the building trades said that they were total abstainers.

Kindergarten Association to Meet.

The tenth annual meeting of the New York Kindergarten Association will be held at Sherry's, Fifth Avenue and Forty-fourth Street, at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 15. Among the speakers announced are the Rev. Dr. Charles Cuthbert Hall, Mr. William H. McElroy, and Mrs. Marion B. B. Langzettel. The President of the association, Hamilton W. Mabie, will preside. The association is now supporting in crowded quarters of the city nineteen kindergartens. All interested in kindergarten work are invited to attend.

Consumers' League Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Consumers' League of the City of New York will be held in the Assembly Hall, 156 Fifth Avenue, Monday, Jan. 21, at 3 o'clock. Mrs. Frederick Nathan, the President, will preside. Short addresses will be delivered by Dr. Annie S. Daniel, Mrs. Florence Kelley, and John Graham Brooks, President of the National Consumers' League.

Watchcase Engravers' Organization.

The Watchcase Engravers' International Association has decided not to affiliate with other branches of the watch trade in an allied council. It is in favor of special and separate organization for each division of the trade. There are 500 watchcase engravers in the union.

AMONG MUSICIANS

The Remarkable Performance of "Aida" at the Metropolitan on Monday Night.

The week which has just come to an end was one of the busiest and most interesting of the musical season, yet it is to be outdone by the week to come. In the last six days we have had performances of Verdi's "Aida" and Wagner's "Lohengrin," which could not be equalled by any other Opera House in the world, a most excellent presentation of Puccini's "La Bohème," and a representation of Gounod's "Faust" which would have set Paris wild with excitement. Besides these musical entertainments we have had those of which the great operagoing masses wot not, but which give your real music lover more joy than any possible glorification of vocal celebrities.

On Tuesday Mr. and Mrs. Georg Henschel returned and gave the first of two song recitals, the second taking place on Thursday. On Tuesday evening the Kneisel Quartet gave one of its delightful concerts and produced a new quintet by César Franck. George Proctor of Boston played the piano part, making his first appearance here. On Thursday, in addition to the Henschel recital, we had a concert by the Morgan String Quartet. On Friday came the Philharmonic rehearsal, with the return of that sterling violinist Maud Powell, and the production by her of a new fantasy by Rimsky-Korsakoff. In the evening Harold Bauer, one of the most interesting of the young pianists now before the public, gave a recital at Mendelssohn Hall. And finally yesterday, in addition to the customary two performances of opera at the Metropolitan, we had another recital by Gabrilowitsch, one of Frank Damrosch's charming concerts for young persons, and the Philharmonic concert.

Next week, however, we shall have the revivals of "Le Cid" and "Mefistofele" at the Metropolitan, and the two concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, not to speak of minor concerts and recitals. But let the future await its own fate. The performance of "Aida" on Monday night set the town talking. It was a great performance. It was in all probability the greatest ever given in New York. This may be said, too, with the memory of the original New York cast in mind. That cast was imposing in respect of names. It was heard at the Academy of Music on Nov. 26, 1873, and was as follows: Aida, Octavia Torriani; Amneris, Annie Louise Cary; Radames, Campanini; Amonasro, Maurel; Ramphis, Nannetti; King, Scolara. There is no doubt that this was a great cast, one which in some respects cannot now be equaled. The stage of to-day, for example, knows no such Amneris as Miss Cary. The kingdom of opera has never ceased to mourn the loss of this queen of song. Campanini was a splendid Radames, generous in voice and passion, able to peal out the plentiful high tones of the score, and acting with that remarkable dramatic instinct which supplied his deficiencies in intelligence and artistic refinement. Maurel, then in the youthful vigor of his voice, was a glorious Amonasro, and Torriani, a competent soprano, was an excellent Aida. Nannetti had a sonorous and velvety bass and sang with Italian beauty, but he was not dramatically a convincing artist.

But that first performance was naturally under the influence of nervousness. In later days, in association with Ambré, Campanini and Cary did nobler work, but they had not their first Amonasro and Ramphis. Taking it all in all, the cast of last Monday night, while it did not dazzle so much by the fame of its members, achieved more in the direction of a truly vital performance than any of its predecessors. The evening began with a vigor, an earnestness too often missing from representations of this work. The first scene, owing to the splendor of Mr. Jean de Reszke's delivery of "Celeste Aïda," which warmed the hearts of his fellow-artists, the conductor, and the orchestra, went as it had never gone before. Its beauties were enhanced by Mme. Gadski's lovely singing of "Ritorna vincitor," especially the closing refrain, "Numi pieta," and Mr. Journet's fine, sonorous, and spirited delivery of "Su! del Nilo." The scene came to an end with a display of enthusiasm on the part of the audience. This is rarely the case with this scene.

The pitch of warmth attained by the artists in the first scene rose as the performance went on. The two women outdid themselves in their duo, and the grand finale was superbly given. Here Mme. Gadski astonished even her warmest admirers by the power and body of her tone in the ensemble. She topped the mass of sound without stridency and with brilliant effect. In "O patria mia," which she sang generally well, there were lapses in intonation near the end. And then Mr. Scotti took up the impassioned proceedings of the evening and carried them forward with immense ardor to the entrance of Radames. It was at this point that Mr. Jean de Reszke, who had been singing like a vigorous youth in the earlier scenes, hurled the gauntlet of defiance at those who had been rejoicing over his alleged decay. He came upon the stage a vocal whirlwind, and he sang through the long passages of high-pitched music to the "Io resto a te," with its three successive A's, with energy unflagging and voice to spare. Mme. Homer made the most of her opportunities in the trial scene, and the final duet between Mr. de Reszke and Mme. Gadski was a marvel of finesse and expressiveness. It was a great night, and it is not likely that we shall find more food for excitement in the gifts of the coming week.

Boito's "Mefistofele" was produced at the Metropolitan Opera House on Dec. 28, 1896, and was performed four times in the course of the season. The singers were Mme. Calvé as Marguerite, Mr. Cremonini as Faust, Mr. Plançon as the Fiend, and Mme. Mantelli as Martha. The work was heard with a great deal of pleasure by a public which certainly did not concern itself as to the recondite matters treated with so much poetic and so little dramatic skill by Boito. Massenet's "Le Cid" was produced at the Metropolitan in the same season on Feb. 12. The cast embraced Jean de Reszke as the hero, Edouard de Reszke as Don Diegue, Mr. Plançon as the Count de Gormas, Mr. Lassalle as the King, Mr. Bars as the Moorish messenger and the vision of the blessed St. James of Compostello, Mme. Litvinne as Chimene, and Clementine de Vere as the Infanta. The opera achieved a distinguished failure and was performed only twice.

But that was a memorable season when one comes to look back at it. For example, Mme. Melba in that season first sang Violetta in "La Traviata" and Jean de Reszke first sang the young Siegfried. Both of these incidents were memorable, though for somewhat different reasons. When Mr. de Reszke sang Siegfried, Mme. Melba sang Brünnhilde, and that also is memorable for still other reasons. Massenet's "Werther," which had been first given here on April 10, 1894, was revived on Jan. 6, 1897. On Jan. 12 Lilli Lehmann made her first appearance in four years, giving a song recital at Carnegie Hall. Jean de Reszke sang Don José to Mme. Calvé's Carmen, and Armand Castlemary died on the stage while performing Tristano in "Marta."

At the time we did not regard it as a season of exceptional interest, but it is a common phenomenon that daze which are past assume new charms. We marvel greatly when we hear our elders sighing over the halcyon days of opera before we were born, but we may rest assured that they never heard any better performances than we have heard in the last few years at the Metropolitan Opera House. We shall all think better of these representations when the gentle curtain of the years has descended between us and them, and we look back upon them through that roseate glow composed half of pleasure and half of pain, our memories of the days that are no more.

From a list of the tenors of the Metropolitan Opera House printed on Thursday, the name of Andreas Dippel was inadvertently omitted. Regular readers of this paper know that Mr. Dippel's conscientious work is not here underestimated. The absence of his name on one occasion will not be mistaken for an intentional slight.

W. J. HENDERSON.

DEBUT OF ENRICO TOSELLI.

Enrico Toselli, the noted Italian pianist, will be heard at Carnegie Hall for the first time in this country on next Tuesday evening. Signor Toselli is only nineteen, and has been accepted in Italy as the greatest pianist that country has produced in years. He has also played with success in Germany, France, and England. He is a pupil of Sgambati and Martucci, and his musical education was acquired wholly in Italy. His first programme will be as follows:

Toccata and fugue.....Bach-Tausig
Musette, No. 5} .....Handel-Martucci
Gavotte, No. 4}
Etude in A major.....Rubinstein
Nocturne, Opus 9, No. 2} .....Chopin
Berceuse, Opus 57
Polonaise in A flat
Nocturne, ("Liebestraum,") No. 3.....Liszt
Toccata, Opus 61, No. 2 } .....Martucci
Tarantelle, Opus 44, No. 6}

The musical editor of THE TIMES is not responsible for the discrepancy between the statement of the reading notice and that of the advertisement in regard to the hour of this concert. All the communications of the manager to the musical department of this paper have stated the time of the concert as evening. The advertisements have constantly said "afternoon." The manager is solely responsible for this confusion.

The soloist will be Mrs. Dorothy Harvey, a young soprano singer of New York, who has not yet been heard publicly. Seats go on sale to-morrow at the usual places.

The Manuscript Society.

A programme is in preparation for the first public concert of the Manuscript Society of New York, to be held at Mendelssohn Hall, on Saturday evening, Jan. 19, which promises to exhibit the work of that organization under its present new policy in a very favorable light, the works as a whole being of an exceptionally high standard. A full orchestra will be employed at the concert, and among the compositions to be presented are the overture to "Melpomene," by George W. Chadwick; "Scenes from Luxemburg," by Carl Becker; "Engel's Concert," by H. H. Wetzler, and a "Concert Overture," by Henry K. Hadley. It is also expected that Miss Jessie Shay will play two movements of the Moszkowski piano concerto, and that an elegy for strings by Paul Miersch, now of Athens, Greece, will be added to the programme if the manuscript can be secured in time.

A CHANCE FOR DESIGNERS.

The Musical Art Society of New York offers a prize of $50 for a suitable design for the cover of its programme. The aim and purpose of this society are to create a love for and appreciation of the best and purest music, and to give the same in as perfect a manner as possible. The society is chiefly devoted to the production of a capella choral music, particularly that written for the Church of the sixteenth century by Palestrina, Orlando di Lasso, &c. The design must be dignified and appropriate, expressing as far as possible the aim and purpose of the society.

The programme is in book form, 7½ by 5⅝ inches, and contains the text, with short descriptions of the music. The cover is heavy paper, and should have upon the reverse side a simple design in harmony with that upon the front cover. The question of color, black and white or half tone, also the use or not of the title "Musical Art Society" is left to the discretion of the artist.

Each design should bear a nom de plume. A sealed envelope, containing the name and address of the artist, should be sent with the design to the Secretary, Miss L. J. Post, 24 East Thirty-third Street, before Feb. 15. The Musical Art Society will be assisted in the selection of a design by an advisory committee of well-known artists and designers. Should a number of important designs be submitted, the same will be placed on exhibition.

"VIENNA LIFE" COSTUMES.

Mme. Dowling, the theatrical costumer, has over 100 seamstresses and tailors working night and day completing the costumes for the coming production of "Vienna Life," at the Broadway Theatre on Jan. 21. Rudolph Aronson and the management of the operetta company have spared no expense in order to render the production as perfect as possible.

The action of the opera takes place in the nineteenth century during the second Directoire period, and the fashions of that time were picturesque and quaint. Something like the "Madame Sans-Gêne" dresses, only a little more elaborate and quainter, with a greater variety of color. Mme. Seide designed some of the costumes, but Mme. Dowling has arranged the majority of them and has selected the color scheme throughout.

"Vienna Life" deals with Tyroleans, Austrian lancers, Court ladies and men, gavotte girls, milliners, peasants, and a host of liveried servants, so that the variety of costume is infinite. The Tyroleans in the first act are dressed in green, gray, black, wine color, and turquoise, elaborately decorated with chains and the national flower, the edelweiss. The dresses of the milliners in this act are special creations of Mme. Dowling, and they will cost over $150 each. The colors are crushed strawberry, or rose pink, brocaded silk Directoire dresses, with chiffon ornaments, immense panne velvet hats, with tall plumes and buckles. They are likely to be the talk of the town.

The next sensation will prove to be the uniforms of the lancers, of whom there are fifty in all. They are of the year 1801, blue and white, with high boots, ornamented with gold, and immense shakos with tall black plumes. The men carry lances and the officers swords. Each soldier has a magnificent cloak, trimmed with fur, and the Austrian arms embroidered on the gauntlets.

In the second act, the great ballroom scene, pastelle shades of all colors of the rainbow will prevail, men and women all in full Court costume. The gavotte dancers will wear Austrian yellow dresses, shaded to pale yellow, with the Austrian arms appliqued in chiffon and floral embroidery. Those dresses will cost over $100 each. The servants' uniforms are wine-colored, with gold and silver embroidery. In this act over 100 people will be upon the stage.

The principals' dresses are on even a more elaborate scale. Miss Stone's first dress is Tyrolean green stamped velvet, with Empire coat and ornaments. Miss Jackson's first dress is a royal blue velvet riding habit, richly embroidered in gold and applique, and her Court dress is an azuré blue Directoire, trimmed with gold and ermine. "Vienna Life" will be dressed de luxe, and the whole production will exceed Mr. Aronson's well-known elaborate displays at the Casino.

THE WEEK AT THE OPERA.

The fifth week of the season of opera at the Metropolitan Opera House will begin to-morrow night. The programme for the week is as follows:

Monday—Boito's "Mefistofele," Miss Marguerite Macintyre, Mme. Louise Homer, Messrs. Cremonini and Plançon.

Wednesday—Massenet's "Le Cid," Miss Lucienne Bréval, Mme. Melba, Messrs. Jean de Reszke, Plançon, Sizes, and Eduard de Reszke.

Friday—Wagner's "Die Walküre," Miss Ternina as Sieglinde and Mme. Nordica as Brünnhilde, Messrs. Van Dyck, Blass, and Bertram.

Saturday Afternoon—"Le Cid," with the same cast as on Wednesday evening.

Saturday Night—Wagner's "Der Fliegende Holländer," Mmes. Gadski and Olitzka, Messrs. Dippel, Blass, and Bertram.

At the regular weekly concert to-night the soloists will be Misses Adams and Strong, Mme. Schumann-Heink, Messrs. Imbart de la Tour, Blass, and Scotti.

Notes of Musical Doings.

Walter Damrosch's first piano lecture on the subject of the Wagner operas will take place next Friday at 2:30, in Daly's Theatre, when his subject will be "The Rheingold."

Rosa Olitzka will have the assistance of Miss Maud Powell, violinist; Louis V. Saar, pianist, and Robert Thallon, organist, at her song recital, which is to be given in Mendelssohn Hall on Thursday afternoon, Jan. 24.

David Bispham will demonstrate his interest in the encouragement of young American composers at his recital in Mendelssohn Hall next Tuesday afternoon, when he will sing five new songs by H. H. Wetzler and one by Howard Brockway, in a programme of twenty-one compositions by Purcell, Schumann, Franz, Mendelssohn, Brahms, Sullivan, and Loewe.

The West End Choral Union of 250 voices will sing Gaul's "Holy City," in Mendelssohn Hall, next Friday night, Jan. 18, under the direction of Mr. Tali Esen Morgan. The soloists will be Shannah Cummings, soprano; Fielding Roselle, contralto; Will C. Weeden, tenor, and Julian Walker, bass. The accompanists will be Prof. J. H. Von Nardroff, organ; Miss Alice Walter Bates, piano, and a string orchestra of twenty.

The Bendix String Quartet of New York announces a series of three subscription concerts, to be given at the Waldorf-Astoria on Monday evenings, Jan. 28, Feb. 18, and March 18. The quartet will have the assistance of Mr. Ludovic Breitner, pianist, at the first concert. The programme for Jan. 28 will comprise the Brahms A minor quartet, a suite for piano and violin, by Emile Bernard, which, to the best of our knowledge, has never been given here, and a Mozart E flat major quartet.

At Mendelssoha Hall, on Monday, Jan. 21, at 2:30 P. M., a piano and violin recital will be given by Mr. and Mrs. Ludwig Breitner. The programme:

Second great sonata in D-moll, Op. 121..Schumann
For piano and violin.
Sonata, Op. 75.....Saint-Saens
For piano and violin.
Suite, Op. 44.....Schutt
For piano and violin.

Miss Carrie Bridewell of the Maurice Grau Opera Company, and Mr. Heinrich Meyn will give a joint song recital at Mendelssohn Hall on Tuesday evening, Jan. 15, at 9 o'clock, with Mr. Max Liebling at the piano. The programme:

"Letzter Wunsch".....Dvorak
"Wiedersehn".....Dietrich
Miss Bridewell and Mr. Meyn.
"O Faster My Steed".....Spicker
"Under the Rose".....Arms-Fisher
"Rosées".....May Catlin

BUSY YEAR FOR FENCING

Women Are Becoming More Expert in the Use of the Foils.

JUNIORS COMPETE THIS WEEK

Yale and Cornell Arranging a Dual Meet—Activity Apparent in the Fencers Clubrooms.

Fencing is being taken up with more enthusiasm by the fair sex this season, according to a prominent member of the Fencers Club, than was the case last year. The women's class there, which has the privileges of the clubrooms on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday mornings, has about thirty active members, as against twenty last year. They enjoy the instruction of the regular club professionals, Louis Vauthier, the maître d'armes, and Martin Capdevielle, prevot.

Miss Grace E. Fairchild, Miss Margaret Stimson, Miss Louise F. Jackson, and Miss A. R. Jackson are among the most skillful members of the class with the foils. Some of the other admirers of this artistic sport are Miss Bertha King Bartlett, Miss Alice Baltazzi, Miss Cornelia Delafield, Mrs. George Ethridge, Mrs. R. Horace Gallatin, Miss Guild, Mrs. Isaac Lawrence, Miss Lauterback, Miss Catherine S. Leverick, Mrs. Benoni Lockwood, Miss Mabin, Miss Elsa Michelson, Mrs. Newbold Morris, Miss Louise Norwood, Miss A. S. Quackenbush, Miss Greene, Miss N. F. Schenck, Mrs. Raymond Ward, and Miss Beadleston.

The Fencers Club quarters, at 37 West Twenty-second Street, are the scenes of considerable activity this Winter, and more members are taking part in the friendly bouts that are of frequent occurrence than has been the case for several seasons. During the year a few interesting club competitions will be held, but the first big event in the clubrooms will be the second annual contest for the silver cup offered by the Fencers Club last year. This trophy is competed for under the auspices of the Amateur Fencers' League of America, and is open to all clubs in the association. The novelty of the event lies in the fact that teams of three are entered for the match, each member of which must fence with a different weapon, foils, sabres, and dueling swords being used. The cup is to become the property of the club winning it three times. The Fencers Club captured the prize in the initial match last year, the victorious team being composed of Fitzhugh Townsend, foils; John Langdon Erving, sabres, and W. Scott O'Connor, dueling swords.

The second competition will take place this year on Tuesday evening, Feb. 12. Besides the home club, teams will be entered from the New York Athletic Club, the New York Turn Verein, and probably from the Boston Athletic Association, where a much stronger team can be turned out this season than ever before.

The real fencing competitive season of the present year will be opened next Tuesday night in the New York Athletic Club, with the junior foil tournament, for which gold, silver, and bronze medals will be offered to the respective winners of the leading three places. This event always brings out a good number of the younger aspirants for fencing honors, and the prize winners then pass into the higher class. Both the Fencers Club and the New York Athletic Club will be well represented in Tuesday's match, and a small delegation is expected from Boston.

Fencing among the college lads shows evidences of more snap this year than has been noticeable for several seasons. Yale and Cornell are making arrangements for a dual fencing meet toward the end of February at Ithaca. This will give the competitors from those universities helpful practice for the coming Intercollegiate fencing championship to be held in March at the New York Athletic Club. The Fencers' Club at Yale has just been reorganized for the season, and between twenty and thirty members are practicing regularly in preparation for the coming combats. Several new members have been admitted to the club, which now has a total of thirty, and the officers are: President—W. E. Meyer, 1901; Secretary—S. N. Arnold, 1903; Treasurer—K. Spaulding, 1902.

DOINGS OF COLLEGE ATHLETES.

The University of Virginia, at Charlottesville, has just acquired a new athletic field, and the ground is now being put in readiness for opening on April 15.

Princeton and Cornell will meet in a relay team run in the games of the Boston Athletic Association on Feb. 16. Capt. Hastings of Cornell will send a strong team, of which Gallagher is sure to be a member. Cornell may send a track team to the intercollegiate and interscholastic indoor meet in Philadelphia in March.

The Cornell Cross Country Club announces that the following men are entitled to wear the letters C. C. C. C.: A. F. Armstrong, A. O. Berry, W. G. Berryman, W. H. Carrier, J. C. Finch, B. A. Gallagher, David McMeekan, Jr., C. J. Morrison, Barrett Smith, A. J. Sweet, R. J. Taylor, R. Troutschold, C. A. Urner, F. D. Voorhees, and K. W. Woodward.

Cornell has joined the New York State Basket Ball League, of which the other members are Syracuse, Colgate, and St. Lawrence. Plans are pending to form a basket ball league composed of Cornell, Harvard, Yale, and Dartmouth. Burns, Sloat, Townsend, Steel, and Morrison form the Cornell team at present, but several more candidates are trying for the places on the team.

The University of Michigan and the University of Chicago have just agreed to hold three dual meets. The first will be held in the University of Chicago's gymnasium on Feb. 20, when nine events will be on the programme. The next contest will be in the Michigan University's gymnasium on March 16, and the biggest meet will be on May 18, on the athletic field of the University of Michigan.

Brown University is going in for hockey with more enthusiasm this season than ever before, and a long schedule of games has been arranged. The first game will be next Saturday with Princeton in this city. Future games will be with Harvard, Yale, University of Pennsylvania, and Columbia, the match with the latter to be played in this city on March 2. About twenty-five students are playing hockey at Brown.

Activity in athletics has been a marked feature in the well-known Penn Charter School of Philadelphia since the close of the holiday vacation. Galbraith of the Harvard nine in 1899, has been engaged as coach for the baseball team; Johnson, former Captain of the Yale track team, will have charge of the runners, and Bennett, the cricket professional at the Merion Club, will coach the cricket team for its interscholastic games. The effort to start rowing has been abandoned.

The University of Pennsylvania has developed a strong hockey team this season, but for all that the students are doubtful of its ability to win the intercollegiate championship. Yale holds that honor at the present time, and her team is considered to be the strongest in the collegiate series this year. Pennsylvania will play her first game in the Intercollegiate championship with Brown, on Jan. 18, in Philadelphia, and on Feb. 15 Princeton will be played at the same place. All of the University of Pennsylvania's other hockey games in the championship list will be played away from home.

PUBLIC LINKS POPULAR

New York the Only City in the Country Having Two Courses.

ACTIVITY IN FLORIDA GOLF

First Big Competition Will Be Held This Week at Palm Beach—Conflicting Championship Events.

In the increased demand for public golf courses is seen one of the strongest illustrations of the continued popularity of the ancient Scotch sport. New York, Boston, Baltimore, and a few other cities of the country now have well equipped public links, and during the past year they were all patronized by a larger number of players than ever before. Within the past month plans have been laid in Syracuse, Milwaukee, and Providence for public courses next season. Providence already has three golf clubs, but they cannot accommodate all the players who desire to take part in the game. A large tract of land owned by the city, which was used a short time ago by one of the new golf clubs until it could secure its own property, is to be used by the city for a public course, and plans for a nine-hole links have been prepared.

Mayor McGuire of Syracuse has given his approval for a public links, and with the aid of the Park Commissioners a nine-hole course has been planned in one of the parks of the city which will be ready for opening early in the Spring. Out in Milwaukee, a vigorous demand has just been made upon the municipal authorities for better golf facilities. In fact, golf has come to have a certain power as a political force, and when a large number of voters demand that provision be made for their golf amusement, the officials are bound to give the subject serious consideration. The Milwaukee citizens claim that their city is the only one in the country of 300,000 inhabitants which has only one golf course, and they are determined to make a better showing this coming season. The single golf club there has only nine holes, affording playing facilities to a limited number of players, and a strong effort is now being made to secure sufficient ground for a large course which will be available to the public early in the Spring.

With the opening of the Spring season, New York will be the only city in the country to have two public links in full operation. The new course at Pelham Bay Park, which, owing to the slowness of the work last year, failed to be opened on the time promised, will be ready for the enthusiasts in May or June, and, with the exception of the greens, which are bad, to use no stronger term, golfers frequenting that section of the city will find fair facilities for the sport. The members of the New York Athletic Club have been particularly anxious to have this course finished, as scores of the members who spend a good portion of the Summer at Travers Island are energetic golfers, but their club has been unable to secure sufficient land in that vicinity to lay out a course. They will, therefore, for the time being be the most numerous competitors on the new Pelham Bay links.

This second public course will have the entire eighteen holes, for it is recognized by the Park Commissioners, in view of the immense popularity of the Van Courtlandt course, that nothing short of the full eighteen-hole links will meet the demands made by the public golfers of New York City. It is barely possible that only nine holes will be opened at first, as the greens need considerable attention. It will take at least two years to put the Pelham Bay links in as good condition as the Van Courtlandt course is. The turf is much poorer on the former course, and, from the appearances last Fall, it will need considerable tramping and extra rolling to put the fair green in tolerable playing shape. On the subject of greens, it may be said that Val Flood, the Van Courtlandt professional, is endeavoring to give the frequenters of that course better greens this coming season than they enjoyed last year. Considerable improvement may be made in that respect, for there is no reasonable excuse at Van Courtlandt why first-class greens should not always be found. Yet when Vardon played over them in November, the greens were the worst that he had found anywhere in the United States.

Golf in Florida will blossom into activity this month. John Duncan Dunn will leave to-day for the west coast, where he will have charge of five clubs during the season. Headquarters will be at Tampa, and immediately upon his arrival a list of tournaments and team matches will be mapped out for the five clubs skirting the coast. James Foulis of the Chicago Golf Club, arrived at Tampa a few days ago, and he will remain in charge of the links until the season closes. Before going he laid out the course at the ambitious St. Louis Club, which has announced its intention of holding a world's championship in 1903, as an attraction to the world's fair which the St. Louis citizens are planning for that year. The club has just changed its name from that of Mound City to the more cheerful one of Glen Echo, but the length of the course will strike Easterners as somewhat short for a championship links. The total distance of the eighteen holes is only 5,425 yards. There are three holes of 400 yards and over, and three of 150 and under. The club is not yet a member of the United States Golf Association, but it intends to join at the coming annual meeting and expects to send a delegate to explain its championship scheme to the assembled golfers.

Elaborate preparations are being made for an active season on the Florida East Coast. The first tournament in that section will be played next Saturday on the Palm Beach links, which have just been lengthened to 18 holes. The opening tournament will be an 18-hole scratch event. One of the new events scheduled for the year on the Palm Beach course is a competition for the championship of South Florida. The trophy is a handsome silver cup given by Charles B. Cory, a prominent Boston golfer, who won the Florida East Coast championship last year at St. Augustine. This coming tournament will be played on Feb. 21, 22, and 23. The qualifying round, thirty-two will be picked to continue at match play. The losers in the first round will be eligible to compete for a consolation cup, and a prize will also be awarded to the runner-up for the championship.

Another interesting event on the Palm Beach links will be the first women's championship of Florida, to be played March 1, 2, and 3. It will be noted that in the announcements of Florida championships the East and West Coast Associations take no thought of the existence of the other. The result will be that unless the victors of a so-called Florida championship play in the similar event held by the rival organization, the championship title will have to be limited to that of the East or West coast, as the case may be. It would be an excellent idea if a friendly spirit should suggest, toward the close of the year, a real Florida championship on some convenient course, where the victor might hold his title undisputed.

Golf Notes of Interest.

Alec Campbell, the Country Club professional at Brookline, near Boston, sailed for his home in Scotland last week for a two months' visit. He will return to continue his duties for the coming year at the Brookline club.

Charles B. Corey, who is well known to New York and Boston golfers, is now in Florida, where he spends every Winter, winning last year the championship of the Florida East Coast. Mr. Cory is Secretary of the Palm Beach Golf Club and he has announced that the first tournament this season will be played on Jan. 17, the event being a general thirty-six-hole medal play contest. Mr. Cory has presented a cup to the club, known as the Secretary's Cup, which will be representative of the championship of South Florida. It will be played for in the usual medal and match play competition on Feb. 21, 22, and 23. Thirty-two will qualify in the opening round.

Just before starting South last week to take charge for the Winter of the Tampa Bay golf links, James Foulis, the well-known professional of the Chicago Golf Club, laid out an eighteen-hole course at St. Louis, where it has been proposed by the organizers of the new club to hold the world's championship in 1903. The name of this ambitious club was changed on the first of the year from Mound City to the Glen Echo Country Club. The proposed championship course will strike Easterners as rather short, as it measures only 6,425 yards. The tournament is to be held as an attraction to a world's fair, and the club proposes to have something to say on the subject before the coming meeting of the United States Golf Association in February.

THE PORTO RICO CASES AND THE CONSTITUTION.

There has been a good deal of newspaper discussion as to the cases now before the Supreme Court arising out of the tariff duties levied on trade with the Island of Porto Rico, in which we do not think it necessary to join. It has been represented with great emphasis on the one hand that the liberties and rights of all the people of the country will be endangered if the constitutionality of the Porto Rican tariff law be sustained by the court. On the other hand, it is contended that unless this decision is reached the authority of the Government to maintain order and to protect the rights of the people of Porto Rico will vanish, and that either anarchy will prevail in our new possessions or that we shall be compelled to abandon them. It does not appear clear to us that such wide consequences in either direction are impending. We have little doubt that the court will reach a decision that will not imperil in the slightest degree the liberties or the essential interests of the people of the United States or of any portion of them.

So far as specific provisions of the Constitution are involved, there is one on which the plaintiffs rely, and one on which the Government relies. The first is the opening paragraph of the Eighth Section of the First Article, defining the general powers of the Congress. It reads: "The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes, duties, and excises; to pay the debts and pruvide for the common defense of the United States; but all duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States." The cases before the court relate to duties collected under the act of Congress on goods brought into the ports of the island from the ports of the United States, and vice versa. The contention of the able lawyers employed for the plaintiffs is that these duties or taxes are not uniform with those imposed in other parts of the United States, and therefore are without adequate authority in the Constitution. On the other hand, the Government bases its case largely on the second clause of the Third Section of the Fifth Article, which reads: "The Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory and other property belonging to the United States." Necessarily the Government also depends to a considerable extent on the implied power of the Government to do that which is found indispensable to the performance of its essential duties and functions and to provide for the general welfare. The interpretation of these powers has often been demanded of the Supreme Court, especially in the earlier years of our history, when there was no precedent in our own experience, and indeed none in the experience of the world, to serve as guide in the complex and tremendous task imposed by the Constitution and by the needs of the Government. It is to be noted that whenever this demand has been made on the Supreme Court it has been met in a manner that sustained and did not cripple the Government in the problems with which at the time it was forced to deal. There is no reason to suppose that the course of the court will now be different.

We may say, however, that we do not find the essential powers of the Government so intimately involved in the cases before the court as some of the partisans of the Administration seem to think that they are. It does not seem to us that the collection of tariff duties on trade with Porto Rico is the only way open to the Congress to provide revenues for the work required in the island. We imagine that if the recommendation originally made by the President and emphatically indorsed by the able lawyer in the War Department, that the plain duty of the United States was to provide free trade with the island, and thus the present suits had been avoided, the Government would not necessarily have been embarrassed in its operations. And if the decision of the court should bring the island within the area of free trade secured by our system to the entire United States, it would be absurd to say that that would be disastrous either to the United States or to the people of the island. We are confident that the Government would be amply able to find other and equally serviceable sources of revenue. The extremest result that we can foresee would be that Congress might be required to provide for the organization of a Territorial form of administration in the island, with a Legislature authorized to levy taxes. On the other hand, while we regard the particular exercise of the power of taxation by Congress in this case as unjustifiable and due to motives by no means honorable, we shall not be surprised if the court finds the power itself quite sufficient under the Constitution.

ENGLAND'S INDUSTRIAL OUTLOOK.

The same correspondent who, some months ago, wrote for The London Times the remarkable series of articles on "American Engineering Competition," upon some of which we commented at the time of their publication, has returned to the subject. In two recent articles he points out that his apprehensions have been more abundantly justified since they were expressed than they were when they were expressed.

It is, in truth, not only the United States, but also Germany, that is threatening to undersell Great Britain, not only in neutral markets, but in her own home market. But the German competition that is most felt by British manufacturers is carried on in articles that do not, singly, bulk very large, whereas the American competition is in the leading staples of manufacture of which Great Britain has so long had the monopoly. Such an announcement as that American makers of steel plate have sold 100,000 tons of their product for delivery in Great Britain itself naturally makes a commotion that it would take a very long list of manufactured articles in which Germany has an advantage to equal. And, quite naturally, it causes the losers to entertain great disgust for the "protective policy" of the winners, the policy, as the contributor to The London Times puts it, "of keeping up the price abroad and selling cheap at home."

This policy is one which the victimized American consumers, who are victimized because they are Americans, might be supposed to have the first interest in combating, and to combat most efficiently. But it is a fact that they have allowed the successive impositions of Morrilism and McKinleyism and Dingleyism to be loaded upon them without making an effective resistance. It is the other branch of the "policy" that is beginning to afflict Britons, who seem to find themselves as helpless as American consumers have so long found themselves. The correspondent of The London Times puts the case gloomily and forcibly:

> This brings us to the second and more important respect in which the present differs from the past—namely, the increased extent to which other nations are competing with us in the markets of the world. They are establishing manufacturing industries on a scale that often equals and sometimes surpasses our own. We have never seen anything like it before. Yet we English must make and sell, or starve.

If the worst should come to the worst, the British may console themselves with a proposition which has never commended itself to our own tariff-makers, but which is of unquestionable soundness. To sell your goods, you must take in return what the buyer has to sell. But the British seem to find an increasing difficulty in determining what it is that they can give us in return for our goods—that is to say, what it is that they continue to be able to produce, upon a large scale, to more advantage than we.

VOLUNTEERS AND THE ARMY.

The hodge-podge of "regulars" and "volunteers" of which our present army consists has no basis in reason. It is the creature of Congressional demagogism, and is part of the public mischief done by GORMAN before his exemplary relegation to private life. A "volunteer" is a citizen soldier who comes forward in a National emergency, intending, not to pursue the profession of arms, but to return to peaceful callings when the emergency is over. The suggestion to have a force of "volunteers" to maintain order in an acquired possession ten thousand miles from home was supremely silly. The work was work for professionals and should have been so considered from the first. That this was not done was due to the personal or partisan intrigues of the politicians who botched the Army bill two years ago.

Now these same politicians come forward to demand "justice for the volunteers," who are no longer citizen soldiers, but professional soldiers. No injustice could be done to the volunteers by mustering them out when the term of service for which they were appointed had expired, and a clear injustice would be done to regular officers by making the volunteers eligible for appointment, except at the bottom of the ladder. This was the view taken in the Secretary of War's bill. It provided that, after Second Lieutenancies had been reserved for the next graduating class at West Point, remaining vacancies in that grade might be assigned to volunteer officers who were not more than thirty-two years of age, and who should establish their fitness before an examining board. This was the most that could be done for the volunteer officers who were not detailed regular officers without doing injustice to the professionals. But the Senate Military Committee went further. It struck out the age limit, and provided that appointments of volunteers might be made to First as well as to Second Lieutenancies, although it retained the apparently inconsistent proviso that "nothing herein contained shall change the relative rank of officers heretofore commissioned as Second Lieutenants in the regular army."

The amendment proposed by Senator DANIEL, and which prevailed on Friday, went still further. It opened Captaincies as well as Lieutenancies to the volunteers. The evident intention of it was to open the Captaincies to "pull" rather than to merit or to seniority. Its passage was discreditable to the Senate. But it is not likely to do much harm, for the intention of its mover will probably be frustrated. Nothing in the President's whole Administration has been more creditable to him than the care and conscientiousness with which he performed the invidious task of officering what may be called the regular volunteer regiments. It is true that he had had an awful warning from the results of Algerism in military appointments at the outbreak of the war with Spain. But it is nevertheless true that he established a good title to the gratitude and confidence of the army and of the country by insisting upon some proof or presumption of merit in his appointments, and by ignoring mere favor altogether. The volunteer officers can obtain regular commissions only upon the favorable report of an examining board composed of regular officers, and such a board will necessarily be alive to the injustice of "jumping" these candidates over the heads of professional soldiers as meritorious as the candidates. It will require very shining merit indeed, something comparable to that of a Funston, to induce such a board to advance a candidate to a Captaincy. But the Senate ought to be ashamed of itself, all the same.

THE CASE OF ST. JOSEPH'S IN PARIS.

Owing to the comments of certain American newspapers concerning the financial distress of the Church of St. Joseph, in the Avenue Hoche, Paris, which has lately been relieved through the generosity of Mrs. MACKAY, a few words of explanation seem necessary.

In the first place the church is the property of the Passionist Fathers, and is therefore, under the Loi d'Accroissement, liable to a special tax. The arrears of the taxes levied since 1898 amounted to 20,000f. The particular function of St. Joseph's is to provide a church home for English-speaking Catholics in Paris. It has had no connection whatever with those religious associations which have proved a thorn in the side of the Republican Government and at which the Associations bill, shortly to be debated in the Chamber, is aimed. The congregation of St. Joseph's came well within the exaction of the law, but owing to its particular status it is quite likely that the Treasury would have graciously refrained from collecting its due would it not by so doing have established a precedent which the other association would not have been slow to flaunt in the face of the Government. At the same time it is to the credit of the Passionist Fathers that they did not seek to evade the law by trick and subterfuge, as other associations have done; nor did they, for obvious reasons, care to render it inactive in their case by installing French secular priests as they might have done.

The efforts that have been made by the Catholic associations in France to avoid the exigencies of the Loi d'Accroissement is strikingly shown in the records of the Treasury. Between April 1, 1896, and Nov. 1, 1900, 650 alleged cases of willful evasions of the law were prosecuted by the Government, about 80 per cent. of which the Government won, while more than 10 per cent. of the whole number of cases tried were executed by forced sales. The case of the Assumptionist Fathers was, perhaps, the most notorious. This association, which has valuable property at 8 Rue François I., Paris, and in Bordeaux and Arras, for years evaded the payment of the tax by declaring that it was simply the tenant of the property occupied and not the owner. Its exemption from taxation was established by a judgment of the Cour de Cassation, rendered Nov. 21, 1898, and yet, when the building in the Rue François I. was searched by the police a year ago in order to find evidence against the association as a centre of political propaganda, a contre-lettre or counter lease was discovered in the safe which proved that the property belonged to the association.

The significant clauses in the Associations bill have already been explained here. However much the French Government might sympathize with the work of the Passionist Fathers, it was inexpedient longer to delay the execution of the law. Owing to the broad range of the new bill, should it ever become a law, there is no likelihood that it will be made to apply to St. Joseph's so long as the Passionist Fathers confine themselves strictly to their present offices, as, of course, there is every reason to believe they will.

THE SABBATH AND THE PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

A great many persons are now working very industriously to create public opinion against opening the Pan-American Exposition on Sundays. In meetings of a religious or semi-religious character resolutions are offered, and usually adopted, protesting against the opening of the grounds or buildings on Sunday to visitors of any class.

Movements of this character should not be judged hastily or harshly. They are wholesome, and in the main beneficial. No doubt it makes for good to have always at work a vigilant body of devoted men and women serving as a posse comitatus for the protection of the public morals, and for the maintenance of the more or less arbitrary standards fixed for Sabbath observance. One natural result of this is to multiply the number of those who resent any restriction of individual liberty in matters which do not touch the security of life and property. The conflict of opinion and of effort thus engendered is not injurious to the public interest. Whatever gives the churches something to fight for and offers opportunity for marshaling their strength in opposition to worldly tendencies stimulates the interest of congregations and fires the zeal of the devout. In any conflict of views as to what is proper and right in the matter of laws for the maintenance of the traditions of the Puritan Sabbath, the Church has an immense advantage over its opponents in coherent organization, which counts for as much in moral crusades as in practical politics. It fails to accomplish its purposes and attain its desires in many things not because it is opposed by organization in any way comparable to its own, but because the vis inertia of popular indifference renders it impossible to create a public opinion which the lawmakers consider formidable.

The discussion as to the proper course to be pursued by the management of the Buffalo Exposition makes that important enterprise a matter of more or less intense interest to hundreds of thousands who might otherwise have thought very little about it. The question of Sunday opening is likely to be decided finally on broader grounds because of the discussion to which we have referred. The educational value of an exposition of this character is of vastly more consequence than the question of the deficit to be met in the final round-up. Its results must be judged by very different standards from those applicable to business enterprises which, to be successful, must be financially profitable. That many thousands of wage earners can make very little use of the educational facilities of the exposition if it is not open on Sunday is a consideration which should be kept in view.

Perhaps as satisfactory a compromise as can be reached in this case will be to open the exposition on Sunday to those having a serious purpose in visiting it, and suppress such features as retail booths, side shows, and mere entertainments of all kinds which will draw crowds of pleasure seekers. The sale of liquors is already regulated by the State excise law. This, of course, will not satisfy the opponents of Sunday opening, and it may disappoint the worldly minded and frivolous but it has been well said that a fair compromise cannot be entirely satisfactory to either party. To make Sunday at the fair a gala day, with every amusement and catch-penny adjunct in full blast, would be a needless and injurious affront to a wholesome religious sentiment which should be respected; to close it altogether on Sunday would be regarded by multitudes of good citizens as an invasion of their rights, warranting reprisals in a movement for the repeal of Sabbath laws generally.

Several able lawyers in Northern Ohio, to whom fees are large and frequent, have shown, it is reported, by speedy declinations that the position of Judge of the newly created United States District Court there does not have sufficient attractions, even with the honor added to the meagre salary, to induce them to accept the position. It seems, after all, that the Ohio man will not accept every office that is offered, though he does take so many of them.

CULTURE IN THE NORMAL SCHOOL

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Having occasion one day to travel in a Lexington Avenue car, I happened to be passing Sixty-ninth Street just as the students of the Normal College were emerging from the building. The adjacent streets were thronged with hundreds of bright, fresh-looking, beautiful girls, all talking, laughing, and evidently on good terms with themselves and the world. Several of them boarded the car in which I was seated, and among them a young lady of my acquaintance, the daughter of an old and intimate friend. These young ladies were more grave and dignified than the merry groups which first attracted my attention. These were seniors. Neither did they seem as well pleased as the others. Something had ruffled them.

They were talking rather excitedly and without the least reserve, so that I had no difficulty in discovering the cause of their disturbance. They were discussing the merits—or, rather, demerits—of the new professor of music. "Honestly," said one young lady, "I can't get used to him. He just riles me. I think it an outrage that such a man should be placed over us. All the other professors are not only scholars, but gentlemen as well, and this man is so common." "Common," said another, "that is no name for it! Why, he cannot even speak English! Poor old Prof. M. used to make some terrible blunders, but we could forgive him because he was a foreigner. Did you hear him the other day say: 'Now don't sing as if ye were five years younger than ye are, because ye ain't'? And another time he said: 'Do you catch on?' I wanted to say: 'No, we are young ladies and we don't do that sort of thing.'"

Here peals of laughter greeted the recollection. "I think," said another, "that he has the worst manners of any one I ever saw. I suppose he has catarrh or something, and the grimaces he makes as he sits upon the platform and the way he sniffs and scrapes his throat makes me sick at my stomach." Here the girls all groaned. Just here I ventured to ask a question: "Apart from his manners, what about his ability as a professor?" "Professor, indeed!" said the youngest of the party. "Why, he isn't even a college graduate, so how can he be a professor?" Another replied: "He may have ability, but he has made no special demonstration of it as yet, and we think we were making rather better progress under Miss S., who filled the position temporarily before he came." Again I ventured to ask: "How did such a man get into so dignified a position?" Here there was another merry peal, when one of them answered:

"Ah! that's one of those things that no fellow can find out. My papa knows a member of the Board of Education, and he says he does not know how he got there, as there were lots of applicants for the place, and some of them were splendid musicians. So I suppose it was 'pull.'" "Well," I said, "young ladies, if he is so objectionable to you, why don't you protest?" "We would like to," they replied, "but we don't know whether 'shocking manners' would be considered a valid ground for protest."

Here some of the party left the car and the others settled down into ordinary topics. But I still ruminated. I thought: These young ladies have a real grievance. They are obliged to receive instruction from a man whose "shocking manners," as they termed it, deprives him of the respect and deference which they would gladly give him, and which a professor in such a college ought easily to command. These young ladies are in training to, in turn, become teachers of our children in the public schools, and every one placed over them should not only be thorough scholars and capable instructors, but models of refined deportment for them to pattern after. Does the Board of Education think of this in selecting instructors? Was this man the best they could have appointed to the position which he occupies? If not, what right had they through "pull" or any other consideration to deprive these earnest young students, and, through them, thousands of pupils in our public schools, of the best they could command, both in regard to ability in the line of their particular study and also as to general culture and refinement of life and conduct?

GOV. ODELL "THE REAL THING."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is said of Alcibiades, who lived such a "strenuous life" in Athens, that he loved praise and applause more than he loved power, and that his desire was to make a noise to afford the Athenians food for conversation. Wherein lay the weakness of Brother Alcibiades.

This thought is prompted by a letter in Sunday's TIMES by Eugene V. Brewster, who says he "will take off his hat to Dr. Lyman Abbott" because last Fall the good doctor wrote a letter to THE TIMES, in which he enthusiastically commented upon the "godlike" qualities of the Republican nominee for Governor, and for the reason that when the letter was written he felt "cocksure" that the esteemed doctor had lost his balance, and had probably allowed his distinguished and astute neighbor to so enchant and delude him that the otherwise well-balanced divine had quite lost his keen sense of reason and discrimination; "but after reading that memorable message he is compelled to admit his error and to agree with Dr. Abbott." "The hand that penned that message," says Mr. Brewster, "and the heart and head that prompted it define a man of unusual worth."

This is a very happy frame of mind for a young man to be in. It shows he knows a good thing at sight, and pays a high compliment to the fine discrimination and honest judgment of the doctor. It is possible that, at the time the letter was written last Fall, your correspondent, like thousands of others, was so enchanted and deluded by the pyrotechnical and political displays of the Alcibiades sort, he was quite blinded to the quiet, homespun virtues of the hard-worked and faithful Odell, who, unmindful of his own success, gave his time and talents to the election of Mr. McKinley. Our Governor resembles Alcibiades in this, that he hates noise and spectacular politics, and would walk ten miles to escape a public demonstration of any sort. Therein lies Uncle Benny's strength.

We have had scholars, statesmen, warriors, patriots, and a long list of "job lots" for Governors; we now have the "real thing." He wears the same size hat now he wore when he quit college and drove his father's ice wagon, twenty years ago. There are not now, and never will be, any absurd things about Odell. He has enough brain tissue to supply half a dozen such freaks as we sometimes find in his place, but you will never catch him or his estimable wife putting on airs or trying to show off. That's why Uncle Benny is the real thing. S. E. SHIPP.

GOV. ODELL'S POLICY.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of yesterday there was a communication from Eugene V. Brewster, which pleased a great many of your readers. During the past campaign I read the statements of the Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott regarding the candidacy of B. B. Odell, Jr., for Governor. At the time I thought same would have great weight, and without doubt they had. Dr. Abbott knew whereof he affirmed, and Mr. Brewster is manly in thus publicly acknowledging his change of opinion.

Gov. Odell has taken just the stand his friends expected him to take. His message is all that a message could be, and one hears only praise spoken of same. I refer to each and every part of it. That there has been for many years, beginning in Gov. Hill's time, a constant growth of commissions, is a fact well known. Year by year, almost, they have been created, and by cause once established, there was never an effort made to curtail expenses, either by lopping off the least useful or by combination with departmental work of constitutional officers. That there is now a reasonable prospect of retrenchment, along the lines pointed out by the Governor, is owing to the stand taken in the message, and said stand will be maintained until the remedy is applied.

Let no one be deceived. Gov. Odell has had the education, training, and experience that abundantly qualifies him to take the lead where any dare to follow. That he will be successful those who know him well have no doubt. His ambition is to make the best Executive possible. As his term advances these characteristics will manifest themselves more and more, and the independent voters who were shy of him will find out their mistake, and I hope will be frank enough to own up that they have been happily deceived. The office of Governor of this great State is certainly a high honor to the forty-six-year-old resident of Newburg, but before the term is over I verily believe it will be the general opinion that he has added new honor to the position and that the office will be indebted to him rather than he to it. THE SEVENTH AVENUE LINE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Justice Bischoff of the Supreme Court deserves the thanks of all citizens who are opposed to corporation greed and in favor of decent politics for his decision in the matter of Lexington Avenue vs. the Metropolitan Railroad Company. This is the first time, as I remember, of any Judge having the temerity to render a decision against the franchise grabbing of this company. There are, of course, many other similar opportunities to invoke the law and bring this monopoly to a sense of public decency, but this, however, cannot be expected so long as the management exerts its present hypnotic influence over city officials.

The extent to which this jugglery is carried is well exemplified on Seventh Avenue, where public improvements demanded by a large majority of the property owners, as well as tenants on the avenue, have been sat upon for nearly a year in the interests of this company. (See City Record, March 19, 1900.) Furthermore, the street car service is so shockingly bad, and the company promises to improve it, are so futile that the indignant property owners and residents on Sept. 17 of last year presented a petition to the Municipal Assembly for the removal of the car line from the avenue, on the ground of the company's violation of its charter agreement. This agreement stipulates for a line of cars from Fifty-ninth Street to Park Place and Broadway, and the consent of every property owner on the avenue for the original construction of the road was given upon these conditions.

Moreover, the original owners of the road recognized these provisions and maintained a car line for many years over this route, in evidence of which the old car tracks and rails now remain on some of the downtown streets. The Metropolitan Company, however, has not run cars above Fiftieth Street or below Canal Street since it became the lessee of the road, and which appears to be a plain violation of its charter agreement.

This petition, however, notwithstanding its strong indorsement, was, as usual, hypnotized in the Municipal Assembly and referred to the Law Committee, where it has lain in a trance ever since. Such is in part the hypnotic influence of this trust that no official dares or will conserve the rights of the people when they conflict with the interests of the company.

MR. HARRISON'S ARGUMENT.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read your editorial upon Mr. Harrison's "making fun of the Constitution" a few days ago, and I have learned through a letter from "T. V. Y.," published by you yesterday, that you are under criticism for saying, among other things, that nobody has ever dreamed of asserting such unlimited power as Mr. Harrison suggests.

Please allow me, while agreeing with everything else in your editorial mentioned, to ask, How do you know that nobody ever dreamed of asserting such unlimited power? if I read correctly in The Congressional Record and the newspapers last Winter several members of Congress did not stop with "dreaming" of asserting such extreme power. Neither did fifty or one hundred editorials in The Tribune or other papers, nor did at least a dozen articles in popular and legal periodicals stop short of actually asserting or admitting that such power has been vested in Congress since the Constitution was adopted, as it was vested previously in the States, over their "Western lands." And I do not see why any one would now lose a point in admitting the same, as it was admitted or asserted by the dominant political party when and after Louisiana was purchased.

Moreover, I cannot see how Mr. Harrison could hope to convince a Judge by arguing reductio ad absurdum, especially when the Judge knows that some of the suggested disregard of the Constitution and its amendments was actually known for a time in the Territories of Orleans, Upper Louisiana, Florida, Utah, and in Alaska and Indian Territory. But Mr. Harrison was probably speaking and writing for the jury instead of the Judge, and he does not compliment us highly, whether or not this latest argument by him really "has swept over the country like a clear, crisp, bracing northwest wind, driving before it the fogs and vapors of imperialism that have so long benumbed the sensibilities and blinded the eyes of our people."

HEREDITARY CRIMINALITY.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Commenting upon the fact that the "real scientists and philosophers seem to be coming round to the opinion" that "hereditary criminals are not so hopeless after all if taken in childhood and raised in honest families," the writer in The American Journal of Insanity is quoted as saying: "Efforts at regeneration will take the place of nature's brutal methods of ruthless destruction of the least fit."

May I be allowed to point out that the word "nature" is used in a sense implying that human society and its influences form no part of nature? The fact is, however, that human society and the civilization developed therein are really a part of nature. These, in fact, exhibit gregarious humanity, becoming more organic, more like a living organism in which elimination processes are applied to principles of conduct inimical to social—that is, moral—well-being instead of being applied to the destruction of the unfortunate heirs to the evil principles. It is, indeed, nature, after all, that we see in the "efforts" of civilized society setting about the purification of the individual members of its corporate body. If this higher work of nature were more generally recognized by the individual members of society, a more rapid advancement of civilization and increase of individual well-being would result. Recognized it will be eventually by everybody without doubt, but the actions and reactions preliminary to the perfect organization of society must yet go on for a long time, and what is called "ruthless and brutal processes of elimination" of individuals inimical to the well-being of society must continue.

It will take ages yet to teach individuals that they can be happier by considering themselves parts of the social organism than as independent beings. The more people are compelled to live together and to know each other and correct each other's selfishness the sooner will civilization become perfected.

AGE OF DRURY LANE THEATRE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the criticism which appeared in the columns of THE TIMES of the 2d inst., of Paul Kester's play, "Sweet Nell of Old Drury," now being acted by Miss Rehan and her company at the Knickerbocker, your critic states that "there was no Drury Lane Theatre in her [Nell Gwynn's] epoch." Although this statement is literally correct, Drury Lane Theatre not being officially so called until a later time, Mr. Kester is scarcely without authority for the title of his play. Wheatley and Cunningham, in their "London: Past and Present," under the heading, "Drury Lane Theatre," have the following: "The first theatre on the site of the present edifice was opened on April 8, 1663, by the King's company, under Thomas Killigrew, with Beaumont and Fletcher's play, 'The Humorous Lieutenant.'" This was officially the Theatre Royal. The same authorities state that the Cockpit Playhouse, in Drury Lane, also on the site of the above house, is that building referred to in the Calendars of State papers, under date of March 8, 1617, as follows: "Riots on Shrove Tuesday; Drury Lane Playhouse attacked." "March 8, 1617; * * * Drury Lane Theatre, which they would have destroyed had they not been prevented." (Ibid.)

Wheatley and Cunningham themselves use the words: "References to the first Drury Lane Theatre are pretty numerous," meaning thereby the house in which Nell Gwynn performed to the delight and edification of Charles II. and that naïve chronicler of his reign, Samuel Pepys. If the official name of no building in Pepys's day was Drury Lane Theatre, it is probable that already the term had become popular, for we have Pepys writing: "Then my wife and I to Drury Lane to the French comedy," and in the index to the "Diary and Correspondence of Samuel Pepys," edited by Richard Lord Braybrooke, occur the words: "Drury Lane—French Comedy at."

The theatre of Pepys's day was burned in 1672, and Sir Christopher Wren designed the second building on the same site, opened 1674. This building was "new-faced," in Garrick's time, and was the Drury Lane which became known as Old Drury. Wheatley and Cunningham quote Mr. Siddons as using in a letter of the date of 1791 the words "Old Drury," in connection with the capacity of this building, which, as is seen above, dated back to Nell Gwynn's time. The third Drury Lane Theatre was opened in 1794 and burned in 1809.

So that there seems to be plenty of precedent for Mr. Kester's use of the quaint title he has chosen for his comedy. Nell Gwynn was certainly of "Old Drury," if not of Old Drury italicized—of the Old Drury of literature, and sacred to the memory of Garrick and Mrs. Siddons. Moreover, with that delicious picture in the mind which Pepys gives us: "And saw pretty Nelly standing at her lodgings' door in Drury Lane in her smock sleeves and bodice, looking upon one; she seemed a mighty pretty creature"—the title of the present play may well bear a double meaning. EAST SIDE BAKE SHOPS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The recent strike of the east side bakers reveals one more horror in the condition of this quarter which demands public attention and sympathy. There are, as I am informed, about 140 bake shops on the east side, employing from five to thirty-five men each.

Under a law passed a few years ago, only ten hours of work consecutively are permitted in any bake shop, or sixty hours a week, no excess on any given day being allowed unless it be thereby to lessen the hours of work on the last day of the week. This law is wholly disregarded. The Factory Inspector informs me that the courts have required that the evidence of not less than two employes in a shop is required in order to prove a violation of the law. Such evidence it is, of course, impossible to obtain, as any employe giving it would be immediately discharged. By this interpretation of the evidence demanded, the courts have placed the men at the mercy of their employers. Extensive questioning has convinced me that fifteen and sixteen hours would not be an overestimate of the average day's work performed by the east side bakers.

One baker with whom one of our residents talked gave the above time as his average, but stated that on Thursday and Friday he worked twenty-one and twenty-two hours. Another stated that he worked eighteen hours four days in the week and twenty-two hours two days. Another, that he went to work at 6 P. M. and regularly worked until 2 the next afternoon, the only exception being on Thursday, when he went to work at 2 and worked until 11 the next day.

The sanitary conditions in these shops, which are usually in basements, are such that I believe no one could eat the bread if he knew how it is made. The bread made in the east side shops is usually baked in a large loaf, and is smeared with egg to give the top of the loaf a certain gloss. The eggs used for this purpose are frequently such as would stagger an egging party. They are bought at from 25 to 50 cents per hundred, and some of the bakers have assured us that they were not infrequently positively rotten!

The rooms are constantly kept at a most unwholesome heat in order to raise the bread, the workers toiling in trousers and flannel shirts. In no shop visited by us were there signs of recent whitewashing of the side walls, which, under the law, the Factory Inspector may require to be done once in three months. In one shop dingy whitewash was peeling off directly over the place where the bread was being made. In this shop the men were dirty and their clothing dirty. There were no windows except over the tables where the bread was being made. No closets are provided as a rule, unless it is in a corner of the room used for the bake shop, in which case the stench of the closet adds to the general bad odor of the place. Men frequently sleep in the bake shops on the benches where the bread is rolled, or even on the bread itself.

The primary responsibility for the enforcement of the bake shop law is, I believe, with the Factory Inspector's office, but the condition which I have described is such that if the Board of Health's Inspectors were in the habit of visiting our tenement houses as frequently as they ought, they would long ago have stopped this condition in the interests of the public welfare.

The announcement in the papers a few days ago that the larger bake shops had settled with the men has led some to believe that pledges had been given by the majority of the employers regarding the hours and sanitary conditions. If this were the case it would have been merely a pledge to keep the law and not a pledge to grant any unusual demands made by the men. But this is not the case. There are still nearly 800 men out of work. If, however, half of these places could be permanently closed by the action of the Factory Inspector, and the other half forced to maintain a higher standard of cleanliness and to observe the law in respect to the hours of labor, the present conditions, suicidal to so many of the workmen, would be vastly improved.

The Pan-American Exposition.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I would respectfully suggest that if the Buffalo Exposition managers expect to be saved from financial ruin this year, they had better wake up and advertise the Pan-American before it is everlastingly too late. Aside from a few small newspaper advertisements and some insignificant posters, the announcements of this supposedly great exhibition so far are almost nothing, and there exists the most widespread ignorance of the show ever heard of throughout the country respecting a venture involving millions of dollars in outlay. Objects to Calling It a Square.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In yesterday's issue of your paper I noticed that a resolution had been adopted to call the triangular space in front of the Cooper Institute "The Cooper Square." It would sound very strange to call a triangle a square, particularly in this very instance, since this very institution teaches the students to define the difference between a triangle and a square. Would suggest the word plaza be used instead of square.

Letters From Readers on Various Timely Topics

HAZING AT WEST POINT.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A great many newspapers contain the assertion that hazing exists at the United States Military Academy. In a part of the academy, that composed of the pupils who are the cadets, it does exist as admitted by them before the court of inquiry.

The authorities of the academy are charged with the instruction and administration; the deviltry is performed by the cadets not only without the sanction, connivance, or help of the authorities, but in spite of the regulations, orders, and punishments. Now, who are the cadets? They are boys between the ages of seventeen and twenty-two years, when admitted, appointed (thirty) by the President from at large and one each by members of Congress. If you plant potatoes you cannot expect to harvest wheat. Consequently when those having the nomination of cadets will exercise judgment and discretion to select honorable and true boys, there will hardly be any trouble among them. Doing as they do, they cannot expect anything else, and before some of the honorable gentlemen of the House (Bailey) and of the Senate (Money) try to throw mud at the United States Military Academy, it certainly would be advisable for them to take a broom and sweep in front of their own doors and to see also whether or not they are living in glass houses.

The consequences of hazing are known to all cadets. If they violate any regulations they know that they will be punished; they either think that they will not be caught, or, if caught, dismissal will not follow, as they flatter themselves with having a "pull," (which does not always work, vide records,) which would prevent their dismissal; or they do not care if dismissed. Neither set is desirable, though in the long run they might and do learn better. If a parent is responsible for the conduct of his child, those selecting candidates for the Military Academy are, in my humble opinion, equally responsible for them, and they should investigate themselves as to how and why they made such selections.

After an intimate acquaintance of over twenty years with the United States Military Academy and its graduates, and with perhaps better knowledge of European schools than our professional statesmen have with them, or have even with our own, I believe that the United States Military Academy is the grandest school of the world. Records prove it. The more it is fairly investigated and the more the results of such investigations are made known to the supreme rulers—the people at large—the better for the academy and the better for the people, and the academy may receive the support which its graduates from its beginning have so richly earned for it.

Deportment of West Pointers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The present opening of West Point to a disgusted public reminds me of an occurrence in Poughkeepsie a few years ago. There was a celebration of some kind. The local military companies had laid down a marching route and invited West Point to send up a company. When the visitors arrived the home troops opened out after the manner of military courtesy and let the Government boys lead. These latter passed through, the separate companies and citizen volunteers closing in after them.

Then the West Pointers struck a tremendous, swinging stride, quickly outmarching their hosts, made the round of streets prescribed, hurried on board their boat, and left. The rest of the procession, being much less fit than the regulars, tried hard to keep up, but found it quite impossible to do so. They began to straggle—here and there one would drop out from sheer exhaustion. When the visitors left the dock their hosts, who had been eager to do them honor, were straggling along the route, a sorry spectacle.

A day of innocent and patriotic pleasure was turned to one of wretched disappointment by the vulgar manners of persons in uniform who are supposed to be the flower of our American youth. They who saw that performance had no clear conception that the average West Pointer is an arrant cad. It now appears that he is also a brutal and cowardly bully. Twenty-five years ago I heard Gen. Sherman express the hope that the academy might soon come to graduate brave and gentlemanly scholars; but the General, thank God, has gone to his rest. He was a gentleman, and something of a soldier, too!

Stamping Out Hazing.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As an outgrowth of barbarian common law, some ancient customs and "rites" will assume a certain claim for rights, to be inflicted at the pleasure of the stronger.

Strange as it may appear to some of us, such cruel practices on helpless freshmen are absolutely unknown in (other) civilized countries; there "poor, doomed mortals" will receive always fair play, and even may select weapons to fight it out, face to face, in the presence of impartial seconds.

In 1861 we were of opinion that big, brutal fellows and rowdies would make first-class fighters; yet, face to face with death, they became Bull Runners almost to a man, not to mention some Generals of "hazing" traditions, whose liquid courage grew with empty bottles. Exemplia odiosa!

We yet recollect when hazing flourished at West Point, at the time Gen. Thomas H. Ruger took command. Cadet (John Smith?) was put through while on guard, and, not catching on to "surrender arms" and stand on his head, he clumsily pricked the master of ceremonies (call him Brown) with the bayonet in the rear of the thigh. Their code of honor silenced the Surgeons as to a report.

But next morning stern Gen. Ruger demanded: "Where is Cadet Brown?" "Sick in bed." "Carry him hither on a stretcher!" "Who wounded you?" "Call Cadet Smith to exhibit his musket!" Smith came, with musket and all, protesting: "I am sorry, General; I did not mean to; I—" Sorry? Did not mean to! This bayonet ought to be red up to the hilt! One week arrest! I want you to understand, any one fooling a sentinel must be carried off in his coffin. Cadet Brown will get his sentence when healed, reporting for duty."

I ask, when a single commander thus broke up that noble sport of young rowdies, cannot our whole War Department do the same?

The Course at West Point.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The exposure of the system of brutal hazing at West Point is very shocking to us all, but should we be surprised at the behavior of these cadets when we consider the sources whence they come? They are not sons of gentlemen, as in most of our colleges, but boys taken from among the uneducated and unwashed, and sent to this school, not because of any fitness, but through the favor of friends in Congress. It takes many years to lick such material into decent shape, and frequently it cannot be done at all.

In further criticism of West Point, it seems to me that the studies enforced are such as to make mathematicians rather than soldiers. The course in mathematics is so severe that only students inclining to such studies can fulfill the requirements, and the rest, no matter what their other qualifications may be, either stand badly in their classes or are dropped.

What connection there can be between an exact science like mathematics and so complicated and uncertain a thing as warfare is not apparent to us laymen; we only know that fighters like Grant have usually graduated low, and that our present campaigns are being conducted by men like Miles and Otis, who have never been to West Point, but have learned the art of war in the field rather than at the blackboard. Is it not probable that many young men fitted by nature to be Generals of the first rank have been lost to the country solely because of deficiency in quadratics or other abstruse form of mathematics?

VETERINARIANS AND THE STAFF.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial on veterinarians and the staff in this morning's issue did not give a correct idea of the veterinary service. The majority of the "vets" in the army, I believe, did not favor the corps idea, for various reasons. The appointment of a civilian in a fighting regiment, as the "vet" now is, is something beyond the comprehension of the average citizen. He has no standing, he is disowned by both officers and enlisted men, he has no status, and has not even the handling of the veterinary drugs. He goes to the front and gets disabled or killed, he becomes a pauper or his family become beggars. His efficiency in the regiment as a civil employe is reduced to a minimum, as he has no authority; he has no place in a military organization, and is as a consequence a hermit in a body of 1,200 men. His pay and allowance mean nothing more than so much money per month and a place to live. The last recruit joining is entitled to a pension if disabled; his wife, if he be killed.

The veterinarian in the army is without any prospect beyond that of being crippled and cast out. He does not desire to be a barnacle, but he desires to receive the same consideration in the regiment as others. Abolish the present status entirely and make him either a Second Lieutenant or a non-commissioned officer. The present status is intolerable and productive of nothing but dissatisfaction and poor results.

The corps idea was all right on paper. So is the present status of the veterinarian in the army, but in practice it is something worse than intolerable, and, I may say, is next to useless.

Make the army veterinarian either a Second Lieutenant or an enlisted man, but abolish the position as it now stands. It is an irritant to every one in the regiment.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE RELATIONS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the very nature of things, the whole volume of the world's trade must decline to a minimum in proportion to population as the world grows older. There will come a time—perhaps in this century—when each nation will be practically independent in an economic sense of all of its neighbors. That is the end for which individuals and nations are striving, and it will be reached just as soon as the physical and moral sciences make the way clear. When that time comes it is likely that our relations with other countries will be more fraternal and disinterested than they are just now. We shall still be bound to them by other ties than those of commerce.

At first blush the general proposition would appear to reanimate the corpse of protection which clings like some vile Old Man of the Sea to the strenuous Sindbad of American trade. I disavow any such intention. Protection is a very poor way to try to make a nation commercially independent under present industrial conditions. That end can be much better reached by the greatest freedom of trade, in a way that will be as little liked by the free trader as by his opponent, if modern commercial facts are at all significant of economic tendencies. What do our increasing exports of machinery portend? The inevitable general establishment of factories right in the very foreign markets we are exploiting; the teaching to our commercial competitors of the very arts which have made us successful over them. It is only a matter of time before our Oriental customers will be raising all of their raw product and controlling their home markets to the exclusion of outsiders, and in the end they will make their own machinery, or have it made within their own boundaries. They may not then be able to sell their products in our home market—they do a little now—but our trade with them will be "knocked into a cocked hat." Getting knocked into a cocked hat is an experience not provocative of extreme piety. To this country it will mean a corresponding diminution of the domestic industry devoted to that particular trade, and a gradual derangement of trade conditions as we now understand them.

If the foreign markets for manufactures are soon to be narrowing, the same can be said of the markets for our food products. Agriculture is becoming more scientific and intense, and in a decade or two the United States will find that it will feed proportionally lesser foreigners abroad than now. Our exports and imports will decrease in proportion and our population will be increasing. Something must happen—a button must fly off somewhere. What are we to conclude from the logic of present and prospective events?

When we reach the stage outlined above the United States will have reached the climax of comparative economic independence. We shall buy and sell very little as far as foreign trade is concerned; we shall not have tasted of the delights of the protectionist's paradise—that delectable land which buys of no country but sells to all of them. That paradise is not only the acme of absurdity, but were it possible would be the utter negation of economic independence, for we might just as well be dependent on other nations for their goods as to be dependent on them in buying their money with our goods.

If, as I have assumed, the foreign trade of the world will ultimately be minimized in proportion to population, then the same holds good of domestic trade in general, for the causes in both cases are practically identical. Trusts and monopolies are aiding this tendency very strongly. Communities are working hard to be independent in a trade sense, and "keeping money in town" is the cry all over the land. The situation is a little more complex, but the persistent play of the principle of self-support goes merrily on at home as well as abroad, for no community or nation can be truly self-supporting unless its workers are all at work. Judging from these indications the world must some day reach a point when foreign markets will be practically unknown. By that time the pressure of population and the diffusion of education will have set in motion reforms in politics and the organization of industry that will make the home market the all in all of trade and the material welfare of every citizen not the least of the aims and ends of the State. If we are not drifting in that direction, then some prophet or son of a prophet should explain.

THE RECIPROCITY POLICY.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a reader of your paper for many years, and an admirer of the same, I must say I was surprised at some of your remarks on the reciprocity question. I admit it is a fine doctrine when lived up to in the full meaning of the word, like strychnine, which is a fine medicine properly administered, but an overdose of either means death to the patient.

You say Mr. Kasson is an expert on such matters. I fail to see it exactly in the same light you mean it. Mr. Kasson spent a year or two visiting foreign countries, to see what they would like to do with us; then compiled a schedule of same, and sprung it like a thunderclap on the country, or those whom it concerned, as far as I can learn, without consulting those interested as to whether it meant life or death to them. So it came on the hosiery and knit goods manufacturers. Had that Kasson treaty gone into effect we should have had sad times among certain branches of the knit goods industry. As it is, I can speak for one mill that would have doubled its plant by this time, but the possible chances that said treaty might go into effect stopped it from building a large mill and doubling its production.

The knit goods industry of this country is not strong enough yet to walk alone. It needs all the protection it now has, which is stimulating it to branch out into a higher grade of goods, also full fashioned, such as are now imported, both in hosiery and underwear. A reduction of 20 per cent. on the tariff would have crippled all and retarded the knit goods growth for many years. Sure as the French treaty had gone into effect Germany would have followed suit, and they could have flooded this country with fashioned goods at less prices than we could make a much lower grade.

The balbriggan underewear, which is one of France's strongest points, would have come in at such prices that would have left the manufacturers of this country with scarce a leg to stand upon. Now, why should these industries be levied upon at the high rate proposed in the Kasson treaty without first being consulted as to how it would affect their interests? I fail to see the work of an expert in such proceedings.

There are industries in this country that have grown to be giants, whom no tariff at all would affect. In these lie the field for reciprocity; not the growing industries that France could wipe out in one season's trade.

If Mr. McKinley is an advocate of such a policy, then I am sorry I voted for him. I always understood the Republican Party to be strongly protectionist. SUB JUDICE.

Trade in Manchuria.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Allow me to take exception to the position in your editorial of Jan. 8 about our trade in Manchuria. If we sell shoes in quantity in Timbuctoo and the Hottentots seize the country, should we protect our sales of shoes by doing something bad to the Hottentots? I think not. It is not of our business either in Timbuctoo or in Manchuria to fool with those who may run those places.

That policy has led all the nations of Western Europe away from commercial supremacy into the business of feeding vast armies, while we, by pursuing a Christian policy of "hands off," are on top for a while, and may hope to stay there if we behave ourselves, but not if we don't.

CHURCH AND WORKINGMAN.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Thomas Conyngton, in last Sunday's TIMES, takes exception to certain statements made by me, and also asks a question to which I wish to make reply. Moreover, he accuses me of denouncing the "capitalistic press," which is directly at variance with what I did say about the newspapers, to which, rightly or wrongly, workingmen have come to apply that appellation. Instead of denouncing them, I expressly commended their editors for doing their duty—according to their point of view. Mr. Conyngton will please remember that I did not begin this discussion—although I seem to have become its storm centre—but was one of several contributors to a debate on the subject as to why more people did not go to church. My letter contained only my own personal views, and the results of several years' observation among the fellow-workers of my own trade. That there might be no misunderstanding upon this particular point, I took pains to emphasize it in the first two sentences.

The editor of THE TIMES, with commendable perspicacity, placed a head over the letter which expressed its meaning exactly —"A Workingman's Views." I am not a labor leader, but a plain, everyday worker trying to solve certain problems for myself and those for whom I am responsible—to paraphrase the words of Barrie's delightful Tommy, I am trying to find a way. Nor did my letter "voice a certain grievance of my class."

A grievance presupposes a wrong. I said that my observation led me to believe that thousands of workingmen had ceased churchgoing because they had become convinced "that the Church and her teachers are mainly against them in the fierce industrial battle now waging." That is not saying that the Church has wronged the workers, but it is saying that the Church, as she is generally represented, is not living up to the spirit of her Founder—a state of affairs which may be accounted for by pointing to the same unholy hand of "organized wealth," which I asserted in the second paragraph of my letter was now laying its blighting touch upon the higher institutions of learning in our land, a paragraph about which both Dr. Cuyler and Mr. Conyngton are discreetly silent.

Mr. Conyngton goes on to say that there is no evidence to support my statement, and cites "the latest and most helpful works upon social science," and "the current periodicals of the different denominations"; to which I reply that if he will throw all these aside, and in some way bring himself into personal contact with a living, striving, working people, he will acquire a fund of information right from the great heart of the common people that will more than offset the fine-spun theories of books and periodicals.

Surely, Mr. Conyngton is not serious when he says that men and women are turning their backs on their early religious training because of "the relaxation of the former strictness of Sabbath observance, the attractions of cheap literature, Sunday excursions, bicycles, golf." Admitted, these, of course, are admitted factors in the problem, but they are only the sequelae of a primary cause, and that primary cause is indifference and unbelief.

He asks why, in common fairness, the three religious leaders whom I mentioned are not as representative of the modern Church as Dr. Cuyler. I believe I shall keep quite within the limitations of a courtcous debate when I reply that I think Mr. Conyngton knows quite well why they are not, for I had already given him ample reasons for my own belief why they were not. To emphasize that belief, however, I will draw a parallel between the way one of these men and Dr. Cuyler solved the same problem. Dr. Cuyler says the young people of the fashionable church of which he was pastor erected a commodious building for working people, and called it the Cuyler Chapel. The other man found the means to erect a beautiful church, which was dedicated to God, and into that church he invited rich and poor to come on equal terms—no reserved pews for the purse-proud, no luxurious upholstery for the rich and plain benches for the poor, but all on an equal footing. And they came! In other words, he made a supreme effort to practice the doctrines which he taught. I am not indorsing those doctrines myself, nor am I saying that I believe in them personally. Nor do I say the contrary. The fact is, that has nothing whatever to do with the matter. The point is, he believed them, he taught them, and he also lived up to them in the strictest sense, and that is still another reason why I do not think Dr. Muhlenberg should be called a "representative of the attitude of the modern Church."

Looking at the matter from another point of view, and eliminating Dr. Cuyler from the discussion altogether, although carrying it on on the lines of his unwise speech, are workingmen to be blamed for losing respect for religious teachers who are ill at ease in heated political discussions on the stump? We have become accustomed to the efforts of a great political party to appropriate to its own use the symbol of our National Union. But can any thinking man help being shocked when he beholds one of the foremost men of a powerful religious denomination—to be specific, a Bishop of the Methodist Church—asserting that "every canon that has its growth in the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount will be helped and furthered" by the election of President McKinley? Bad as this is, it was surpassed by another Bishop of the same denomination, from one of whose speeches I cull the following gem:

"Shall we elect Bryan? No! a thousand times, no. I would rather go to sea with a boat of stone, with sails of lead, with oars of iron, with the wrath of God for a gale, and hell for a port!"

Last week a great meeting was held in one of the most fashionable churches of our city, of still another denomination. The Secretary of a Board of Foreign Missions delivered an address to a gathering made up of the foremost members of that denomination, lay and clerical, in the course of which he made the following astounding declaration:

Paying a debt, and it is a peculiarly American trait, is looked upon ordinarily as paying for a dead horse. Yet there is no nobler duty that confronts the man in the business world than just this. We have to learn in this respect from the Chinese. Their New Year's Day is about Feb. 1. As the end of the year approaches all old debts are paid in order to begin the fresh year anew; and if it is necessary to sell property in order to clear the debt, the property is sold, but the debt is paid. We missionaries have learned this, and buy property about the time the market is overrun with it by owners who wish to sell in order to clear their accounts.

The morality of these operations, of which this clerical gentleman boasts, needs no comment. Surely, Mr. Conyngton will admit that in the light of all we know of the men I mentioned it is impossible to conceive of their allowing such a thing as that to go unrebuked in their presence. Conscquently that is where, again, their attitude was different from that of the modern Church.

Much of what Mr. Conyngton says of workingmen's indifference to their own interest is only too true. But they can be roused, and they will leave their own political party, but the one who rouses them must be wholly disinterested and free from the suspicion of alliance with those who have exploited the people again and again. That is the test which, like Ithuriel's spear, reveals the false and the true. When Henry George came like John the Baptist, the voice of one crying in the wilderness—did they leave their parties then? Whether they will do so next Fall is as yet uncertain. They certainly will not in any great numbers, if the impression gets abroad that Dr. Cuyler speaks ex-cathedra, and it has already been decided in secret conclave, and before the delegates to the conventions have had a chance to be heard, that "excellent as are Mr. Cutting's views, they are not and will not be the issue." A decent respect for the opinion of those whose votes are necessary for the success of any alliance against Tammany Hall might have left the adoption or rejection of those views to the convention itself. If the matter is still open to debate, Dr. Cuyler is very culpable when by his positive assertion he gives the impression that it is not.

As a brief for the other side, Mr. Conyngton's letter is admirable, and it is marked by an unusually judicial spirit. But it fails to meet the issue. There is no use crying "Peace! Peace!" when there is no peace, and when the vital crux has not been solved. Encouraging efforts are making toward that end, however, and labor's interests are looking up. One of the brightest and most wholesome signs of the times is the effort of Bishop Potter to rouse the community to a sense of their civic duty. He speaks with equal plainness to high and low, and his words carry conviction for that reason. He is a student of the times, and foresees what is coming in this country if the present tendencies are not checked. So do Cardinal Gibbons and Mr. Hewitt, and Mr. Cutting, and many others who are making noble efforts to stem the tide.

Let me assure Mr. Conyngton that I have no desire to darken the counsels of the Citizens' Union, to bring a railing accusation against the spirit of the times, or add to the breach that exists between the Church and the world's workers, between the unthinking rich and the thinking poor—the two most dangerous elements in our land. Quite the contrary happens to be the case.

JUSTICE TO LUTHERANS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you allow the writer, a regular reader and admirer of THE TIMES, to protest against the injustice done to the third largest Protestant denomination in the United States in your editorial of yesterday, a part of which reads as follows:

The most important figures, regarded from the standpoint of the general welfare of the country, it will be generally conceded, are those of the bodies which represent the most of education, wealth, and general culture—the Episcopalian, Presbyterian, Reformed, Congregational, and Baptist bodies. These furnish the great majority of students in our colleges and universities, the most influential element in our cities.

The Episcopalians, one of the five above named, have nearly 1,000,000 fewer communicants than the Lutherans. The Reformed, if by that term is meant the Dutch Reformed—for the German Reformed is more akin to the Lutherans—another of the "most important" five selected, is strong in New York, but in the country at large is one of the very smallest denominations. So that if numbers be the test, the Lutherans should far and away have a leading place.

But you prefer the test, "The bodies which represent the most of education, wealth, and general culture. These furnish the great majority of students in our colleges and universities."

I would contend that here again the Lutherans may well contest the right to place. The Lutherans came originally from Germany, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, &c. Germany, "the land of the modern Greeks," as Emerson terms it, has the finest university system in the world, and is the intellectual preceptress of the human mind. Sweden has the lowest percentage of illiteracy of any European or American country. A Church sprung from such a mental aristocracy, and abhorring emotional, revivalistic, and evangelistic measures, pursuing only educational religious methods, employing liturgic formulas for worship, and advancing only by conservative means, is a Church that one would think was entitled to be ranked among the "cultured" bodies.

"The Lutheran Church," wrote the late Dr. Schaff, "is the Church of theologians, her universities have been the glory of Germany for the last three hundred years, and her great critics and religious teachers have been the leading instructors of Christendom from the days of Luther until now." And as Germany is the origin and central molding power of the Lutheran Church in America, it is inevitable that this same literary pre-eminence should characterize her communion in the United States. No church bodies here are occupied with more scholarly questions of theology, liturgy, and ecclesiastical art than are the Lutherans. And their 160 periodicals in English, German, Swedish, Danish, Norwegian, Icelandic, and Finnish, with 44 colleges and 27 theological seminaries, with thousands of students, attest a prodigious intellectual activity not unworthy of the German speculative and generalizing mind.

In short, it strikes the writer as a curious error that a Church of trained scholars and theologians, like the Lutheran, which has outstripped all others in America in growth during the last ten years, having advanced 56 per cent., while the five you name have advanced but 24 per cent., and which last year added more churches and grew at a greater percentage in Greater New York than any other Protestant denomination, and which also last year outstripped all other Protestant bodies in the United States, adding 90,100 members, while the five Churches you name added only one-third as many, 30,000, and two of them, the Baptist and Dutch Reformed, actually lost members, it seems, the writer would remark, an inexplicable thing that such a conservative, scholarly, growing Church should not have a place among the great, leading, influential, and cultured American Protestant denominations.

When we speak of "the country," we must widen our horoscope beyond New York alone. If we do this, it will be found that in 18 of the greatest cities in the country the Lutherans have 185,000 communicants, exceeding the Presbyterians in those cities by 22,000 and the Episcopalians by 27,000.

I do not think your rejection of the great Lutheran Church in the United States from among those entitled to consideration on the ground of "education, wealth, and general culture" would be sustained by any leading college President or theologian. And I ask that you enter this my public dissent.

Whose Missionaries Are They?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read in the Peking correspondence of THE TIMES under date of Jan. 5, when a meeting of the Protestant missionaries was held there, that a majority of the missionaries spoke on the subject * * * of the terms of the joint note of the powers to China. This joint note is a political document, and in the view and purpose of these missionaries, calling themselves Christian missionaries, should be utilized, so far as their influence can secure that end, to enforce among the Chinese the propagation of the Gospel (good news) of Jesus of Nazareth, or to get compensation from or cause punishment of that people, or both for their treatment of these missionaries, their fellows, and followers.

In my search after the proper and prescribed procedure for Christian missionaries, in cases where they were inhospitably treated, I found in an old record just what Jesus of Nazareth had laid down as the proper procedure in such cases. It may be a surprise to some persons (Chinese?) that nowhere could there be found in that old record any mention by Jesus of "joint notes" or treaties, nor any reference to calling on politicians, or the wealthy, for aid, in the order of procedure given by Him to His missionaries. Here is what I found:

He commanded them that they should take nothing for journey, save a staff only; no scrip, (bills of exchange,) no bread, no money in purses; but shod with two shoes, and not put on two coats, (no tunks?) And He said unto them, "In what place soever ye enter into a home, there abide till ye depart from that place. And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear you, when you depart thence, shake off the dust under your feet for a testimony against them."

The record then provides for the day and order of the punishment, but no mention of soldiers, "joint notes," or treaties, but the record says that His missionaries then "went out and preached—that men should repent."

Now, Mr. Editor, that's all the order I find originally given to the missionaries of Jesus. No provision for missionary fund or army aid, but to go as poor men. From this I have concluded that these latter-day missionaries are not of Jesus' stripe; not exactly. Am I in error?

Dr. Savage and Socialism.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

THE TIMES this morning quotes Dr. Savage as having said much concerning Socialism in his sermon of yesterday. If Dr. Savage had any idea what Socialism meant he would never have said that the world began with it and it was barbaric. The world began with anarchy, and Socialism, as Socialists understand it, is an evolution. It has not been on earth within historic times, and it will not be here universally until the rich and the poor are sufficiently educated to see an injustice in the fact that the wealth, made by the people, is at the mercy of the generosity of Mr. Rockefeller and Mr. Carnegie.

With due thanks to all the millionaires for their enormous donations, the startling fact still remains that the vast majority of the people labor a great part of their waking hours for the wealth which brings out a debutante one day and furnishes diamond crowns and necklaces for a bride the next.

REFORM IN NEW YORK.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I feel an interest in the pending city reform campaign, or rather my interest centres chiefly in the method of conducting the campaign and the efforts of unreformed men and editors to make New York what they consider "respectable." That it is terribly in need of reform is apparent to all not connected with Tammany; but how to do it when a thorough reform would be as distasteful to a large majority as none at all is not clear.

So far as I can see, the only reform sought is to make the city outwardly respectable. Even Bishop Potter seems to have no expectation of doing anything more than this. It is not even clear that he wishes to do more, though one would think that a clergyman and a Bishop would greatly desire to purify the city internally as well as externally. This could be done, approximately at least, by taking disorderly women off the streets and out of their houses when the evidence was clear, and colonizing them in some lonely spot in the north wilderness or in Labrador, where, with Christian matrons and general Christian care and instruction, some of them at least might be reformed, and the rest be kept from leading the innocent in "the way of hell, going down to the chambers of death." But I fancy that there are many "respectable" citizens of New York and other cities who do not wish these dens of infamy suppressed. And that is one of the impediments in the way of real reform.

The curse of our civilization is the liquor traffic, which causes more crime and entails more taxes than all other evils combined. But the city people do not see it in that light, and go on hugging this monstrous evil and trying to minimize its horrors by enlarging the police force or by reducing the number of saloons. Liquor is the most costly item of all social festivities, and hardly a man, not even the clergymen, who attend political or civic banquets raise a voice against it. Indeed, so popular and general are the liquor-drinking customs that the average clergyman dare not say a word for prohibition, and in many cases would not if he could. Few men can rise above their environment, and a clergyman who lives and moves among and draws a salary from a congregation favoring the liquor traffic becomes measurably saturated with their sentiments and adopts them with little question. His "bread and butter" depend, as he thinks, on pleasing his constituency, and therefore he preaches to please them first and finds arguments for it afterward. The result is seen in the insignificant prohibition vote annually cast in New York, the number being less than the number of clergymen. They will be vociferous for "reform," but dare not ask for anything more than the whitewashing reform already referred to.

As for the newspapers, they, too, are for reform, but what sort of reform? Will a reform that closes the saloons on Sunday, in accordance with law, be welcome to the publishers and editors of the Sunday papers? Sunday is the Christian Sabbath, a day for rest, religious instruction and meditation, with secular cares and labors laid aside as far as possible; but do the Sunday publishers aid in this good work? Their one purpose is to make money, and to do it they openly defy the Christian sentiment that holds the Sabbath in reverence. Because Sunday is a day of leisure, they seek to thrust their peculiar wares into the homes of weak church members, and because the latter often yield to the temptation they assert that there is a "long-felt want" for the Sunday papers that justifies their issue. It is much the same with the railway magnates. They first run Sunday trains, secure patronage by the temptation, and then establish Young Men's Christian Associations along their lines to take off the curse and prove their piety. This secularization of the Sabbath is one of the most powerful agencies for demoralizing society and bringing about the conditions which justify reform in the cities; but as long as "the great dailies" make fortunes by it it seems likely to continue.

Then, as to the professional politicians of both parties—what interest have they in reform measures? The voters on whom they largely depend—Tammany in particular—are foreigners, whose only regard for Sunday is as a day of sensuality and sport. It is often urged that as they are habitual drinkers and Sunday despisers we should accept their tastes and gratify them! This is shabby and shameful logic. When the foe come here to better their condition, they should accept our laws and usages; or, if they do not like them, let them return to their old homes. We have no occasion to copy either the politics or the social usages of foreign countries, and the men who advocate this course are simply pandering to sensuality and vice, and aiding to make New York the sort of Sodom that it is.

Another impediment to reform is the attitude of the rich. Except when seeking for the "honor" involved in an election to office, they are absorbed in money getting or amusements. Extravagant taxation troubles them but little. When they fail to "wreak off" high assessments it is cheaper to pay the taxes than to be assessed to aid reforms in which they have slight interest or none. It has been publicly charged (and not denied) of one eminent honor-seeker that when a candidate for Congress some years back he went to all the saloons in his district and left money for free treats, to be used at the discretion of the saloon managers. Every man on the reform ticket, then it is made up, including the candidates for Judges, will be assessed at a high figure to meet "legitimate expenses," and any man who "kicks" will be summarily kicked off, because reform costs money.

Then as to the "boss" on the reform side, modest Mr. Platt; is he enthusiastic for reform? What idea of reform has he beyond electing men who will do his bidding in the distribution of patronage? Any candidate whom he cannot control he will oppose, as he did when that innocuous reformer, Seth Low, was the candidate. His only conception of reform is patronage, and with tens of thousands ready to follow his bidding, the reform prospect is rather dark.

For fifty years or more this reform cry has been raised in New York. Reform Mayors such as Tiemann, Opdyke, Hewitt, and Strong, have splined in occasionally, but not one was ever re-elected, nor did their administrations result in any permanent change as to vice or the mitigation of the liquor curse. The charter has been repeatedly changed, and costly investigations made to locate and fix responsibility; but all in vain. In a few months the old conditions reasserted themselves, and it is safe to say that will always be the result until the body politic itself undergoes reform. The worst of the population, amounting to one-half or more, want no reform at all. The other part only want a surface reform, one that recognizes God and Mammon with equal reverence. There is no thought of self-sacrifice for the public good; no desire to do what is right because it is right; no recognition of religious duty in the matter. New York is what it is because its moral condition makes it so.

THE TAX RATE AND SUFFRAGE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I see with dismay that the taxation of this unhappy Island of Manhattan is to be again materially increased during the current year. The burden is becoming intolerable, and the value of real estate in all but certain limited quarters is showing the effect, as other investments are much safer and better.

Is there any hope for the future, or must we see our property virtually confiscated for the benefit of political rings, Tammany and Platt-Roosevelt? As between the two parties there seems to be little choice. Tammany is and always has been in expressibly corrupt and vile, protecting and sharing in the gains of every form of vice and crime, but nevertheless the awful burden of taxation now bearing on the people of this Island of Manhattan is largely due to the opposite party.

It was Platt who "jammed through" the city consolidation, which in one year increased the taxes in Manhattan by 60 per cent.; it is the Republicans at Albany who compel the city to pay 70 per cent. of the taxes of the State; it is the Republicans who passed the infamous "rate of wages" law for this city, under which over 20,000 claims against the corporation are now in litigation; it is these same country Republicans who order us to do this and do that at our own expense, no matter what we want ourselves or what the cost may be. It was Gov. Morton who, by Platt's order, filled the State Board of Tax Equalization with three country Republicans; it was Gov. Roosevelt who last Spring, against the protest of the city authorities, "jammed through" the Davis School bill, which alone will increase our taxes $5,000,000 for the present year. Even Controller Coler has schemes for the future which would land us all in the poorhouse.

Personally I have never thought that decent government was possible under universal suffrage, and the existing state of affairs in this city and State has fully convinced me of the fact. It is an absurd and ruinous system. Can anything still be done to save our homes?

THE POLICE AND THE PEOPLE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Reading of the discoveries of the New York "crusaders" of various names and numbers, one cannot help, at this distance, wondering why the first and most obvious step and the essential step, sooner or later, is not a clean sweep of the police, from Commissioners to last-appointed patrolman. There is no break or variation in the testimony that through all administrations, under all Commissioners, the stream of pollution continues to flow in "the force." As the class formerly called "the well-nowa" by your contemporary, The Post, used to say, "after all, New York is a well-governed city"—meaning no more than that Fifth Avenue was kept reasonably clean—so the same sort of men continue to advance the unimportant proposition that "there are honest men in the police ranks."

That may be true in some esoteric sense, but when Col. Erhardt tells us—as every one who has had to do with the body knows—that the thieves' honor principle, to lay down the shield rather than not shield a "pal," is the first rule of conduct for every policemen, we ought to be able to see that the police is a huge conspiracy against the public, and that every man who has been taught the principles and trained in its traditions is unfit for public service.

It is this practical conspiracy of which Tammany avails itself rather than creates, and it is the exercise of irresponsible power over the poor and tempted classes, a most real tyranny that has grown up largely by means of the "standing together" of the police and the police authorities, aided by the large and undefined jurisdiction granted to or assumed by the police courts (to whom anything distasteful to the police is "disorderly conduct") that enables Tammany to maintain its majorities and to keep in existence "the Croker classes."

To one looking on at the game, it seems of prime importance for the restoration of decency in New York to do two things that a Republican Legislature ought to be glad to do if the machines are not really in league—first, wipe clean the police slate and start fresh, for inexperience would be cured in time, while experience in corruption only propagates corruption; and, second, define the crimes of which City Magistrates have jurisdiction so that these officers will cease to be exceptions to the Anglo-Saxon principle of government by law.

Ramapo Men on Reform Committee.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In to-day's TIMES appears the report of an address delivered by Controller Coler in which he asserts that one of the reform committees has in its membership two of the largest Ramapo stockholders. Of course if that is the committee of "five" no one will be in the slightest degree concerned, because whatever of good comes to the city from that committee is just so much unexpected gain. If, however, that is the committee of "fifteen" it at once becomes a matter of the gravest import. The city has a right to demand that no member of that committee shall be an object of just suspicion, and any Ramapo stockholder should in common decency resign.

Statue of District Leaders.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Keller, as one of Tammany's Committee of Five, declared in an interview with a TIMES reporter that he did not know how a district leader could be got rid of. "The leader of a district," he says, "is a regularly elected official; chosen by his followers, and entitled to a seat in the councils of the main body of the society. The case," he says further, "is analogous to a Senator who, by right of vote, is entitled to a seat in the Senate."

Allow me, Mr. Editor, to call this talk, in Mr. Moss's words, "arrant nonsense." I remember very well the time when "Phil" Wissig, Tammany leader of the "Ate," as member of Assembly, made himself obnoxious through some remarks in a debate over woman's rights. The storm created by Wissig's remarks was so strong that Croker ordered Wissig to meet him, and on the same day, by simple request of the "Boss" Wissig resigned his leadership. Will Mr. Keller deny this, or will he make us believe that it could not be done again?

Allow me the further remark that the Committee of Five is adroitly endeavoring to "change colors" in our crusade against vice.

It is not the red lanterns on the lower east side, but the green lanterns all over the city, where the real dangers are brooding.

Necessity of Street Signs.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In regard to the proposed ordinance requiring owners of corner lots to place upon the property the names or numbers of the streets, I wish to say that when complied with it will be most helpful not only to strangers within our gates, but to the residents. I recently had occasion to ride up Madison Avenue and wanted to get off the car at Eightieth Street, and kept looking for a sign giving the number of the street, but, failing to find it, I had to leave my seat and step out to the conductor to know "where we were at." After looking about and taking his bearings he said: "Seventy-second Street." I asked him how he could tell. He smiled a smile. "I wouldn't know what street it is, only from the shapes of the houses on the corners," said he.

The few signs I did see, the number was on the street side of the lamp, and as we flew by I failed to catch the number. It seems to me that the street gas lamps on the corners could be used to advantage. For instance, on the avenue side should appear the name of the avenue and under it the number of the street. On the street side of the lamp should appear the number of the street and under it the name of the avenue, and written in large, plain block letters, occupying the entire side of the lamp.

It would be well in the coming ordinance to stipulate the style of lettering and size, or the property owners might, in exercising their tastes, have the signs written in fancy lettering or so small as not to be readily seen and

The New Year.

The frosty air was sweet with bells,
The winds were bitter cold.
I saw a knight in crystal mail
Come riding o'er the wold;
His cheek was young, his eye was bright,
His brow untouched with care;
Beneath his glittering helmet shone
A wealth of sonny hair.

Behind him paced a splendid train:
A violet-strewing maid,
A graceful youth with roses crowned
In silken green arrayed,
A dame with robes of flaming gold
Purple and crimson bright,
And last a silver-bearded King
Folded in ermine white.

The young knight met an aged man
In armor like his own;
They tilted in the snowy field,
The elder was o'erthrown.
Clocks struck and trumpets loudly blew,
The chimes played far and near,
So with the Seasons at his back,
Rode in the brave New Year.

Deadwood Camp, St. Helena.

Mrs. John Richard Green in The Nineteenth Century.

My journey to Deadwood Camp took me up hillsides that deepened from day to day the melancholy of my first impression. Nothing there but stones and patches of cactus, withered, yellow, and old. In some more sheltered spots a few trees still struggle desperately against annihilation; trees snapped off short by the wind, while some lower branch, bending round and about to find shelter, apes the part of the main trunk; trees bent double till the topmost bough enters the earth and forms a dry, barren arch; trees that literally crawl along the ground for safety. In the rare spots where there is half an acre or so of level ground, a shanty rises with a roof of corrugated iron, a little veranda, perhaps, and a patch of bananas—all lying under the same ceaseless wind, all in the same stage of obscure and shabby forlornness. What a sordid nature, tattered and battered, ignoble, dingy, vulgar, and unashamed! Everything is foreign, dejected, incongruous. The Kafir thorn, the African palm, the Indian banyan, the Scotch fir, the Port Jackson willow, are not at home, but transported, as it were, to a friendless inn. The beautiful cardinal bird, whose scarlet plumage flames among the cactus and the tormented thorn, looks incredibly homeless and strayed, like a parroquet escaped in the London streets. You already see its natural doom—to be snared and sold to the man-of-war lying in the harbor.

And the very people—what are they? Descendants of Chinese, French settlers before the revolution, West Africans, Malays, Welshmen, men of Lancashire, varied cargoes of negroes landed from slave ships, and to these add sailors of an English man-of-war, a West Indian regiment, a body of artillery, the Gloucestershire Militia, a company of Cape boys as mule drivers, and Boer prisoners of war. Portuguese coins are dug up, and plaques of Dutch delft with Bible stories on them. Relics of Napoleon are multiplied. Over that melancholy cinder fortress seems still to hang the shadow of its first human inhabitant, flung there with every limb and feature mutilated, and a few slaves to fulfill for him the functions for which he had no longer hands or feet.

Earl Li's Secretary.

From The Century.

Here is Mr. Pethick's description of a Chinese soldier which he made to me while ours were drilling in the compound: "The Chinese will go out to war with his fan in one hand, his bird-cage in the other, his paper umbrella over his shoulder. At night, no matter how bright a moonlight there may be, instead of the umbrella he will carry a lighted lantern." Mr. Pethick was Li-Hung-Chang's private secretary and interpreter, and expected to follow him to Canton. He has been here over thirty years, and is very fond of the Chinese, and is perfectly devoted to Li-Hung-Chang. One of his special duties as private secretary was to read him to sleep every night. Mr. Conger relates a little incident which happened to Li when he came here to call on the Minister. On entering the drawing-room his valet let go of his arm to pass through a narrow door. Li stumbled, and fell his whole length into the room. This was very mortifying to him, and he turned and remarked to the valet: "I will throw you into boiling lard when we get home." Mr. Pethick and Mr. Cheshire (the interpreter,) both Americans, came together to China as young men. They lived and dressed like the natives, even wearing queues, so as to be better able to mix with them and study the language.

Modern Science of Map Making.

From The World's Work.

The textbooks which our schoolchildren used 100 years ago told them nothing of the Rocky Mountains or the ranges of the Pacific Slope. The exploration of three-fourths of our vast domain has been the work of our Government and private citizens. In a broad sense, it has been well done; and in the past twenty-one years it has been succeeded by detailed studies and surveys which should be specially mentioned, for they are a phase of exploration which has been carried out on a large scale only in the nineteenth century, and which is essential to the production of the most accurate maps. No topographic feature or town or the distribution of economic resources can be mapped with the greatest attainable accuracy till these surveys are made. They involve, first, the preparation of a topographic map showing the relief or inequalities of the surface, the drainage, and the works of man, such as roads, railroads, boundaries, and towns; second, the geologic map, printed in colors upon the topographic base map, showing the distribution of the rock formations, soils, useful minerals, artesian waters, &c. These surveys and the resulting maps are one of the most scientific developments of geographic research in this century. They have been completed in all countries of Europe except in Norway, Spain, Turkey, and some of the Balkan States. The great survey of India is one of the monuments of cartography, and similar surveys are far advanced in Algeria and Tunis. The topographic work has been carried on by our General Government, with the assistance of a few States, into all the States and Territories, and nearly a third of our entire area has now been completed. The labor is enormous and costly, and many years will elapse before the whole country can be mapped with the refinement and accuracy that characterize the map sheets of the most of Europe.

Inherited Observation.

From The Westminster Review.

The natives inhabiting the Andaman Islands are compelled to wander through intensely dense jungle in search of food. To enable them to find their way through this thick forest they are in the habit of marking trees as they move along, and carefully noticing irregularities of the ground, so forming a trail, by means of which they can guide their steps. Their powers of observation in these matters become so keen that it would almost seem the Andamanese possessed a faculty beyond the cognizance of more civilized people.

An Andamanese infant, having been deserted by his parents, was taken into the house and reared on the premises of the European chaplain residing on the central station of the islands. When this lad had reached the age of ten years the chaplain brought him to Calcutta. The day after arriving in that city, while walking over the Maidan, we were suddenly surrounded by a dense fog. Our party came to a stand and were discussing the advisability of remaining where we were until the fog lifted rather than lose our way in it, when the Andamanese boy, who was with us, hearing the discussion, said he thought he could find his way back over the Maidan, or open grass plain, in spite of the fog. He looked a few yards back, for he could see nothing beyond that distance, and recognized a stone which he said we had passed, and then a clump of grass, and so on, following from point to point various objects on the ground, until we reached the main road, and then home without difficulty. The boy said he had paid no particular attention to the various objects on the ground as he passed them in his walk, but he said he must have seen them and had no difficulty in recognizing them again. It would seem that this lad had inherited a keen faculty of observation, such as that which his progenitors possessed; our contention is that, as the color and form of his peculiar hair, skin, and features depended on specialized organic matter passed on to him by his parents, so also the physical conformation of his brain, and, therefore, his fundamental mental qualities, were derived from his ancestors.

We can thus, perhaps, faintly comprehend how it is that our inherited faculties of thought, feeling, and action are intimately related to and limited by our present organization, being fixed in the molecular structure of our brain-cells. These faculties differ only from the instincts of the lower animals in that human beings possess more highly organized and a greater quantity of nerve elements in their brains in proportion to the size of their bodies.

Baireuth.

From The North American Review.

Baireuth is the last place to go to for the ideal artist, and yet, though the Baireuth performances are far from perfect, those given elsewhere are always something of a compromise in comparison. For, in the Bayreuth Theatre, the singer's chief difficulty was solved by Wagner himself. By sinking the orchestra in a pit he made it possible for the singer to whisper if he wants to (and that is not too often) and yet be heard above the orchestra. The effect of this device is astounding; the orchestration of "Tristan," which elsewhere may seem an unwieldy mass of sound that forces the singer to shout or stand agape, is at Baireuth a fine lacework accompaniment, full of wonderful detail and capable of the minutest shades. It seems to be the most difficult of a conductor's many difficult duties to obtain a real piano from a full Wagnerian orchestra; for it is not until every member of the band has got his part thoroughly into his head, and on his fingers or lips, as the case may be, that anything approaching a piano is to be hoped for. In "Tristan," which is very fully scored, there are passages in which it is well nigh impossible not to cover the voice. How seldom, outside Bairuth, does Isolde succeed in making herself heard all through the Liebestod!

The Citizen and the State.

From The Monthly Review.

In the Roman and Greek idea of government the citizen was nothing beside the State, and could claim no rights from it. His liberty was protected from the tyranny of one man, but he was subjected to the absolute despotism of the republic. Acts of the most flagrant injustice were the consequences of such a system of government. A very similar view of the relative position of the State and the citizen was held in the Italian city republics, and was one of the chief causes of their overthrow. But in modern times this conception has been considerably modified. The practical embodiment of the new order of ideas is the British Constitution. It protects the rights of the citizen not only against despotism, but also against violence and abuse of power on the part of the majority. There may be occasional injustice and violation of the law, but public opinion feels so strongly on the subject that, in England at least, they are now almost impossible. In Continental States, where the political conscience is less developed, the rights of the citizen are not so sacred, but there is a constant improvement, and we have recently seen a clear proof that the violation of the rights of the citizen by order of those in authority can excite an outburst of purely altruistic indignation all over the world. That that outburst failed in its object in this particular instance is of no consequence. The fact that an obscure French officer, whose name five years ago no one had heard of, should suffer an unjust and terrible punishment for political reasons raised a storm of hatred against his persecutors, and this in itself proves that there is a certain moral sense in political matters when foreign relations are not called into question.

The Manager's Eagle.

From The Gentleman's Magazine.

Stage properties in the early days of the nineteenth century were of the most primitive kind, and sometimes were lacking altogether. One night the play was an adaptation from "Der Freyschütz," the act where Walter has to shoot an eagle.

Walter was there, gun in hand, ready to aim at the royal bird. But—no royal, or, indeed, any other specimen of the feathered race was forthcoming.

Mr. Lee, the manager, was, as was his wont, seated in a chair at the wings.

"Where's the bird?" he shouts. No one knows; a regular scrimmage behind the scene while the stage waits!

"Can't you find it, any of you?" (A pause.) "Then, [a big D——] here goes my wig!" which he snatched from off his head and flung across the stage.

Walter shoots! The deed is done! The royal bird falls! The audience applauds vociferously, little knowing that 'tis the manager's wig doing duty as an eagle!

When Christmas Is Over.

The drum in a corner lies forlorn,
A hole in its head unmended;
While battered and bent is the Christmas horn
Its mission on earth is ended.
The skates are nicked and covered with rust.
And now to the past are ceded;
The books, with eagerness once discussed,
Repose on the shelf, unheeded.

The doll has ruined her wardrobe all,
Her bed no more is slept on,
But out in the maze of the dim-lit hall
She is often rudely stepped on.
The candy is only a morsel wee,
Too stale for further dwindling;
The dried remains of the Christmas tree
Are at last reduced to kindling.

The cat and the dog have resumed their cares,
After a rapt vacation;
The cook in her sanctum daily bears
Full many a visitation.
For Santa Claus in the neighborhood
Of the distant pole now snoozes,
And Willie makes up for the time he was good,
And Jane is as bad as she chooses.

Good Eyesight.

From The Spectator.

Mr. N. Chevalier, the well-known artist who accompanied the late Duke of Edinburgh on many of his travels, was once going from Dunedin to Lyttelton, New Zealand, by steamer. Anxious to catch the earliest glimpse of the coast, he went on deck at dawn, and was alarmed to see that the vessel was heading straight on to the land. Calling the officer's attention to the fact, he was told that it was only a fog bank. The artist maintained his point, but the second officer looked and confirmed his mate. The artist then said: "Well, gentlemen, I will back my artist's eye against your sailor's eye, and I say that what you mistake for a fog bank is a low range of hills, and there is a range of mountains appearing above them." But he was only laughed at, until the Captain coming on deck found, in the growing light, that the artist was right and the seamen wrong. The vessel was out of its course, and there was only just time to avert disaster. The helmsman was dismissed in disgrace, and the course given to the new steersman, but the vessel's head still pointed landward—the compass was all wrong. The cause was discovered later. A commercial traveler had brought a box of magnets on board and deposited them in a stern cabin, meaning what might have been a fatal deflection of the compass. To return to the question of interpretation. The artist was dealing with the appearances which his eye was trained to see and his mind to interpret. A speck on the horizon might have remained a mere speck to him long after the sailors had interpreted the speck into a vessel of definite rig. There can be little doubt that the trained eye is accompanied by a sort of mental seeing, an instinct outrunning optics.

Cavalry and Sandhurst.

From The Nineteenth Century.

One great blot in the Sandhurst system is that from its very commencement, so to speak, the cavalry are left out in the cold. Cavalry commissions generally fall to the lot of the dunces in the examination, because the more successful competitors elect to go into the infantry. Again, at Sandhurst, the whole system is directed to the education of the infantry, and not of the cavalry, yet in war the cavalry are the eyes of the army; the safety of the whole body depends on the vigilance of the cavalry scouts, and the most cunningly laid schemes for surprising or attacking the enemy may be altogether defeated by the negligence or ignorance of a cavalry subaltern. What, then, can be more injurious to the service than this neglect of the cavalry? Yet the reason is not far to seek. An officer cannot live in the cavalry unless he has a private income of £450; that branch of the service, therefore, is avoided by the thoughtful cultivated youth who proposes to make the army his profession, and the cavalry is generally left to the wealthier and less devoted soldier, brave, no doubt, but having at heart interests more important to him than soldiering, though willing enough, it must be admitted, to fight and to die like an English gentleman.

Mediaeval Constantinople.

From "Constantinople." By W. Holden Hutton.

First and most prominently it was a great commercial centre. Subordinate to its commerce were its art, rich and wonderful though that was, its military power, even its popular and all-embracing religious ideas. Commerce influenced all these. It gathered together all the nations of the earth, and it inspired them with greed for its treasures. * * * All the traffic of Asia naturally came that way; the great caravans of Central Asia, the trade of Palestine, Asia Minor, Persia, even Egypt, journeyed naturally to the New Rome. So naturally was Constantinople the centre of trade that she acted as a sort of universal banker. Her coins were in use in India and in distant England. And the merchants who made their living in Constantinople had, like those of the Hansa in London, their own permanent settlements. You may see to-day the great khans or caravanserais where the merchants and pilgrims congregate, the walls strong to resist attack, the gates closed at nightfall, the arrangements for common meals and common ablutions; and as you pass by you see the dark figures clustering in the doorways, or sitting on the marble steps, in their picturesque colors, and with that strange far-away look on their faces that you learn to know so well in the land where there is never any more pressing need than repose, or any delight more sweet. The custom of these great common lodgings, and very often the buildings themselves, go back far into the Middle Ages. In the thirteenth century they held great colonies of merchants, strong for mutual combination and defense.

Greeting the New Year.

Father, we cannot see the way
That leads before us through the year,
But still we know that, day by day,
Our hearts shall recognize Thee near;
And so, before Thy Sacred Shrine,
We pray that each may well fulfill
The promptings of Thy grace divine
To do, and love, Thy Holy Will.

What dangers in our road can fail,
When Thee we have for Light and Guide?
Thine Eye, that watcheth over all,
Will care for us whate'er betide.
Thus, looking back, we have no fear,
Nor holds the future aught of dread;
We brush away each trembling tear,
And smile, with perfect trust, instead.
—AMADEUS in Donahoe's.

How William Is Kaiser.

From McClure's Magazine.

It is one of William's pleasures to show himself and his family frequently to his people, and the royal carriage may be seen at all hours on the streets of Berlin. The Kaiser's departure from the palace is always signaled by the fall of a flag, which serves as a notification to the people to prepare for his appearance among them. Nearly every afternoon he rides out, usually in uniform, with some of the staff officers, galloping down the Linden and into the Thiergarten, where he often spends hours in exercise. The Kaiser appears to better advantage on horseback than when standing, being tall of body. He has a great variety of uniforms, and one may see him many times and never see him clothed twice alike. This is one manifestation of his well-known love of display and pageantry. He loves the outward garb of royalty, the symbols of power, and he uses them without stint. Not long ago an American professor attended a reception in the royal palace, given by the Kaiser to an association of scientists, at which William appeared in the gorgeous robes of royalty, preceded by liveried chamberlains bearing the crown and insignia. It was a most impressive display, and when the professor came away he said to a friend:

"I am a republican to the backbone, but I believe that if monarchs are necessary they should be monarchs to the last bit of gold lace, just as William is Kaiser."

The next day this friend had an audience with the Kaiser, and in the course of the conversation told him what the American professor had said. The Kaiser laughed heartily.

"That is exactly what I believe," he said. "Dom Pedro of Brazil illustrated the folly of trying to be a republican on a throne."

To Grow the Rubber Plant.

From The Ladies' Home Journal.

Keep the rubber plant clean by giving it a soap bath. Tall plants can be made to branch by cutting off the tops. But young plants growing to the height of three or four feet in one straight stalk will generally be found more satisfactory, as they will have a larger, finer foliage than old branching plants ever have. When growth is taking place use a fertilizer, as its demands on the soil are great, and ordinary soils are not rich enough to supply all its needs. The secret of the successful culture of the rubber plant consists in always feeding it well at the times when a good deal of food is needed—and by this it will be understood that I refer to its periods of growth—and never allowing it to become rootbound. Keep the plant always going ahead, and avoid any treatment that will check its development if you would have a vigorous and healthy specimen. The rubber plant requires a much stronger light than the palm, therefore it is not as well adapted to room decoration in places some distance from the window as the palm is.

The Science of Kites.

Cromwell Childe in the Metropolitan Magazine.

The exploring of the upper air, with its relation to meteorology and health, is the underlying principle of all the Eddy efforts. Some of the interesting things he and his kites have done may be briefly set down here. He took the first mid-air photograph in the Western Hemisphere on May 30, 1895, thirty feet above the ground. On June 5th, 1896, he took the first double mid-air photograph, (with two cameras,) on May 30th, 1899, the first triple, (with three cameras.) It was on Feb. 4, 1891, that he accomplished one of the most important conquests of the air, the sending up of the first self-recording thermometer. This ascent was 600 feet, and scientific literature has since been enriched by some 3,000 records.

Aug. 4, 1894, at Blue Hill, the first thermograph mounted into the air to a distance of 1,500 feet. This may be recalled as one of the most vital occasions of Mr. Eddy's scientific life, because throughout the world this system of getting ink records in mid-air by mechanism has now been universally adopted in the observatories of Europe.

Then came the meteorgraph, practically a portable observatory sent into the air, making records on a revolving drum run by clockwork. It does its work aloft automatically and registers barometric pressure, temperature, moisture, and wind velocity. It is sent up in a shelter of wicker work to keep off the rays of the sun.

Of itself, it should be understood, a kite is of comparatively little scientific service, though one of Mr. Eddy's pet theories is that the "house" kite may be coated with tinfoil and serve as a collector of atmospheric electricity while in the air. A kite, however, is really an aerial vehicle. Its functions, according to this kite scientist's programme, are cameras, flags, signal lights, boxes containing signals, (a slow match releasing trap-doors of compartments at certain intervals, parachutes, etc., then dropping,) and scientific instruments.

English University Ideals.

From The National Review.

Some one—was it Swift?—once headed a chapter "On the Mountains of Holland." Then followed the chapter: "There Are No Mountains in Holland." Similarly, the scoffer, writing of undergraduate ideals, is tempted to put at the head of his discourse "On Undergraduate Ideals," "There Are No Undergraduate Ideals"—Finis.

It is certainly true that very few undergraduates have any very clearly defined ideals. The average young Oxonian is quite content to live on quietly at Oxford; with good, plain food, plenty of exercise, and sufficient reading to give him an appetite for amusing himself, he is perfectly happy. Oxford is such an absorbing place that if the undergraduate is fond of idealizing, he will probably connect his ideal with Alma Mater. He thinks there is no place in the world like Oxford, no life like 'Varsity life. He idealizes the Oxford Theatre, the Union, or, may be, one of the more or less exclusive undergraduate clubs, the Oxford cabs, the country around Oxford. The one thing that he grumbles at is the dinner in Hall; all else, except, perhaps, the Proctorial system, is perfection. If he has any thought beyond his 'Varsity career, he dreams of a snug little place under the Government, an office where the clerks—like the fountains in Trafalgar Square—play from 10 to 4. A charming little wife, perhaps, as well, who will permit smoking in the drawing room; but, as a rule, he is content to let his thoughts play freely over Oxford, and resigns himself, with what grace he may, to reading enough to get through the necessary examinations, spending his leisure joyously.

Let it not be thought that this is the ideal of all university men. It is, perhaps, the ideal of the average university man, in so far as he has an ideal at all. It should be remembered that a very large number of men come up solely to amuse themselves, and at the same time to get a little of that polish for which a university education is so justly famous.

The French Cage.

From The Gentleman's Magazine.

Dubourg's real name was Victor de la Cassagne, a journalist of Holland, who had taken the liberty of censuring the acts of the King of France, Louis XV. This criticism appeared in a public print at Frankfort. Although he was living beyond the borders of French territory, at Leyden, in Holland, he was not safe from the emissaries of Louis. The agents of the royal police succeeded in gaining possession of his person and conveying him to Mont St. Michel. There he was confined in the cage. Touched by his supplications, the Prior of the abbey consented to send a letter to his wife at Leyden, the mother of four children, acquainting her with the fact that he was alive, but entombed in the cells of Mont St. Michel. He was certainly entombed. Overcome by despair and by the sufferings and privations which he had endured, Dubourg died in the night of Aug. 27, 1746. In the morning his body was found almost devoured by a legion of rats. The State papers contain an account of the burial of "the body of a man named Dubourg, aged about thirty-six years, who died in a cage situated in the castle of the town, where he had been detained by the order of his Majesty." It is creditable to the humanity of Charles X. that when he visited the island-fortress as Count d'Artois in 1777, he ordered the cage to be destroyed. This command was not carried out, though the cage was no longer used as a place of confinement until Louis Philippe visited Mont St. Michel in 1837, when he caused it to be broken up before his eyes. The present cage is a restoration and exact representation of this ancient relic of barbaric tyranny.

Workmen's Comfort and Efficiency.

From The Engineering Magazine.

The introduction of steam power into the manufacturing world drove the little blacksmith's shop, shoe shop, the country dairy, and weaver's loom from the village into the city and opened many new problems. In those early days the small workman found it best to consider carefully the physical, moral, and mental welfare of his apprentice and his assistant. If it paid the small employer to do this, it will pay the great employer many fold more to have the same thoughtfulness for the hundreds or thousands in his employ. The difficulty will be to determine what is needed for this adjustment, and how to accomplish the arrangement even with the needs recognized. It would seem, however, that all will agree that among the essentials to economic production and a proper adjustment of relations are opportunity for thorough training of the workman and his co-operation in saving and in perfect manufacture.

Attention to personal comfort is another of the essentials in the recognition of the needs of employes. By this is meant thoughtfulness for comfort in work—proper arrangements for lunches and food—opportunities for rest, for baths, and for all those things which add strength and encourage contentment. It is not sufficient, however, to think simply of the physical wants. To accomplish one of the great aims of all such plans—that of securing intelligent operatives—it is necessary to afford mental training and mental growth.

Shadowy Sicily.

From "Studies by the Way," by the Right Hon. Sir Edward Fry.

Sicily is in some sense a land of shadows—a land where the dead are more present to the mind than the living—a land where one feels one's self to be a breathing man visiting, like Dante or like Hercules, the realms of phantoms. Everywhere you are haunted by the ghosts of great men or the memories of great events or of great and degraded nations. In the lemon groves of the promontory of Naxos one fancies the sickly Nicias whiling away the Winter, while his fleet rides in the bay outside the Greek harbor; at Syracuse we see a whole host of great shades—Nicias again, and Lamachus, slain near the Anapo; and the ghosts of thousands of Athenians perishing in the great harbor and on the cliffs of Epipolae, and last of all in the quarries, and so vanishing into thin air; and again by the shores of Ortygia we think of Plato and Pindar and Bacchylides and Simonides, the visitors at the court of the stately Hiero; and last, but not least, of St. Paul tarrying for a short space in the harbor, and perhaps preaching in some of the squares and streets of the old city. There is yet another figure who follows one's thoughts through Sicily—the naughty and mystical Empedocles—we remember him on the slopes of Etna, in his native Acragas, and again at Selinus. And even in bright and busy Palermo the dead are more to us than the living. It is of Hamilkar, or Marcellus, or Frederick the Second, and the brilliant Norman Kings that we think the most. So thoroughly in Sicily do the shadows of the past dominate the living present.

Terms in Falconry.

From Cassell's Magazine.

When under a year old the hawk is called a red hawk, owing to its plumage before its first molt being reddish; after its molt it is termed a haggard. The female peregrine is a falcon, while the male is a tiercel. The various parts of a hawk have their peculiar names. The legs from the thigh to the foot are the arms; the claws, the pounces; the wings, sails; the crop is the gorge; the upper bill, the beak; the lower, the clap; and the yellow portion between the beak and the eyes is the cere. When a hawk seizes its prey it is called binding; and the game or bird flown at is the quarry. The making of a hawk tame and gentle is termed reclaiming. Hawks when in training have a couple of bells fastened round the legs by two narrow leather thongs, called jesses; this is to discover them more audibly from their wild brethren while flying, and gives notice that they are trained birds. This has saved many a hawk's life from the gamekeeper's gun. A leathern thong, called a leash, is attached to the jesses when the falconer takes the hawk on his fist in the field, and the same leash is used to tie the bird on the screen or block in the hawkhouse. Always when the hawks are carried into the field for sport they are hooded, to prevent them from fidgeting about. These hoods are gaudy little helmets coming down over the eyes, and fastening with a strip of leather at the back of the head; usually they are colored, and decorated with a feather in the crown.

The Hilltop.

Yonder the hilltop rises; were you there
How opulent a prospect would unfoid—
Forest and field beneath the morn our-rolled,
And summits climbing skyward like a stair!
About you and above you lucent air;
Around your feet the gleaming kingcup gold,
And little vestal violets, snowy-stoled;
And near, in shadowy nooks, the maiden-hair.

In the adjacent boughs the boon of song—
Bird-harmonies with leafy interludes,
Guides to content and calm, sequestered woodland;
And far, so faint and far you cannot ken,
The oppressive city with its moiling throng,
The clamor, and the ceaseless surge of men!
—CLINTON SCOLLARD in The Critic.

What Does "H. B. C." Mean?

From The Cornhill.

A few years since, in the solitudes of the West, two European tourists were struck by the frequency with which they came across a certain mystic legend. The legend consisted of three letters. Eager to solve its meaning, they addressed a half-breed lounger at a small station on the Canadian Pacific Railway. "Tell us, my friend," said one of the tourists, "what those three letters mean. Wherever we have traveled in this country we seem to have seen it either on flags, or sewn on the garments of Indians, or painted on the bows of canoes, or stamped on bales and boxes. What does 'H. B. C.' mean?"

Returned the native, grimly: "That's the old company. Here Before Christ."

Might not the first missionary who, in 1818, reached York Factory contemplate this vast cure, and say, "Here before Christ! Bartering, building, warring, judging, slaying, ruling over and trafficking with a million souls—here before Christ!" Many a sermon might be—and perhaps has been—preached from that text.

In former times the factor's house was guarded by swivel guns—here and there one comes across them yet, but they are useless relics now. The factor to-day relies more upon his warrant as a Magistrate for the Dominion than upon his artillery. He is as much to-day a power with the neighboring Indians and half-breeds, (whose village is commonly not above a mile distant from the factory,) and in their eye the Dominion of Canada is still very small potatoes indeed when compared with the company.

The Way to be Popular.

"Ian Maclaren" in The Christian Endeavor World.

The depreciation of kindness in private life which is one of the features of our day is very largely due to the fashion of intellectualism; but yet human nature below the surface of crazes and phrases remains the same, and his fellows still judge a man by his heart rather than by his head. When the jury is selected, not from a coterie, but from the market place, the person who is kind will ever be preferred to the person who is clever; and "thoughful," to use a cant word of our day, is still less than warm-hearted. Walter Scott and Dickens will ever have a larger hold upon the people than Hardy and Meredith, not because their art is finer, but because their spirit is kindlier. An affectionate child is more welcome than those monsters of modern precocity who furnish their foolish parents with sayings for quotation, and who have worn out all healthy sensations at the age of ten. The girl who is honest, unaffected, considerate, good-natured, still receives the prize of respect and of love. No young man is better liked than he who has a genuine interest in the aged and in little children, in poor lads and in weak people.

Taps.

All down the road, with flag-draped load,
With muffled drum and low,
Now sound, now hush from sobbing horh
As the way winds to and fro,
Our soldiers march through sun and shade,
Glory and gloom of eve,
Far as they may with a friend on his way
To take his long last leave.

For toil and strife and roving life
He loved the soldier's lot;
Breathed full and deep where prairies sweep,
And the world is bounded not.
All unconfined as the sailing wind,
His soul launched forth to roam,
But it neared the strand of his childhood land,
And he longed for his Father's home.

Now lay his head on the cool soft bed,
That soothes as a mother's breast;
For the sod is the soldier's fitting couch,
And he loves to lie and rest
Where pale stars shine o'er the musing pine,
And the moon rides through the bougha,
While the bugle-call of "Taps" doth fall,
So soft he may not rouse:

Comrade, cheer!
Dost thou wake?
On thy sight
See yon bright
Morning break!
Night is here!
There the light!

Then home they march, 'neath the darkening arch,
For the sun hath left the sky;
The dogwood white with a ghostly light
Starts forth as they hasten by;
And the hemlock stands with skeleton hands,
Stretched up to the last red ray,
And the night descends, and its peace portends
The dawn of a brighter day.

The Eloquent Butter Crock.

From The National Magazine.

On one of the desks in the House was an old-fashioned gray crock. It was covered with a snow-white cloth, to which clung a moist layer of salt. It was the simple product—"mother's butter" from the farm. The jackknives were dipped into that crock and the butter reverently tasted as if it recalled happy memories of the old home. There was something in that butter which no chemical synthesis could imitate, and although it spoke no word—that sample of "mother's butter" was eloquent. Many of those Congressmen no doubt recalled the days when as barefoot boys they sat with the churn between their knees, trying to make the monotonous splash of the dasher drown the shrill whistle of a chum on his way to the old swimming hole. What an age it seemed before the little white flecks appeared on the dasher handle, showing that the butter had "come," and with it an honorable discharge. And then at night, those biscuit, with sorghum syrup and "mother's butter"—oh, what a charm in such memories!—those worn hands—that sweetest face, long since gone to rest. There was an eloquence in that jar of mother's butter—pure, genuine, wholesome, which even science, money, art, political craft, and Congressional oratory could not overcome.

The First Insect.

From The Spectator.

In the very oldest fossil-bearing rocks no insects are found. The very oldest fossil is a kind of polyp, making reefs of limestone, when as yet the insects had not appeared, and it "flourished" in Canada. The first insect known to have existed, a creature of such vast antiquity that it deserves all the respect which the parvenu man can summon and offer to it, was—a cockroach. The father of all black beetles, probably walked the earth in solitary magnificence when not only kitchens, but even kitchen middens, were undreamed of, possibly millions of years before Neolithic man had even a back cave to offer with the remains of last night's supper for the cockroach of the period to enjoy. His discovery established the fact that in the Silurian period there were insects, though, as the only piece of his remains found was a wing, there has been room for dispute as to the exact species. Mr. Goss in his preface to the second edition of his book notes, says that what is probably a still older insect has been found in the lower Silurian, in Sweden. This was not a cockroach, but apparently something worse. If the Latin name, Protocimex Silurius, be literally translated, it means the original Silurian bug.

Parsi-ism.

From The North American Review.

"Zoroastrianism, or Parsi-ism, is a monotheistic form of religion, not a polytheistic one, as some people would have it. There is but one God under different names, Mazda, Ahura, and Ahura Mazda. He manifested himself to a Bactrian or Median philosopher or reformer, Zoroaster, who is considered to have constituted a religious doctrine, set forth in the sacred books of Avesta. According to Herodotus, the Persians had no images of the gods, no temples, no altars, and they considered the use of them a sign of folly. The modern Parsis are of the same opinion as their forefathers, and repudiate any representation of the Deity.

"Zoroaster's speculative philosophy teaches us that the world is the work of two hostile principles, Spenta-Maynu, the good principle, and Angra-Maynu, the evil principle, both serving under one God—the first being the author of whatever is bright and shining, good and useful; the second of what is dark and noxious. The conflict will end in the triumph of the good principle."

Lord Kitchener.

Major Arthur Griffiths in The Fortnightly Review.

Public attention has been often drawn to the long absences of the Chief of the Staff from headquarters. Lord Kitchener seems to have been looked upon as a sort of odd man for service anywhere except in his proper place as the commander's right hand. The Chief of the Staff is to use a theatrical phrase, the General's understudy, and something more. He has to collect, digest, assimilate, and bring out all facts in concrete form for his leader's use; he is the centre and pivot on which the whole fighting machine turns; all reports from all branches are made to him, all ideas passing from the abstract into concrete orders are sent out by him; to lose his services even for a moment is to part with the machinist or engineer who handles the guiding governing wheel, and turns on the motive power to the whole concern. One of two explanations must be accepted: Either Lord Roberts has never realized the true uses of a Chief of the Staff, (which is absurd on the face of it,) or he has preferred to work for the most part without the one appointed for him. The result has surely been unsatisfactory.

Lord Kitchener has continually been charged with functions beyond his province to the neglect of those that particularly appertained to his post. He became responsible, therefore, for the costly and unnecessary attack on Cronje's laager at Paardeberg, one of the most regrettable incidents in the war; he was sent to put down the rebellion in the Prieska district; he ranged up and down the railway line performing the duties of General in command of the communications; it was he who carried relief to hard-pressed points; most recently he headed the pursuit of the evasive De Wet, duties for which a dozen other Generals were already at hand and immediately available. Meanwhile Lord Roberts has been his own Chief of the Staff, or the duties have fallen upon subordinates not properly called to the charge. Many reasons, based, for the most part, on mere gossip, have been offered for the strange separation between commander and principal assistant; want of sympathy deepening into real differences, jealousy, dissatisfaction, what not. We may state the effect without presuming to hint at the cause. This effect has been seen in the lack of that central co-ordinating authority so greatly needed in working the complex operations against the enemy's admirable guerrilla tactics. It could never have been possible for the supreme commander to hold all the threads or direct the whole of the intricate movements over an extensive area requiring the greatest nicety of arrangement; that was the work of the Chief of the Staff, and he was often hundreds of miles away.

Danger in the English Salt Country.

From Chambers's Journal.

Periodically one hears of this or that subsidence in Northwich or Winsford, chief centres of the salt industry in England, and thinks little about it. The residents in the neighborhood itself seem so philosophic that the stranger may be forgiven if he also just shrugs his shoulders and merely exclaims, "What a pity!" By most remarkable luck, no one seems to lose his life in these accidents. There are, to be sure, a number of stock authentic tales of narrow escapes. A brewer's man, with a wain full of beer barrels, had left the cart when of a sudden down it went, horses, beer barrels, and all, and nothing remained but a hole with the earth still tumbling in upon the vanished load. A man was fishing for pike in a pool near Northwich, when he felt the banks sliding under him. He hurried upward, and then before his eyes whole trees and thousands of tons of earth moved rapidly down into the pool and disappeared, leaving the pool itself much extended. A peasant brought a cow into the town to sell, and lo! a hungry rift broke in the very streetway under his nose, between him and his cow. And so forth. There are scores of less sensational recorded incidents; and the number of houses, churches, and manufactories that have been ruined by subsidence must now be well over a thousand. But the only man known to have been thus lost underneath seems to have been an unfortunate named Littler, who, while mining in the salt rock, had to run with others before the danger of a slide, but returned for his coat, and has never been seen since. Of this event there can be no doubt. One of the poor fellow's comrades told me the tale, pointing out the marly cliff above the mere as the exact upper site of his tomb.

"All the News That's Fit to Print"

IT LEADS THEM ALL SIX DAYS IN THE WEEK

The paid advertising totals of New York City morning newspapers during the month of December, 1900 (Sundays omitted), were as follows:

1—THE NEW YORK TIMES	382,359	agate lines
2—	321,789	" "
3—	288,857	" "
4—	247,194	" "
5—	204,521	" "
6—	183,441	" "
7—	151,147	" "

DURING THE YEAR 1900

The NEW YORK TIMES

Carried 3,978,620 lines of advertising, which was a gain of 599,870 lines over the year 1899, equaling 2,039 columns gain for the year.

It should be remembered that THE NEW YORK TIMES, restricted by its motto, "All the News That's Fit to Print," excludes from its columns many advertisers who use large space in other newspapers.

The New York Times.

CIRCULATION SUPREMACY

There are twenty-five newspapers published in New York City, each claiming a distinctive and special constituency. Many of them give more than full value to advertisers.

Without fear of successful contradiction, The New York Times makes the assertions:

First, That the sales of The New York Times in New York City exceed those of any other morning or evening newspaper---the World and Journal excepted.

Second, That The New York Times will introduce an advertiser into more first-class homes and will reach more of the class that demands the best wares than any other New York newspaper, morning or evening, without any exception.

Third, Its supremacy in dry goods advertising, in financial advertising, and in book advertising shows that it reaches an army of the best buyers.

This is attested by the fact that The New York Times is a preferred advertising medium with the largest and most successful advertisers in New York City.

ILLINOIS TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK, Chicago, Trustee.

A LETTER OF T. P. SHONTS, ESQ., PRESIDENT OF THE COMPANY, STATES IN PART AS FOLLOWS:

The Indiana, Illinois and Iowa Railroad Co. now owns and operates about 200 miles of road, extending from South Bend, Ind., to a connection with the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad at a point near Illinois Valley and Northern Junction, from which place this Company has trackage rights over the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy to Clinton, Iowa. It also operates under lease the St. Joseph, South Bend and Southern Railroad Co., comprising 39 miles, extending from South Bend to St. Joseph, Mich., where connection is made with the Pere Marquette, making in all 239 miles under operation, with additional trackage rights of 60 miles over the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy. The property of this Company forms a connecting link between the following roads centring in the City of Chicago, thus constituting a short and convenient line for the interchange of traffic.

Eastern Connections:	Southern and Western Connections:
Michigan Central,	Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisville,
Lake Shore and Michigan Southern,	Chicago and Indiana Coal Road,
Wabash,	Illinois Central,
Grand Trunk,	Chicago and Eastern Illinois,
Lake Erie and Western,	Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis,
Baltimore and Ohio,	Wabash,
Pittsburg, Ft. Wayne and Chicago,	Chicago and Alton,
New York, Chicago and St. Louis,	Chicago, Burlington and Quincy,
Erie,	Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé,
Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis.	Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific.

The earnings of this Company for the years ending June 30th have been as follows:

	1899.	1900.
Gross Earnings	$902,305	$1,220,150
Net Earnings	$340,210	$468,086
Other Income	1,565	11,753
Total Income	$341,775	$479,830
Taxes and Rentals	51,203	54,750
Applicable to Interest	$290,572	$425,089

The net earnings for four months to October 31, 1900, show an increase of $47,952, or on the basis of about $150,000 net increase for the year. . . . and at the present rate of increase, the Company should show a net profit applicable to interest for the year ending June 30, 1901, of $575,000. The entire interest charges being interest on the bonds you have purchased, will amount to $180,000 per annum.

The Indiana, Illinois and Iowa is now paying regular dividends of 4 per cent. per annum upon its entire capital stock of $5,000,000.

The Company will have in its treasury on February 1st a working capital of approximately $400,000 in cash. The issue is limited to $12,000,000, of which $4,500,000 are now issued and the remainder reserved to be issued only to acquire additional property or for extensions or for improvements under most rigid restrictions in the mortgage. The bonds are secured by a first and only lien upon the entire property of the Company now owned or hereafter acquired. They are dated July 1, 1900, and mature July 1, 1950, principal and interest at 4 per cent. payable in gold, and are not subject to call before maturity.

WE OFFER FOR SUBSCRIPTION THE ABOVE DESCRIBED BONDS AT 97½ AND ACCRUED INTEREST.

INTERIM CERTIFICATES OF THE ILLINOIS TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK, EXCHANGEABLE FOR DEFINITIVE BONDS WHEN READY, WILL BE DELIVERABLE AT OUR OFFICE ON OR ABOUT FEBRUARY 1ST.

ACQUIRE ROCHESTER COMPANY.

Syndicate to Work the Citizens' Light and Power Plant.

ROCHESTER, Jan. 12.—Announcement is made to-day that a strong syndicate has purchased all the stock of the Citizens' Light and Power Company, which plant was recently partially destroyed by fire, and proposes to extend the business locally at once.

A week ago it was learned that the Rochester Gas and Electric Company had purchased the Hinds Flour Mill property, abutting that owned by the Citizens' Company, both of which have valuable water-power rights. The syndicate which has purchased the Citizens' Company is made up of the following: Anthony N. Brady of Albany and New York, William K. Archbold, and Paul K. T. Brady of Syracuse, A. M. Young of New York, and the Westinghouse Company of Pittsburg. The Archbold-Brady Company of Syracuse has the work of reconstructing the burned-out plant.

Exchange Real Estate Credit and Audit Com-

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION

At no time since current market improvement began has there been so much substantial "argument" in favor of that improvement as appears in the developments of the past week. At times the security market has been relatively quiet, though in the early part of the week new high records in Stock Exchange history were made for volume of trading. Evident on the big days and the lesser days alike, however, has been the fact that the arts of professional manipulation are not the market's chief reliance.

Forceful attacks were made upon quotations over and over again, and on one day rather sharp recessions were induced; but aside from the disclosure that the smaller traders of the Stock Exchange continue bearish and that the short interest is still extensive, nothing significant resulted; and, in so far as apparent weakness for a time appeared it even more quickly disappeared—net changes in the Stock Exchange list for the week (for bonds as well as for stocks) being gains.

Two important railway corporations have during the week increased their dividends. Both are important in the broadest sense—representing vast vested capital and having the highest character of control. The Louisville and Nashville and the Delaware and Hudson, in making increased disbursements to shareholders, certify satisfactory business conditions. No suspicion of security market influence can attach in either quarter. The highest type of man active in the American financial world is personified in the controlling interests directing those properties. Mr. Belmont, Mr. Olyphant, and their associates make no bargains with speculation; policies which they direct are straightforward and to be depended upon for conservatism. Thus, when on one day the Louisville and Nashville Directors vote a material addition to their dividend disbursement, and on the next day the Delaware and Hudson adds even more largely to its rate, more consequence attaches than if a score of differently conducted corporations had made double payments.

Such evidence of the certainty of good times cannot fail to count upon public sentiment—and on that account the security market must have invigoration. Louisville and Nashville and Delaware and Hudson stocks have advanced, the latter jumping fourteen points in a single day; but the direct influence upon these stocks themselves is not, however, what will in the end be found most important from the security market standpoint—for the whole list is broadened and bettered by the development.

In Louisville and Nashville's action is shown how actual is prosperity in the South, and not Louisville alone is benefited. The Southern Railway on the East and the Illinois Central in the Mississippi Valley share notably in the improvement, and there are indications that even so new a property as the Seaboard Air Line system may on this strong tide float to prosperity.

As in Louisville and Nashville, a geographical section's prosperity is reflected, the Delaware and Hudson incident reflects a great staple trade's improvement. Delaware and Hudson is representative in the best sense of the anthracite coal industry, and that better dividends are feasible is because better trade conditions rule and larger net profits are produced. But so prudent is Delaware and Hudson management it can be counted upon as sure that no transient or problematical betterment is relied upon. Not merely are current returns better, but prospects warrant confidence.

And the man must be blind who cannot see, in so far as the anthracite coal trade is concerned, that a complete revolution is taking place—has practically already taken place. What Wall Street loosely calls a "coal trust" is to all intents and purposes completely established. Hurtful competition disappears, economies on a scale unprecedented in corporation history are to be made effective, and net results can easily be figured on a millionaire scale. Concentration of ownership—or unanimity in control, at least—is no longer a dream; J. P. Morgan and A. J. Cassatt make it actual.

Bugaboos of excessive charge for coal need not be apprehended; the financiers of the anthracite coal trade are too big and too astute to depend for profit upon clumsy devices of sudden levies on the public. The price of coal may advance somewhat—perhaps as much as an average of 50 cents per ton—but the assurance from official headquarters is that what most is aimed at is a stable, certain market, rather than one of much higher prices.

The immediate effort will be to eradicate those sapping elements in the trade which, through rebates, loaded invoices, and other hypocrisies, have been handicapping the coal producing and coal carrying industry of the country ever since its capitalization. The sales agent is to go—the sales agent being to the coal trade the most costly of all luxuries. By the elimination of this middleman element a net saving of over $10,000,000 a year is made at once—and some coal trade authorities put the figures as high as a net charge (direct and indirect) of a dollar a ton, which is several times ten millions. What figures like these indicate can be estimated when it is understood that a net gain of merely 25 cents per ton on its coal output will enable the Reading Railroad Company to show 5 per cent. dividends on its common capital stock—and the net gain for Reading and the other great coal producing and carrying companies (thanks to extraordinary economies) will be not 25 cents per ton, but several times 25 cents per ton.

In the security market's further improvement the coal stocks are bound to have prominence, if not leadership.

Money market conditions are wholly agreeable—except to lenders who are

YESTERDAY'S MARKET.

The violent rise in Manhattan and the incidental advances in the other local railway shares overshadowed all things else in the stock market yesterday. Even the coal stocks, which on the day previous were so strong and buoyant, were comparatively neglected after the first half hour, the only exceptions being the Readings and Ontario and Western, which were bought steadily all day by the same banking interests who have been conspicuous as purchasers of the securities for some time. In spite of all denials to the contrary, Wall Street is convinced that other important developments in the coal trade situation affecting chiefly these two systems are pending—a belief that grows stronger with the continued buying of the stocks by Morgan and Hill interests.

The Vanderbilt stocks under the leadership of Three C's were stronger and more active than for some days, and there is expectation that at the Nickel Plate meeting this week plans disclosed in relation to that property will be beneficial effect on others of the Vanderbilt group.

The Industrials continued to be neglected, and the break in Steel and Wire toward the close of the day did not improve sentiment in that respect.

The Grangers and the Southwestern railway shares were all well supported.

MANHATTAN'S BIG RISE.

The feature of the stock market yesterday was the phenomenal rise in Manhattan, that stock jumping up sharply nearly 10 points on transactions involving some 110,000 shares, though later losing nearly 3 points of the gain. The opening was not in the least suggestive of the later sustained developments, being only a few hundred shares at 117½. About 10:30 o'clock, however, the stock began to show decided strength, and continued to rise steadily until shortly after 11, when it suddenly shot up from 121, where it had risen, to 126½ on not very large transactions, little stock being met with on the way up. At the high figure profit taking appeared, and the price broke rather sharply, closing at 121¾, a net gain nevertheless of 4¾ points.

To explain the rise, it was insisted that Metropolitan is to lease Manhattan, guaranteeing 6 per cent. dividends. This story has been in the Street for a week past, but it cannot be confirmed—is, in fact, denied.

Neither Edwin Gould nor George Gould was at his office yesterday, but an officer of the company who was seen said that, while he was unwilling to have his name coupled with the denial, he could say with positiveness that there is absolutely no truth in any statement that the Goulds had sold their Manhattan holdings, or that the road had been sold or leased.

Incidentally, the other local railway shares were strong, Metropolitan selling up at one time to 172¾ and closing at 170¾, a net gain of 2¾, while Brooklyn Rapid Transit at one time sold up to 87¾ and closed at 86¾, a net gain of 2¼.

THE BANK STATEMENT.

The bank statement issued yesterday shortly before the close of business more than came up to favorable expectations, the gain in cash of over $11,000,000 being one of the largest gains in any single week reported in the history of the Clearing House, and the largest at any time in the last three years. The exact figures were: Legal tenders increased $3,514,800, specie increased $8,153,700, loans increased $4,042,800, deposits increased $14,388,100, and surplus reserves—notwithstanding the extra amount necessary—increased no less than $8,051,975. The figures show clearly that the interior shipments of money are on a larger scale even than had been expected.

***

Previous to the publication of the statement the stock market had been strong, under the leadership of the coalers and the local railway shares. Profit taking toward the close, however, sent some of the prices off from the high figures, but generally net gains were the order of the day.

NEW CLEARING HOUSE RECORD.

The Clearing House established a new record last week in the aggregate of its exchanges, the total being reported yesterday as $1,889,927,716.54, $300,000,000 over any previous figures. The balances were $87,608,208.81, an excess of $5,000,000 over figures previously reported.

The highest single day's record was week before last, the total reaching in round numbers $427,000,000.

CONFIDENCE IN THE MARKET

Views of Members of Representative Banking Houses.

Wall Street's confidence in the future of the stock market grows, as witness the following expressions of opinion of members of representative banking houses:

W. ALLSTON FLAGG of Post & Flagg—There is no question as to the future of the market. Because of the very rapid pace of the past few weeks, many brokers have been expecting a big reaction, but none has come, and so far as I can see, there is no indication of any, unless some really bad news should develop, coming, as it were, like a bolt from the blue. For my own part, I can't see where any unfavorable news is coming from. The general business situation, the position of the railroads, the financial outlook—all are good. Even if we send some gold abroad, that will make no difference, as we have plenty to spare. We are now able not only to do our own financing, but, if needs be, to finance other countries. Then, too, we now hold most of our own securities, where a few years ago many were held abroad. Take St. Paul, for instance. Not long ago a majority of it was held in London; now, Chicago alone holds more than London.

The market certainly looks as if it were going higher. The immeasurable improvement in the coal situation is but one of the signs, one of the reasons, for higher prices.

***

C. C. WEST of Charles Head & Co.—The underlying market conditions are as good as any we have had in years. Ultimately we are bound to see much higher prices, due to the harmony of interests in the railroad field, the maintenance of rates, and the general prosperity of the country. Of course the market has had an enormous advance, but still it can go higher because of the sound conditions behind. Certain speculators may have uncertainty on the subject, but Messrs. Morgan, Rockefeller, and Hill, who are in the market for keeps, are not selling their stocks. And what they do others can safely follow, always being careful, however, not to overtrade.

***

A. A. HAUSMAN—I see no reason to change my opinion that the market is on a sounder and more substantial basis than ever it has been in the history of Wall Street, and that prices are bound to go much higher. The recent reaction has been a good thing, for no reason that it has shaken out weak holders, and thereby removed an element of danger. The strongest financial interests in the country are back of the market, and the deals and great projects that are being carried through will easily warrant the higher values that are bound to come. The industrials, too, will have their day.

***

JOHN G. O'KEEFFE of H. L. Horton & Co.—The advance in the general market is based on a solid foundation, viz., unprecedented business activity and prospects of its long continuance. Investors are taking all the high-priced stocks off the market, and this demand is now extending into the moderate-priced dividend payers, such as Union Pacific, Northern Pacific, &c. The situation is controlled by the strongest financial interests, and such reactions as we will have will be only those desired and permitted by these interests. With cheap money and no cloud on the financial horizon the bull market should continue for months. We think the railroads far preferable to the industrials. Big combinations among the former may confidently be expected.

***

RICHARD SUTRO of Sutro Brothers & Co.—I don't think the market has commenced to discount the general future. Of course some things are up quite a little, but on the whole, considering the conditions and the prospects, many stocks are still very cheap. Then, too, if increased dividends should come to be the rule—something on which the market has not figured—it is a very safe proposition to say that prices will go up practically all around. The medium-priced shares will shortly come more into favor.

***

JEFFERSON SELIGMAN—I think prices are going higher. The whole country is booming, and we are in for a period of unexampled good times. You cannot discount such prosperity in a week or a month, and for that reason higher market values are bound to follow.

***

F. A. COHN of

railroad properties which for many years have paid no dividends will within a year distribute dividends to their shareholders. The rumored sale by the Northern Pacific Company of 1,500,000 acres of land at $6 per acre has not been confirmed as yet, but this news opens up possibilities very provoking to the short interests in the stock.

***

ALBERT STIEGLITZ of Halle & Stieglitz—There is the biggest and the best sort of buying in the market, and I look to see much better prices. All the conditions are favorable and the combinations now going on will have far-reaching effect. The outlook could not be more promising.

***

DAVID A. BOODY of Boody & McLellan—The market is in a most sense puzzling, but it looks as if it should and will go higher. There is no telling how far these new combinations may go and what great good they may work, but that they will have beneficial influence goes without saying. Of course it will be well not to overspeculate, for the market has had a substantial rise. However, good stocks are still good.

***

CHARLES COUNSELMAN of Counselman & Day—I don't know anything about these reported combinations in the Northwestern roads, but I do know about the actual condition of the railroads themselves. The fact is that the roads have been putting themselves in the best physical condition for some time, and that therefore there will be less expenditure in the future for physical development. These expenditures hereafter will probably for the most part be confined to the procurement of equipment which will be made necessary by reason of the increased and increasing business of the roads. The truth is that few people appreciate how great that increase already is. As a matter of fact, the railroads running East are begging for cars to move their grain, much of their heretofore available equipment being in use to handle the increased general business. As a result of all this, I believe that the railroads will accumulate so much money that they must increase their dividends or accumulate such surpluses as will reflect themselves in higher prices for the stocks. They will be a good deal like bank stocks that sell higher than their dividend payments would justify because buyers take into consideration the surplus, the position of the banks, and the prospects. One very beneficial effect on the railroads of community of ownership is that it will eliminate rate-cutting—indeed, is having that effect now. It is hard to appreciate how many millions will be saved by the railroads if they will only continue to pursue this policy. I think we will all have to revise our notions of what we consider the normal value of railroad stocks—in other words that the normal value will be on a considerably higher level.

***

HAVEN & STOUT—To us the market looks decidedly healthy. Throughout the week there has been a notably large absorption of securities for investment, both when the market was advancing and when prices receded. The latter circumstance apparently tended to create an enlargement of the public buying demand. From a technical standpoint, speculation is very healthy in its character. It is pointed out that investment demands, and the fact that values are based upon dividend realities and probabilities, constitute the great difference between the present market and the "booms" of the past, in which, as was the case in 1890, the Street and the public simply accepted every exaggerated or misleading report about railroad earnings or prospects which the manipulative specialists of that day chose to bring out. The feeling remains that on concessions stocks which have already risen can be bought with safety for still higher prices, while others which thus far have not participated in the advances will be taken up and furnish excellent material for bullish operations.

***

HENRY CLEWS—The basis of the speculative movement has been steadily broadening. It began with the new set of conditions introduced by the election, which amounted to a revival of National confidence unequaled since the close of the civil war. The course of the market produced an impression that not only the speculative constituencies of our own centres, but also those of Europe had become deeply convinced of the vast financial progress to which the country has attained. Then important financiers who had long been awaiting an opportunity to consummate large corporate consolidations and undertakings became convinced that the occasion had arrived, and the launching of their plans has introduced a new phase in the general excitement, reviving confidence among speculative holders and stimulating the enthusiasm of the outside contingent.

***

HAMBLETON & CO. of Baltimore—The improvement in values more recently has been, as is well known, the result of the partial maturing and carrying out of vast schemes of railroad combinations, consolidations, alliances, leases, purchases of control—meaning, in a word, the concentration of ownership, the inauguration of capable and economical administration, promising better service to the public and larger returns to investors. These plans have been long in contemplation and in getting under way, and it will require still more time to mature and finally perfect them. They are the necessary outcome of the conditions largely produced by lack of proper regulation and sensible legislation to permit railroads to pool their earnings or otherwise combine for their own protection. The application of the community of ownership principle assures stability of rates and prevents ruinous competition.

WHAT GOLD EXPORTS MEAN.

According to all authority in Wall Street, exports of gold will almost certainly be made to England this week, though in what amount is not yet known. Lazard Frères and the National City Bank are reported as among the likely shippers, but nothing definite can be determined until to-morrow or next day.

The uncertainty of exports does not appear to cause the least concern. Last week the banks increased their cash holdings by some $11,000,000, and, in the words of a President of one of the National banks, "money threatens to be a drug on the market unless we get rid of some of it." Herewith are presented some views on the subject:

***

WARNER VAN NORDEN, President of the National Bank of North America—We have almost too much money now, and it will be a good thing if we do export some gold. It will help the foreign markets, and in a reflex way help us. So far as having any effect on rates here, however, that is out of the question. We can easily spare gold, the return flow of money from the interior at this time being very heavy. Rates will remain easy.

***

A. BARTON HEPBURN, Vice President of the Chase National Bank—With our immense credit balances abroad, any shipments of gold now will be abnormal and will be made merely because money is dearer abroad than it is here. However, we can easily spare it, for there is money in abundance here. Shipments will have no appreciable effect on local rates unless, indeed, they are enormous, and then they will automatically check themselves.

***

M. L. MUHLEMAN, Deputy Assistant United States Treasurer—It seems to me that exports would help rather than hurt, for the reason that it would relieve the foreign markets and remove a source of worriment and anxiety in that quarter. There is plenty of money in this country to spare, and just now, when the inflow from the interior is so enormous, it would seem both natural and reasonable to send out gold.

***

C. SCHUMACHER & CO.—The situation in London is probably more precarious than most people think, and we do not see how this situation can be relieved otherwise than by the replenishment of the Bank of England's stock of gold. This gold must come from here, and the probabilities are that $15,000,000 or $20,000,000 will have to be shipped from here, commencing this coming week. The supply of commercial bills shows a further falling off, and the stocks of exchange that our banks and bankers here and all through this country had been accumulating in December, seem to be pretty well exhausted. The demand came mostly from those of our banks and bankers and arbitrage houses through whom most of the stocks and bonds were returned which Europe sold here during the week, said to amount to several hundred thousand shares and many millions of bonds.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call, 3 per cent.

Time money, 4 per cent. for thirty days, 4@4½ per cent. for longer periods. Mercantile paper, 4½@4¾ per cent. for sixty to ninety days' indorsements, 4¾@5 per cent. for choice four to six months' single names, and 5@6 per cent. for others.

Clearing House statement: Exchanges, $320,951,611; balances, $18,230,328; Sub-Treasury debit balance, $1,062,620.

Money on call in London, 2½@3 per cent. Rate of discount in the open market, 4⅛@4 3-16 per cent. for short and 4⅛@4¼ per cent. for three months' bills.

Foreign exchange was firm. Nominal rates were $4.84 for sixty days and $4.88 for demand. Rates for actual business closed as follows: Sixty days, $4.83¾; demand, $4.87@$4.87⅛; cables, $4.88; commercial bills, $4.82¾@$4.83.

Continental exchange was quoted as follows: Francs, 5.18¾@5.18⅛ less 1-16 and 5.15⅝; reichsmarks, 94 9-16 and 95 3-16, and guilders, 40⅛ and 40⅜.

Exchange on New York at domestic centres: Chicago—10c premium. Boston—5c premium. New Orleans—Commercial, 25c discount; bank, par. San Francisco—Sight, 15c premium; telegraphic, 17½c premium. Charleston—Buying, par; selling, 1-10c premium. Savannah—Buying, ⅛c discount; selling, par. Cincinnati—Between banks, 14½@15c premium; over the counter, 50c premium.

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, Jan. 12.—The demand for money is better and hardening, owing to the Bank of England having taken £1M considerable sums, in expectation of regaining control next week. This has firmed discounts.

Business on the Stock Exchange was dull to-day, being overshadowed by the position of West Australians and an indisposition to deal, pending the general carry-over. Americans were the most active. They opened above parity, and further hardened. St. Paul and Ontario were the features. Grand Trunks were firm. Mines were weak. Owing to the difficulties connected with the carry-over, in many cases rates were very stiff. In some instances facilities for continuing bargains were withdrawn. Operators generally were very nervous and disorganized, and some failures are expected, but it is a question whether they will be of any importance.

The general view is that there will be no further disaster, compared with the last settlement, but that the immediate future depends greatly on what arrangement can be made with the creditors of the London and Globe Finance Corporation.

The effect of the Bank rate and the advancing of discounts was short-lived. The struggle of the last few days has often been to prevent the rate falling below 4. Continental houses have been keen competitors for bills, and bought them at 3 15-16 in midweek, apparently in advance of the Bank rate. This has done mischief instead of good.

Reviewing the bank return, in connection with the Treasury position, The Investors' Review expresses the hope that the worst of the Government induced credit cheapness is now over and that the Bank holds some millions of short-dated bills, the majority falling due during the current month. It is also understood to be borrowing on its stock, in order to reduce the floating supply. Hopes are entertained that thereby money will gradually become dearer and enable it to put up the discount rate to 4½.

Ordinarily, revenue payments would aid powerfully; but this year it cannot depend on them, because the war demands of the Treasury sweep off the money almost as fast as it comes in. The Government balances are now under seven millions. One competitor in the bill market which tends to keep down rates is Paris. Having a surplus of loanable capital, owing to the stagnation of enterprise and speculation, it finds London the most profitable market. To employ it means a 5 per cent. bank rate and somewhat elevated exchanges, but it does not point to insuring shipments of gold Londonward.

The Statist considers that if the value of money in London is maintained two or three millions of New York gold will probably come.

This strengthening of the Bank of England's position, the fall in consols and fifteen British railroad stocks, the floating of Government loans below par, and the subscription in America of half of one of the ten-million issues have caused some English financial observers and unfriendly foreign critics to think England is much less rich than hitherto supposed, and that the resources of the London bankers have been enormously exaggerated.

The Statist, taking up these reflections, traces the depression in consols to the Government's reduced investments and savings bank deposits, which had averaged £17,000,000 yearly, and to the sales by large investors to procure cash for immense expansion of trade. The fall in railroads is attributed to the rises in the price of coal, wages, and materials, while the Government is borrowing in England simply to obtain gold for temporary purposes.

Consols for money, 96 15-16; consols for the account, 97 1-16; Atchison, 47¼; Canadian Pacific, 93¾; St. Paul, 158½; Illinois Central, 136½; Louisville, 92¼; Union Pacific preferred, 86½; New York Central, 150; Erie, 29¾; Pennsylvania, 75¾; Reading, 17¾; Erie first preferred, 67¾; Northern Pacific preferred, 80½; Grand Trunk, 7⅞; Anaconda, 9⅝; Rand Mines, 3⅜.

Bar silver steady at 29¼; money, 2½@3 per cent.; rate of discount in the open market for short bills, 4@4¼ per cent., and for three months' bills, 4 1-16@4⅛ per cent.

Spanish fives, 70½.

The amount of bullion taken into the Bank of England on balance to-day was £20,000.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Buenos Ayres, 131.10; Madrid, 84.55; Lisbon, 38.50; Rome, 5.50.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, Jan. 12.—Prices opened undecided on the Bourse to-day, and generally more favorable, on satisfactory London advices regarding the mining settlement. Berlin advices were also more encouraging. But transactions were restricted. Rio Tintos made a good recovery.

Three per cent. rentes, 101f 80c for the account. Exchange on London, 25f 11c for checks. Spanish fours closed at 71.27½.

BERLIN, Jan. 12.—Internationals were quiet on the Boerse to-day. Home funds were in good demand, especially 3½s. Americans were firm. Canadian Pacifics were calm. Locals were maintained.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 46 pfennigs for checks. Discount rates: Short bills, 3 per cent.; three months' bills, 3½ per cent.

IMPORTS FOR THE WEEK.

The imports of dry goods and general merchandise for the week were valued at $11,453,846. The imports of specie amounted to $111,795, and the exports of specie to $1,026,335.

Electric Light Company's Dividend.

BOSTON, Jan. 12.—The Directors of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company have declared a regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent., and an extra dividend of 1 per cent., payable Feb. 1. The previous quarterly dividend was 2 per cent. and 1 per cent. extra.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Outside stocks continued their regular course yesterday, and without any marked increase in activity. The Distilling stocks were fairly active, but most other issues showed very small totals. In parts of the list some improvement in prices appeared, but advances of any consequence were quite exceptional, and declines were as numerous as net gains.

***

DISTILLING OF AMERICA preferred remained strong and enjoyed a further advance of over a point. On dealings in about 1,500 shares, nearly all of which was taken by a single house, the stock sold as high as 31⅞. Subsequently, however, the price declined fractionally, and at the close there was shown a net gain of only three-quarters of a point. The common stock was much less active and showed only a slight net gain. There was some inquiry yesterday for a quotation for the rights which attach to the Distilling stocks to subscribe to the recently announced issue of collateral bonds, but no market for these rights was made.

***

CRUCIBLE STEEL was the strongest of the steel stocks, but trading in it was limited to 300 shares. At one time 23 was bid for a thousand shares of the stock. At the close it was offered at 23, the net gain for the day being half a point. Application has been made to list the Crucible Steel stocks, and it is expected that they will be put on the board in about ten days.

***

UNITED RAILWAYS OF ST. LOUIS 4s, continuing their upward course, advanced to 88½. At about this figure there was demand for about $75,000 of the bonds, but trading in them was relatively small. The stocks showed practically no change, the preferred closing at 68½ bid and St. Louis Transit at 18⅝ bid.

***

STANDARD OIL was advanced 4 points, but dropped back 2, and closed with a net gain of 2 points, at 804 bid. Trading in the stock amounted to something less than 100 shares.

***

SHEET STEEL preferred was traded in to the extent of 300 or 400 shares between 76 and 76¼.

***

AMERICAN BRIDGE common was fairly active, and made a slight net gain for the day. It closed at 43¾ bid. The preferred stock ended the day unchanged.

***

CONSOLIDATED EQUIPMENT sold down to 11½ and closed at 11⅝ bid, a net loss of an eighth of a point. The transactions amounted to only a few hundred shares.

***

BRITISH COLUMBIA COPPER sold from 22⅝ down to 22½, and closed at the latter figure.

BIG COAL ORDER FROM CANADA.

Philadelphia Firm Secures a Contract for 100,000 Tons.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 12.—What is believed to be the largest contract for coal ever awarded to an American firm by the Canadian Government has been given to a firm in this city. This order was obtained by the local bidders, despite the fact that the Sydney (Cape Breton) mines are many miles nearer than those of Pennsylvania. The contract calls for the delivery by April 1 next of 100,000 tons of the Pennsylvania bituminous product at St. John, N. B.; Halifax, N. C.; St. John's, N. F., and St. Pierre, Miquelon Island.

The steamships Peter Jebsen, Origen, Evelyn, and Asuncion have been chartered to carry the coal to the above ports. The pioneer of the fleet, the Norwegian steamship Peter Jebsen, sailed to-day for St. John, N. B., with 5,600 tons of the contract.

Scholarships Awarded at Yale.

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 12.—The award of the Berkeley Scholarship at Yale to Albert William Van Buren, 1900, of Lynn, Mass., was announced to-day. The scholarship is the oldest awarded in Yale, having been founded in 1733 by the Rev. George Berkeley, Dean of Derry, afterward Bishop of Clyne, in Ireland. It amounts to about $70 annually, and is awarded to that student of the class about to be graduated who passes the best examination in the Pauline Epistles and certain other Greek texts. The Alfred Barnes Palmer Scholarship, founded in 1892 by the Rev. Dr. Charles Ray Palmer, in memory of his son, has been awarded to Henry Strong Huntington, Jr., of Milton, Mass., of the freshman class. The scholarship amounts to the interest on $5,000, and is awarded to a student of high rank in scholarship and unexceptionable character.

In Memory of Adjt. Gen. Stryker.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 12.—Instead of its annual banquet the Society of the Cincinnati will hold memorial services in this city on Washington's Birthday in honor of Adjt. Gen. Stryker. A portrait of the Adjutant General is being painted by Maynard of New York, and it is the intention to present it to the State on that occasion. It is to be a gift from the officers of the National Guard of New Jersey; the committee having the matter in charge consisting of the Governor, Adjt. Gen. Oliphant, and Quartermaster General Donnelly.

COTTON.—The market of yesterday was quite in keeping with the general run of things all the past week. Business was tardy and of a settlement character, while fluctuations were confined to a beggarly 4 points. At no time did longs or shorts strive to gain the supremacy, and at no time was trade active to a degree worthy of the name. Everybody was hedging and sparring for time and for some further knowledge on the crop subject. The market opened steady, with prices unchanged to 3 points higher, and closed quiet, with prices unchanged to 3 points higher, thus leaving wavering prospective investors as much in the dark as ever. The regular crop estimate of R. T. Wilson & Co. was something of a feature, though it came out too late to have any direct bearing on the market or on sentiment. The general expectation was that this firm would name figures close to those issued by the Government, 10,100,000,) but when 10,263,371 bales was given as its findings from extensive correspondence throughout the belt, a small stir was created. In this connection it may be interesting to give the estimates of Messrs. Wilson & Co., together with the average of estimates of New York Cotton Exchange members, and the actual crop figures for the last ten years:

CHINA SIGNS THE JOINT NOTE

Her Peace Commissioners Append Their Signatures.

Earl Li Said to be a Victim of Bright's Disease—Ching Protests Against Appointment of Chang Chih-Tung.

PEKING, Jan. 13.—The joint note of the powers has been signed finally by the Chinese Peace Commissioners. Prince Ching signed yesterday, and Li-Hung-Chang, who is better, signed it to-day.

It is understood that the malady from which Li-Hung-Chang is suffering is Bright's disease. He was feeling worse yesterday, and therefore postponed the affixing of his signature, but Prince Ching was hopeful that he would be able to sign to-day, which proved to be the case.

Prince Ching has protested to the Court against the appointment, said to be contemplated, of Viceroy Chang Chih Tung as a Plenipotentiary in the place of Li-Hung-Chang. He thinks the latter's advice absolutely essential, although he believes it might be advisable to appoint a third Plenipotentiary for China, and reiterates his desire for the appointment of Sheng, who would be acceptable to the foreigners.

So far as Chang Chih Tung is concerned, the foreign envoys who know him personally say that, while he is strongly anti-foreign, and has never made any secret of his likes and dislikes, they believe he would be a satisfactory representative of the Chinese, and there would not be any objections to him on the score of his recent utterances. Indeed, some of the Ministers think it would be wise for China to make Chang Chih Tung a Plenipotentiary.

Most of the envoys have received word from their Governments that the negotiations must be conducted in Peking on the ground that for various reasons other places suggested would be objectionable.

The Russians say they will formally turn over the railroad to the Germans immediately.

M. de Giers, the Russian Minister, objects to the British attitude in refusing to permit the Russians to distribute rice and wheat to destitute Chinese in the British section.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 13.—Liu Kun Yi, Viceroy of Nanking, has formulated modifications of the peace conditions, including a reduction of the indemnity, a reduction of the strength of the foreign troops in China, and the preservation of the right to import arms and ammunition.

There are indications of a growing belief among the Chinese that one or two of the powers will support these modifications.

RUSSIA'S AIMS IN CHINA.

M. de Witte Explains Her Attitude—To Withdraw from Peking and Reduce Force in Manchuria.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 13.—M. de Witte, the Russian Minister of Finance, in submitting his annual budget, explains that events in the Far East have necessitated a heavy expenditure, amounting for 1900, to 61,900,000 rubles. This, he goes on to say, did not constitute the total sacrifices imposed upon the country by "these regrettable events."

"It is still too early to submit a statement of our entire material losses," continues M. de Witte, "a considerable portion of the credits being included in the normal budget and charged to other Ministries and local finances. The losses and delays on the construction of railways in the Far East have entailed advances of nearly 82,000,000 rubles to the railway companies."

Enlarging upon the injurious effect which hostilities in China have had upon the general economic life of Russia, especially in the embarrassment wrought in the financial market, M. de Witte deplores the loss of "those brave officers and soldiers who have found glorious deaths on Chinese battlefields."

"These sad events, however, have a consoling aspect," he observes, "in the evidence of moral well-being and are a striking proof of the entire sincerity of the peaceful sentiments which inspired the Czar in his august words appealing on behalf of peace and his proclamation of the peaceful inventions of Russia.

"This was a sublime Christian work, and each step forward in China has furnished evidence of his Majesty's desire to maintain peace. It required a violation of our frontiers by Chinese insurgents without motive, the bombardment of Blagovestchensk, and the destruction of the railway to decide the Government to send troops to Manchuria. Russia is working for the pacification of the disturbed districts and for the restoration of good relations with China, and so soon as her immediate and urgent duties have been accomplished she will withdraw her troops from Peking and proceed to reduce the military forces in Manchuria."

Dilating upon the unexpected nature of the difficulties in the Far East, M. de Witte says:

"The storm broke in a quarter where it was least expected. In a quarter where centuries of friendship with China had rendered war preparations, and even fortresses, unnecessary, the rumbling of thunder was heard, and, almost without noise or confusion, a formidable army of over 20,000 men protected a frontier extending 10,000 kilometers, purged Manchoria of rebels, and rescued the Europeans in Peking.

"Russia has accomplished all that it was her duty as a Christian power to do in China. We were induced to act thus, not by any prospect of advantages, but by the consciousness of our solidarity with the whole human race, proving in an irrefutable manner that Russia is pacific, not because she is weak, but because she is conscious of her power. She could not fear any danger from whatever source—she who has been able, day after day, to display a strength so colossal—but Russia does not use her might for secret and selfish calculations.

"The Czar is a great Christian Prince, who follows no impulse save that of his heart, and is inspired only by his ideal of truth and the welfare of humanity, and who has shown the world by a sublime example that the extraordinary might of Russia is bound up with a profound love of peace.

"Recent events prove that our country can face the future with serenity in the path traced for her by the will of her august sovereign."

THE RUSSO-CHINESE AGREEMENT.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of The Times, who greatly minimizes the importance of the Russo-Chinese agreement regarding Manchuria, reported from Peking to The Times by Dr. Morrison, says:

"Russia has signed nothing with China since 1898. The points of the agreement were published in the Russian Official Messenger last November, and they are understood to be nothing but a local arrangement for the policing of Manchuria during the pacification period. They will in no way change Russia's reiterated declaration of an intention to restore Manchuria when order and security have been attained."

PRINCE CHUN ENVOY TO GERMANY

PEKING, Jan. 13.—Prince Chun, brother of the Emperor, paid a visit to the German Legation to-day, where he had a satisfactory interview with the German Minister, Dr. Mumm von Schwartzenstein.

His appointment as Chinese Envoy to Germany to make apologies for the murder of Baron von Ketteler, has been approved. It is probable that Prince Su will accompany him.

DEATH LURKS IN TRADING PIT.

Chicago Doctor Says All Speculators Are Liable to Develop Disease Which Killed P. D. Armour.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—"The same disease that carried off Philip D. Armour threatens those who go down into the trading pits and stock marts to buy and sell, where the changes of a few points in the quotations may mean poverty or millions. Aneurism of the heart is the disease that killed the wealthy packer. It is caused largely by undue excitement, such as is brought on by the scenes of the Board of Trade." This is a statement made by Dr. F. C. Schaefer.

"Every man whose business forces upon him moments of great excitement," continues Dr. Schaefer, "is a likely candidate for this disease. One who has merely spent an hour in the New York Stock Exchange must have felt his own blood flow quicker. How much fiercer, then, must have been the throbbings of the hearts of those participating in the battles to save or double their fortunes. Such men as these are the ones of whom we daily read as victims of heart failure."

AFTER A $2,000,000 FORTUNE.

Some Plainfield Residents Think They Are Heirs to Big Estate in England.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Jan. 13.—A number of people in Plainfield and vicinity, including Assessor Charles H. Hand, Mrs. Martha Giddis, and Jonathan Fitz Randolph Clawson, are being urged to subscribe to a fund for the purpose of employing lawyers to go to England to look up a fortune of $2,000,000 which, it is alleged, was left by Joseph Moore, who died twenty-five years ago.

Moore was not survived by any of his family, and since that time it is stated that his fortune has remained in the Bank of England, growing larger every year. Now a number of people who claim to be his heirs are trying to raise a fund among relatives to send lawyers to England to investigate the matter and secure evidence that will lead to a distribution of the money.

DEATHBED NOTE FOR $50,000.

A Chicagoan Gave It to the Woman He Was to Have Married.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—Hardly an hour before Frederick W. Bipper died on Nov. 8, 1900, he drew a note for $50,000 in favor of Miss Carrie Dikeman as a reward for fifteen years of faithful service in his family. This note he handed to his friend, W. S. Eden, who in turn gave it to Miss Dikeman, but the matter did not become public until yesterday.

It also transpired that Miss Dikeman was to have married Mr. Bipper, and, in fact, hastened to Mercy Hospital during his illness in order that the ceremony might be performed before he passed away. When at last she arrived, accompanied by Mr. Eden and a clergyman, Mr. Bipper was dead. Miss Dikeman, who is thirty-five years of age, was the niece of Mr. Bipper's wife, who died fifteen years ago.

By his will Mr. Bipper disposed of a four-hundred-thousand-dollar estate, his two daughters being mentioned as legatees, but the name of Miss Dikeman does not appear in the document.

LAUGHED HERSELF TO DEATH.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 13.—Mrs. Ellen Lake of 53 Webster Street died suddenly in Westwood's bakery, at 383 Broad Street, last night.

She had made some purchases and left the store a few minutes, but returned and asked for a glass of water, remarking, as she did so, that she had laughed herself almost to death. She was still laughing when she asked for the water, but before it was handed to her she fell to the floor and expired.

Heart disease was the cause of death, Mrs. Lake was fifty-three years old.

Plainfield Automobile Omnibus Line.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Jan. 13.—The Plainfield Automobile Company is perfecting its plans for the establishment of an automobile omnibus line to run over a route which will include many of the streets in the aristocratic parts of the city not now invaded by the local trolley system, and also to include a trip to Washington Rock, on top of the Watchung Mountain, and then on to the Washington camp ground east of Bound Brook. The New York Motor Vehicle Company has become interested in the project, and will furnish the carriages for the service.

Gov. Odell's Team Runs Away.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 13.—When Gov. Odell came to Albany he brought with him a team of bays and a fine new sleigh. There has been fine sleighing here for several days and when the Governor went to the Executive Chamber last night to work he left word with his coachman to call for him in the sleigh. The coachman drove up to the Capitol, and, alighting, was about to throw blankets over the horses, when they took fright and ran away. After running about a mile, the horses succeeded in detaching themselves from the sleigh, which was wrecked. The frightened animals continued on for six miles before they were captured.

BOER RAID NEAR PRETORIA

Retire Unmolested with Transport Train Half a Mile Long.

CUT WIRES AND BLOW UP LINE

Only Small Garrisons at the Stations Attacked—Kitchener Reports 1,400 Boers in the Party.

PRETORIA, Jan. 12.—Last night the Boers cut the wire between Irene (eight miles south of here) and Olifantsfontein stations. Early this morning a large force of Boers, under Commandant Beyer, invested Kaalfontein Station, about twenty miles south of this place. A hot rifle and shell fire, with two field pieces and a Maxim, was maintained for six hours.

An armored train and reinforcements were sent from Pretoria, but before they had arrived upon the scene the garrison had driven off the Boers, who retired unmolested with a transport train half a mile long. The Boers blew up the line beyond Kaalfontein, compelling the mail train to return here.

It is supposed their object was to obtain supplies, a great quantity of which is stored at Kaalfontein. The British had no casualties.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The War Office has received the following dispatch from Lord Kitchener:

"PRETORIA, Jan. 13.—About 1,400 Boers crossed the line, attacking both Zuurfontein and Kaalfontein Stations, but were driven off. They are being pursued by a cavalry brigade."

Details of the attacks upon Kaalfontein and Zuurfontein Stations show that there were only small garrisons of about 120 men at each station. The British had excellent trenches, which enabled them to withstand the attacks until the Boers, having ascertained that reinforcements were coming to the garrison, retired. At Zuurfontein a party of Boers in khaki succeeded in capturing a British patrol of eight men, whom they subsequently liberated. The railway and telegraph lines will be speedily restored.

No further news has been received regarding the invasion of Cape Colony. Sir Alfred Milner writes to a correspondent in England, saying: "It would be useless for me to notice the wholesale lies that are spread about concerning me. If I attempted to do so, I would have no time for anything else."

DE WET FLOGS PEACE AGENTS.

Ill-Treats Three, Who Were Taken Prisoners, and Shoots One of Them, a British Subject.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—Lord Kitchener reports from Pretoria, under yesterday's date, as follows:

"Three agents of the Peace Committee were taken as prisoners to De Wet's laager, near Lindley, Jan. 10. One, who was a British subject, was flogged, and then shot. The other two, burghers, were flogged by De Wet's orders."

The brief report of the fate of three agents of the Peace Committee excites the deepest indignation on all sides. One or two papers express a hope that Lord Kitchener has been mislead by false Kafir reports; but it is generally felt that he would not have reported the matter to the War Office without undoubted evidence.

The Daily Mail heads the report with the word "Murder," and declaims against any further attempt to coax the enemy into submission. "De Wet has placed himself outside the pale of humanity," says The Daily Mail, "and not proclamations, but larger reinforcements must be our watchword."

The Morning Post says: "This marks the point where the guerrilla phase ends and the bandit phase begins."

All the papers appeal strongly to the Government to hurry forward reinforcements, since it is evident that the Boer leaders have now become desperate, and concillation is quite useless.

The Pretoria correspondent of The Daily Mail announces the return to Pretoria of Mr. Pretorius, a former President of the late South African Republic, from a futile endeavor to persuade the Boer leaders to surrender.

BOERS RESOLVED TO FIGHT ON.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The Daily Telegraph publishes a three-column dispatch from its correspondent at Brussels, giving a conversation with Dr. Leyds and Abram Fischer. The general purport of the statement of the Boer representatives is that "Great Britain is still under false impressions concerning the war, as she always has been," and that "the Boers are fully resolved to continue the struggle, and are as hopeful now as they were a year ago of preserving their independence."

Dr. Leyds and Mr. Fischer also asserted that "Great Britain cannot make enormous sacrifices eternally, and has retained the friendship of the great Powers at a terrible cost." They admitted that the Boers were suffering hardships, but said that hardships were the normal life of the burghers.

MEEKER, Col., Jan. 13.—Col. Roosevelt's first day in the Rockies netted him a handsome lion, together with an exciting adventure. Leaving Meeker at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, the party struck a fresh lion trail four miles out. The dogs were released and the pursuit started. For five miles the wily animal led its pursuers, but was finally treed.

With the dogs baying around the tree, Dr. Webb and Mr. Stewart pressed Col. Roosevelt to shoot, but the New Yorker insisted on drawing straws. Fortune favored him, and he drew the long one; but this matter was settled none too soon, as the angry beast sprang from the tree at the little party. Quick as a flash, the Colonel's gun was at his shoulder and the ball struck true, while the animal was in mid-air.

The men scattered quickly as the beast hit the ground, narrowly missing Dr. Webb, and the dogs threw themselves on the lion and quickly dispatched him.

For Bonds from Insurance Companies.

Special to The New York Times.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 13.—Senator Allen has prepared a bill requiring all life, fire, and accident insurance companies to deposit securities or a bond with the State Treasurer, covering the value of all policies held in Kansas. He says insurance companies that are honest and intend to pay losses will cheerfully comply with this law, and that those who fight it are not wanted in the State.

WOMEN QUARRELED AND A MAN SUFFERED.

Story of Charges of Cowardice Against Capt. Hall.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—The details of a singular story, involving charges of cowardice against an officer of the United States Marine Corps, a continuing breach between the wife of the American Minister to Peking and the wife of the First Secretary of Legation, and a vast amount of bad blood, reached Washington to-day in a letter from a well-known Naval Commander, who is serving on the Asiatic Squadron.

The letter is especially interesting, because it explains for the first time why a specific charge of cowardice preferred against Capt. Hall of the marine force that participated in the defense of the legations against Boxer hordes was dropped without the formality of holding a court-martial.

It appears from the letter that Capt. Hall, instead of being a coward, rendered much gallant and dangerous service, that he frequently risked his life, and he was in the forefront of every action that was fought. It appears further that the Captain's only offense was in thoughtlessly becoming entangled in a petticoat feud of which Mrs. Conger, wife of the Minister, and Mrs. Squiers, wife of the First Secretary of Legation, were principals, and which began at a time when the chances of the Christian refugees in the British compound appeared to be the slimmest, when every man who could shoot a rifle was in the trenches, and the women were afraid to sleep at night.

Capt. Hall and his little command were fighting night and day on the wall. A detachment of American marines made a sortie and captured a quantity of canned food, which was turned over to the British Quartermaster. Mrs. Conger asked Mrs. Squires to secure a portion of the captured food and send it to Capt. Hall and his men. Mrs. Squires declined to accept the task. Thereafter she and Mrs. Conger did not speak.

The marines took sides with Mrs. Conger. They exhibited their appreciation of her thoughtfulness in their behalf by standing at attention and presenting arms every time she passed their camp. When Mrs. Squires passed they did not indicate that they even knew her. The breach between the women widened. Mrs. Squires stood the indifference of the marines as long as she could without collapsing from mortification, and then one day she broke in upon Capt. Hall and told him that his men were loafers and blackguards; that they were not saluting her as they should, and as they were saluting Mrs. Conger, she demanded that the same deference be paid to her rank and station as was paid others in the compound.

Capt. Hall defended his men, but assured Mrs. Squires that thereafter she would be properly saluted by them. Capt. Hall kept his word. In doing so, however, he incurred the wrath of Mrs. Conger, and when Gen. Chaffee arrived in Peking she was told that Capt. Hall had been guilty of cowardice.

Gen. Chaffee notified the department that such a charge had been made, and that he had appointed a court-martial to investigate it. That was as far as the matter ever went. It can be stated now on the highest authority that Capt. Hall will never be tried for cowardice.

The writer of the letter adds that Mrs. Conger and Mrs. Squires still ignore each other.

FILIPINO BANDITS' METHODS.

Gen. MacArthur's Remarks on Their Inhuman Ways—Several to be Hanged.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Copies of General Orders from the Philippines, received here, show that a large number of native Filipinos have been convicted of murder and other crimes, and sentenced to be hanged or to long terms of imprisonment. In one case the accused belonged to an organized band, which, under the name of "Guardia de Honor," had for its declared object the murder of peaceful and unoffending victims, if found necessary to gratify either a desire for revenge or a feeling of envy against the rich.

"These inhuman methods," says Gen. MacArthur, "remove all the participants, whether chief, or willing followers of the bands, from the pale of the law and place them among that class of cowardly and secret assassins which all civilized men the world over hold to be enemies of mankind."

A native named Vincente Prado established a camp in a strong position difficult of access in the mountainous district near Rosario, in Union Province. There he entrenched his camp and erected buildings for a band of armed outlaws, which he gathered about him. Recently two Americans were taken into the camp as prisoners, and, for no assigned reason other than that "they were enemies," they were ordered to instant death.

Shortly afterward two Ingorrotes, a man and a woman, were taken before Prado and charged with being American spies. Without any attempt at proof, or form of trial, they were ordered to be immediately executed. In both instances Prado personally witnessed the bloody execution of his orders by members of his outlaw band, who raised their bolos on the defenseless prisoners. On another occasion Prado ordered his band to attack and burn the pueblo of San Jacinto and to arrest and, "if he resisted, kill" the Presidente of Rosario. In pursuance of these orders the Presidente of Rosario and his son were killed and 103 houses destroyed by fire. Prado and his chief outlaw assistants were sentenced to be hanged.

Another native sentenced to be hanged was Pedro Lachica. This man was one of a band of natives who, representing themselves to be policemen, entered at night time several houses and by threats and the use of firearms forced the natives to come out and surrender. They then tied the arms of the men behind their backs and beat them with bolos and robbed the houses of money, jewelry, and other valuables.

GEN. GRANT ROUTS FILIPINOS.

Believes His District Is Now Fairly Pacified—Pampanga Ready for Civil Government.

MANILA, Jan. 13.—Gen. Grant, who is endeavoring to suppress the latest insurrection in his district and who is personally commanding his scouts at the southern end, reported to-day that he had encountered a number of bands south of Buloc Mountain, all of which retired up the hills. He says that a hundred of the enemy, who were well intrenched, made considerable resistance, but were ultimately driven from their position. Four bodies of insurgents were found. The American casualties were a Sergeant and one private of Troop A, Philippine Cavalry, wounded.

In the opinion of Gen. Grant, his district is now pacified, with the exception of the locality south of Buloc Mountain, and the Province of Pampanga is ready for civil government.

It is expected that Pampanga will be the first province to which provincial government will be applied.

Lieut. Col. Frank D. Baldwin of the Fourth United States Infantry yesterday destroyed an insurgent arsenal in the Patungan district, seizing a quantity of arms and ammunition, together with a printing press and other material.

Go to Build Railroad in Ecuador.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 13.—Thirty-six men left here to-day for Ecuador to serve as foremen, time keepers, &c., for the James McDonald Contracting Company in building 300 miles of railroad from Guayaquil to Quito, over the Andes Mountains. Mr. McDonald says he now has at work 5,000 Jamaicans, and expects to take 5,000 more men, mainly Italians, to work on the contract. All workmen sign a three years' contract.

SNOWBOUND FOR SIX DAYS

Russian Railways Stopped by the Fierce Blizzard.

Passengers, Freezing and Starving, Fight for Food—Five Soldiers Eaten by Wolves.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The Odessa correspondent of The Daily Mail sends a heart-rending story of the sufferings of railway passengers snowbound while on the way to Odessa. The blizzard, he says, raged continuously for more than 100 hours over the whole of Southern Russia. He describes the gradual arrival of trains at Razdyelnaia, with hundreds of passengers from the north who had started six days before.

"They had been snowed in for five days," he continues, "and fighting among themselves for the scanty food supplies provided at the railway buffets. Women and children were weak with hunger, while gangs of men battled with snowdrifts, which were thirty-five feet deep in some places, and that, too, without snowplows, although these would have been useless even if they could have been found.

"Finally some 5,000 passengers had assembled at Razdyelnaia. A regiment was sent from Kieff southward, and 3,000 troops went northward from Odessa with shovels. On the third day the relieving parties succeeded in cutting a passage for a couple of trains, which started with 2,000 persons, after a mad rush, the weakest going to the wall.

"The trains proceeded for eighteen hours and were then again stuck in the snow, unable to go forward or backward. The blizzard continued. Demoniacal fury and pandemonium prevailed, the passengers cursing the railway management, fainting, and weeping. The trains were buried, and all passed a horrible night. When morning came a peasant volunteered to walk six miles to the nearest station with telegrams beseeching assistance, supplies, firewood, and water having been exhausted. Finally, driven to desperation, sixty passengers, with Count Kapnist, determined to walk to Odessa. Count Kapnist, with forty, reached a point where he was able to secure sleds, and all arrived at Odessa, though uncertain as to the fate of those they had left behind.

"Meanwhile Gov. Schuvalloff had organized train sledges with supplies, which after Herculean efforts, relieved the two trains. It was found that many of the passengers had their arms or legs frozen.

"Eighteen thousand troops are now engaged in the work of clearing the line. The storm has abated, and it is announced that the besieged trains will get through to Odessa this evening. No mails have been received here for six days. Corpses have been kept unburied eight days, as it has been impossible to inter them. The conduct of the railway authorities is loudly condemned."

The Odessa correspondent of The Daily News wires that 120 people were frozen to death in the blizzard.

The Bucharest correspondent of The Daily Express says that five Roumanian soldiers, while going home, were attacked and eaten by wolves after a desperate struggle.

563,885 GRIP VICTIMS.

Reports Show the Disease Prevails in a Broad Belt from New York to the Rocky Mountains.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—Special reports show that more than 500,000 persons in the grip belt, which extends across the United States from New York to the Rocky Mountains, are suffering with the disease. The epidemic is greatest in the East, with a wide extension in Pennsylvania. Illinois is also extensively afflicted. In proportion to their size, Pittsburg, Reading, and Allegheny City, in Pennsylvania, are the most seriously visited. The reports show that in the big cities of New York and Chicago the grip has spread at an alarming rate, and, although few cases are reported as fatal, the number is enormous.

The disease appears to cause the greatest trouble in factories, schools, and colleges.

The grip belt begins at New York, where it is wide and heavy. From there it extends broadly through Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois. In Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, and States farther West and North, the belt thins out considerably. The total number of cases reported from 120 cities and towns is 563,885, New York and Chicago leading with 100,000 cases each, and Philadelphia following with 70,000.

THE PRESIDENT'S CONDITION.

Takes a Short Carriage Ride—Not Likely to Resume Work for a Week.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—The President continues to improve. The weather being very bright and sunny to-day, he was able to take a short ride, Mrs. McKinley accompanying him.

While the President's remarkable powers of recuperation are bringing about a rapid recovery, his physician enjoins as complete a rest as possible from official cares, and it is not expected that he will resume work in his office for a week at least.

BROOKLYN POLICE FORCE SUFFERS.

The grip has invaded the Police Department in Brooklyn, and many members of the force are suffering with the prevailing ailment. Yesterday nearly ninety men, including Captains, Sergeants, Roundsmen, and patrolmen, reported sick. The Captains who are ill are Dennis J. Driscoll of the Flushing Avenue Station and William J. Burford of the Grand Avenue Station. None of the cases is of a serious character.

At the Brooklyn Post Office it was said that the staff of employes there had been but slightly affected by the grip epidemic, only a few men being on the sick list.

PATTI MAY SING HERE AGAIN.

Marcus Mayer Believes She Will Undertake a Concert Tour.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—Adelina Patti may not have sung her last notes in American auditoriums, according to Marcus Mayer, the theatrical manager who has brought many famous foreign stars to this country and who managed the last tour made by Patti in America in 1893. He believes that he can persuade the celebrated diva to come to this country again for a real "farewell tour." That he would consider the culminating point of a conspicuous theatrical career.

"It is no mere hobby of mine," said Mr. Mayer last evening. "It is a fact that Patti has lost none of her charm of voice. She sang last year in England in concert, creating as much of a furore as in the old days. And she has never lost her interest in this country. I believe that Mme. Patti could be induced to come here for a concert tour, and I entertain no doubt that I will be able to bring her under my management. She would not, of course, sing again in opera—that would be too severe a task. There is almost a new generation since Patti last came to America."

Bank Stockholders Assessed.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 13.—The Controller of the Currency has made an assessment on the stockholders of the failed German National Bank of Louisville of $58 per share, to pay the debts of the bank. The total assessment is $145,870, and is to be paid by Feb. 9, 1901. The depositors have received 60 per cent. of their claims.

W. M. RICE'S HEIRS FOUND.

Three Persons, Living in Poverty in Missouri, Notified to Appear in Court Here.

Special to The New York Times.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., Jan. 13.—A representative of Attorney Potter, who is engaged in looking after the estate of William M. Rice, who died in New York last September under suspicious circumstances, has been in Stone County, Missouri, and has found the heirs of the millionaire. They are B. F. Rice, Bird Rice, and Mrs. Mattie Clark, all of whom reside in the same neighborhood and in the southern part of the county.

The appearance of the messenger and the notification he served on the poverty stricken people that they were heirs to an estate of $5,000,000 or more was a joyful surprise. The three are ignorant country folks, and were not aware of their uncle's death nor the sensational circumstances connected with his demise. The attorney met the heirs, served each with a citation notifying them that the Surrogate of New York would, on Feb. 7, take action on the will of William M. Rice, and requesting their presence in the court on that date.

What action will be taken by the heirs is not known, as for many years they have been the poorest people in the county, being barely able to eke out an existence, and they have not the means to carry them out of the State.

CAPT. FRAZER OFFERS REWARD.

Will Give $500 for Return of His Kidnapped Son Alive—Same Amount for His Body if He is Dead.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 13.—Capt. N. H. Frazer of Union Springs to-day offered, through Chief of Police Albion Hixon of that city, $500 reward for the return of his son, Bass Frazer, who is supposed to have been kidnapped from school in Atlanta. His offer follows:

"I hereby offer a reward of $500 for Bass Frazer, dead or alive, the student of the Atlanta Technological School, who disappeared from there Saturday evening, Jan. 5. The money is on deposit at the Merchants and Farmers' Bank of Union Springs, Ala. All communications should be addressed to me at Union Springs.

"Description of Bass Frazer: Nineteen years old, five feet eleven inches tall, 145 pounds weight, black wavy hair, heavy beard for one of his age, close shaven, had no vices, wears No. 7 hat, No. 7 shoes, walks erect, face full, scar on face, and on forehead right under hair."

Looking for "Pat" Crowe.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., Jan. 13.—The police of the town of Nanticoke are looking for "Pat" Crowe, the alleged abductor of the Cudahy boy, at Omaha. Burgess Williams is said to be in possession of information received from the police of Chicago to the effect that Crowe is somewhere in the anthracite region of Pennsylvania. It is thought he may have decided to disguise himself as a miner and locate in Nanticoke, which has a large Polish population. It is said the alleged abductor can speak Polish, having acquired the language while working in the stock yards at Omaha.

ROOSEVELT TOOK AWAY REPORT

Left Gov. Odell Only Unsigned Copy of Proposed Amendments to the Charter—May Be Made Public To-day.

ALBANY, Jan. 13.—There has been some surprise over the fact that although the Legislature has been in session for more than a week, there has been no report from the New York City Charter Revision Commission. The report was sent complete to Gov. Roosevelt before his term of office ended, and by him should have been transferred to the incoming Governor for transmission. It transpires upon inquiry as to the delay, that Col. Roosevelt took away with him the officially signed report and left Gov. Odell only an unsigned one. To rectify this error Gov. Odell has asked for an officially signed copy, and expects it will be here by Monday, when he will immediately transmit it to the Legislature.

Asked what, if any, recommendations he would make in transmitting it, Gov. Odell said:

"I shall send it to the Legislature without comment, and let that body thrash it out. I shall, however, examine carefully any proposed legislation, and allow the presentation of all views on the subject of charter amendment."

BAILEY'S TRIP TO CUBA.

Went There, It Is Said, with Plan to Control the Cattle Trade.

Special to The New York Times.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 13.—The purpose of the recent trip of Congressman Bailey of Texas to Havana, Cuba, has just come to light. It is stated here by parties who know that the Texan is organizing a syndicate to control, or largely so, the cattle trade on that island. For the past eight months the shipments of cattle to Cuba from Florida and Gulf ports has been enormous, the cattle in Cuba having been killed out during the war. Weekly shipments are made from several points in Florida, Alabama, and along the Gulf as far as Galveston.

It is stated that Mr. Bailey does not propose to organize a cattle trust in dealing with the island, but that he has already pooled several individual interests, and that with the aid of Eastern capital he is now organizing a big company to deal exclusively with this branch of the trade.

MAY BE ATTORNEY GENERAL.

Rumor Says Minister Harris Will Get Into the Cabinet.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 13.—Addison C. Harris, who is now Minister to Austria, is likely to be given the place of Attorney General in President McKinley's Cabinet, to succeed Mr. Griggs, according to a report that is current among the intimate political friends of Senator Fairbanks. Mr. Harris is backed for the place by Senator Fairbanks, and not long ago resigned his post at Vienna in the hope of bettering his chances for the Cabinet position. The resignation has not been acted upon.

Mr. Harris is a native of Indiana, and lived in this city until 1899, when he was sent abroad. He comes of Quaker stock, and was born in Wayne County about sixty years ago. He was graduated from Northwestern University, now Butler College, and was admitted to the bar in 1865.

BOOMING THE SUBSIDY BILL.

Its Backers Send Out Interviews with Secretaries Long and Wilson.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—The press agency of the Ship Subsidy bill is busy turning out interviews with prominent men in support of the measure. They appear sometimes only twenty-four hours apart. An interview with Senator Elkins was sent out by the bureau last night, and to-day it supplied interviews with Secretaries Wilson and Long.

Mr. Wilson's argument is mainly from the farmers' standpoint. He claims that the farmer must get into foreign markets or he will be ruined by overproduction, and that an increase in American bottoms means an increase in the foreign markets.

Mr. Long's chief argument appears to be based on the belief that the exporter pays the freight. He says that we spend millions of dollars in this way. He also believes that it would be more satisfactory, economical, and safe to have our own vessels for our own ocean-carrying trade.

NEWPORT WEDDING REHEARSED IN CHURCH

Mr. Vanderbilt and Miss French Prepare for the Ceremony.

City Thronged with Guests and Sightseers—Last Special Train Arrives This Morning.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, Jan. 13.—Shortly after 3 o'clock this afternoon Alfred Vanderbilt, Miss French, Mrs. French, Gen. and Mrs. Eaton, Mr. and Mrs. Amos Tuck French, and several of the relatives of the expectant groom and bride drove to St. John's Church, where the ceremony is to be performed to-morrow, to go through a rehearsal. The party was met by the Revs. Beattie and Morgan, who will officiate. Organist Boone was at the organ. No detail of the ceremony was omitted, and, after several trials the party left the church.

Immediately after the rehearsal the doors of the edifice were closed and the place turned over to the decorators, who had come on from New York. They will work through the day and night.

Were it not for the crispness of the air, the presence of women wrapped in furs and men in overcoats, it would be an easy task to fancy that Newport was in the height of its season. Hundreds of guests and hundreds more of visitors and sightseers were astir throughout the city. The roads of the town and the country were gay with parties driving to and fro. Many of the traps contained their owners, but by far the greater portion belonged to, and were drawn by the steeds of, the various livery stable owners of the city.

Early in the day crowds of visitors, drawn hither by the approaching wedding, not because they are guests, but out of curiosity, besieged Harbourview for a glimpse of the bride-to-be; others wandered around the boundaries of The Breakers, and many others thronged St. John's, where Mr. Vanderbilt, Miss French, and the members of her family attended services. All the other churches were filled as well, but the sightseer was in the main disappointed.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, with her son, Reginald; her daughter, Miss Gladys Vanderbilt; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, and other relatives were in attendance at Trinity Church. This evening Mrs. Vanderbilt entertained at dinner at "The Breakers."

This morning a special train arrived from New York with William K. Vanderbilt, Dr. and Mrs. W. Seward Webb, and Miss Webb on board. Carriages from Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt's station met the party and conveyed it to The Breakers. Other arrivals include Mr. and Mrs. William M. Woodward, Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, Baroness Seiller, Senator Chauncey M. Depew, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Hammond, Edward Gwynne, Peter Goelet Gerry, Mr. and Mrs. Ernesto G. Fabbri, Mr. and Mrs. William Jay Schieffelin, Mr. and Mrs. William D. Sloane, Miss Cushing, Mr. and Mrs. C. Albert Stevens, Miss Morris, Henry Whitehouse, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Livermore, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Tuck, Miss Anne Leary, Lispenard Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. H. Webster Davis, Miss O'Neill, and Julien T. Davies.

The gift of Alfred Vanderbilt to his bride is a pearl necklace and a pearl pendant costing $80,000, but the only ornament she will wear to-morrow will be a small diamond clasp at the throat.

Miss French will enter the church on the arm of her brother, Amos Tuck French, who will give her away. She will be attended by Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, a sister of the bridegroom, as her maid of honor, while her bridesmaids will be Miss Pauline French, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Tuck French; Miss Isabel Stillman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Stillman; Miss Edith Gray, daughter of Justice and Mrs. John Clinton Gray, and Miss Elsa Bronson, daughter of Mrs. Frederic Bronson. The best man will be Reginald Vanderbilt, a brother of the bridegroom, while the ushers will be Messrs. Potter Palmer, Jr., Robert L. Gerry, Frederick M. Davies, William Fitzhugh Whitehouse, Jr., Ord Preston, Ernest Iselin, Bayard Cutting, and W. A. M. Burden.

Although St. John's is one of the highest Episcopal Churches in the city, the programme of the ceremony, at the request of Miss French, has been simplified as much as possible. The choir boys will be in attendance, but will sing only twice, and will do no marching. The ceremony will probably not occupy more than seven minutes.

After the ceremony the bride and groom will receive congratulations in the large hall at Harbourview, which is now handsomely decorated in the form of a Summer house with all its natural effect. Mrs. French, Mrs. Herbert, and Mrs. Amos Tuck French

WHITNEY, Mr. and Mrs. H. P., diamond and ruby ornament.
WEEKS, Dr. and Mrs., two silver pitchers.
WOLF, Miss, silver hand mirror.
WHITEHOUSE, WORTHINGTON, silver blotter and stationery case.
WHEATON, Mrs. A. P., Jr., set of hearts.

A number of gifts were received without the cards of the donors attached.

MARRIED AT DAYBREAK.

Violinist Orsini Wedded on La Champagne as the Vessel Left Quarantine.

Upon the passenger list of La Champagne are the names of M. and Mme. Orsini. The majority of the passengers not being in the secret were amazed to witness their early morning marriage, while the ship rode at anchor at Quarantine yesterday morning. The ceremony was performed by a fellow-passenger, Mgr. Echmitz-Didier, a Prelate of Rome, who is on a short pleasure trip to America. The religious rite was observed at 6 o'clock by half a dozen friends. The bridegroom is a violin virtuoso, well known in Boston, who recently produced in Brescia a successful opera.

M. Orsini a few weeks ago returned to the land of his birth to be married, but found there were so many tiresome formalities to go through, owing to his long residence in the United States, that he determined to bring his bride-elect to Boston, and, in case there should be a Catholic priest aboard, to explain the situation and ask him to marry them.

MR. BRYAN ON CHARITY.

Says It Is a Pleasure and Duty to Give to Others.

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 18.—William J. Bryan spoke here this afternoon at a charity mass meeting.

"We are compelled to take an interest in charity," he said, "first, by our selfish interests. Distress leads to crime. Property and life are safe in proportion as people are happy. It is a great gratification to give, but the higher reason is that charity is a duty. A man achieves because he has an ideal, but who gave these ideals?

"The only way we can return the gifts of fortune is to bestow what we can on others—to pass it along."

Talks to Students and College Men.

The fifth annual special service for the students and college men of this city will be held in Calvary Episcopal Church, Fourth Avenue and Twenty-first Street, next Sunday evening. The speakers will be Bishop Potter and President Schurman of Cornell University. Tickets may be obtained from the Calvary Parish House, 106 East Twenty-second Street, or at the Students' Club, 129 Lexington Avenue. No seats will be reserved after 8 o'clock, and at that hour the general public will be admitted.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY AT SEA

Man and Wife Jump Overboard from the Liner Koln.

Said to Have Broken Up Their Home in Germany in Consequence of a Quarrel with a Relative.

A double suicide occurred on the North German Lloyd steamship Koln while that vessel was on her way from Bremen to this port, which she reached on Saturday. The suicides, saloon passengers, were Edward Hermann and Freuda Hermann, his wife. They jumped overboard on the evening of Jan. 3.

The Koln is commanded by Capt. Langsenter, whose chief officer is Gustav Wittstein. When she left Bremen she had eleven cabin passengers and 631 steerage passengers on board. The news of the suicide did not leak out till yesterday. When questioned about it, Chief Officer Wittstein said:

"Edward Hermann was a saddler and harness maker about sixty-nine years of age, and his wife, Freuda Hermann, was about fifty-six years old. They had lived at Altenbruch on the Elbe, near Bremerhaven.

"When they came aboard they were laboring under great mental depression and told their fellow passengers they had had a serious quarrel with Hermann's brother-in-law, who also lived in Altenbruch. The quarrel was a very peculiar and grievious one, and so serious in its consequences that the couple sold out their home and furniture and emigrated. They said they were going to Chicago, where Edward Hermann's brother lives.

"On the third day out they became less communicative and kept aloof from their fellow passengers. Alone they walked the weather deck, while other passengers sought the lee refuge from the rain and splash of the waves.

"On the evening of their suicide they did not dine, but promenaded the deck on the weather side of the ship. It was blowing a gale and raining hard. They were seen at dusk, but by 7 o'clock it was very dark, and at 7:30 P. M. they were missed. The ship was searched throughout, but they were not to be found.

"It was a nasty night, and it was no use bringing the ship to for they had doubtless leaped overboard half an hour before they were missed, and so the ship kept her course.

"Their baggage is still aboard, and will be taken back to Bremen."

This is not the only sad incident that has taken place on board the Koln, for the liner was chartered by the German Government as a transport to carry marines to China at the very outbreak of the Boxer troubles, and she took back to Germany marines who had been wounded at Peking, Taku, and Tien-Tsin.

QUAY SURE HE WILL WIN.

Pennsylvanian Says He Will Be Elected Senator on the First Ballot—His Opponents Deny It.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Jan. 13.—The result of the struggle for United States Senator is still in doubt, with both sides professing to be confident of victory. Col. Quay, the choice of the Republican caucus, is here directing his canvass, and he says there is no doubt of his election. He has given his friends the assurance that he will be elected on the first ballot, and they claim to have no reason to believe otherwise. United States Senator Penrose, Attorney General Elkin, and Insurance Commissioner Durham are with Col. Quay looking after the details of his fight.

William T. Creasy of Columbia, the House leader of the Democrats, says Quay cannot get a single Democratic vote, and without the Democrats he cannot hope to be elected. Col. James M. Guffey of Pittsburg will be nominated for Senator by tomorrow's joint House and Senate Democratic caucus.

F. A. Van Valkenburg, who is in charge of the anti-Quay Republican headquarters, reached here to-night from Philadelphia. Mr. Van Valkenburg issued a formal statement, in which he says enough Republican legislators, with the Democrats, are pledged to oppose Mr. Quay's re-election to accomplish that result, and that the anti-Quayites have no reason to doubt that every man will remain true to his pledge.

"Under the circumstances," he adds, "I cannot see how Mr. Quay can be elected on the first ballot, and if he is not elected on the first ballot he certainly cannot, as he has admitted, be elected at all."

Several legislators are ill at their homes, and neither side can tell with accuracy how many of their followers will be absent when the House and Senate vote separately Tuesday noon.

INDORSE GOV. ODELL.

Building Trades Thank Him for Recommending the Liability Bill.

Politicians were talking last night of the action taken by the Building Trades' Council in warmly commending Gov. Odell for his advocacy of the Employers' Liability bill.

The business representatives of the council, an organization representing 60,000 men, met yesterday in Central Hall, on West Thirty-second Street, and passed this resolution:

Resolved, That the thanks of the workingmen of the State of New York are due to the Hon. Benjamin B. Odell, Jr., Governor of the State of New York, for his advocacy in his message of the Employers' Liability bill.

Republicans declare that the action of the Building Trades' Council demonstrates that the Democracy can no longer rely on the practically united support of the workingmen as they have in the past and that Tammany will suffer material losses.

MR. COLER WILL NOT REPLY.

Controller Ignores Senator Platt's Attack on Him—Tammany More Kindly.

Controller Bird S. Coler, who returned from Washington yesterday afternoon, declined to discuss the remarks of Senator T. C. Platt on Saturday night, in which he said: "Coler is a big political fraud. Perhaps I should say he is a little political fraud."

"Yes, I read the statement," said Mr. Coler, "but I shall make no comment on it."

The Senator's attack on Mr. Coler attracted much attention especially among Democrats. Several Tammany leaders, who denounced the Controller a few months ago, referred to him yesterday in very kindly terms.

Sailings Between New York and Naples.

The Veloce Navigazione Italiana a Vapore, which operates a line of steamships between Italian and Central and South American ports, has decided to inaugurate a service between New York and Naples, in the Spring. Sailings will be made from both terminals once every twenty days. Bolognesi, Hartfield & Co. of 29 Wall Street are the passenger and Starace Brothers of 76 Pearl Street the freight agents of the line.

Arrivals on the Transport McPherson.

The United States transport McPherson arrived yesterday from Matanzas and Havana, with 14 cabin passengers and 13 civilian employes of the Government. Among the former was Lieut. Ralph Harrison, United States Army; Alexis E. Frye, former Superintendent of Schools of Cuba, and Capt. Slocum of the Seventh United States Cavalry, and a son of Capt. Lewis, Second United States Cavalry.

Medal for Policeman McGowan.

Policeman Frank McGowan of the Macdougal Street Police Station was presented yesterday with a gold medal for the rescue from drowning of John Patterson, at the risk of his life. At Nitzel's Grove, Sept. 8, Patterson fell into the river and was being carried off by the tide when Policeman McGowan jumped in and saved him as he was sinking. The rescue was difficult, as the tide was strong. The presentation was made by J. Wesley Jones of the New York Volunteer Life Saving Association at the Macdougal Street station in the presence of his comrades.

O'CONNER'S $210 OUTING.

Messenger Boy Gets Check Cashed and Gives His Chum a Good Time.

Dime novels and a desire for an unlimited supply of pocket money has landed sixteen-year-old Willie O'Conner, an American District Messenger boy, in a cell at Police Headquarters, charged with stealing a money order for $970, and two checks aggregating $210.

O'Conner, who lives with his aunt, Mrs. Michael Hanlon, at 1,791 Third Avenue, was employed in the telegraph office at 854 Broadway. About 2 o'clock Friday afternoon a call for a messenger boy was received from the Union Square Bank. O'Conner answered the call. A check for $10 on the East River Bank, one for $200 on the German Exchange Bank, and the money order were given to him to have cashed and return to the bank with the money.

The boy got the two checks cashed and decided to spend the money. His first move was to visit a tailor's shop on Third Avenue, where he purchased a suit of clothes and a derby hat. He left his uniform behind, saying that he would call for it the following day. He then went up town and hunted up his chum, Louis Meilon, seventeen years old, who lives with his parents at 1,921 Second Avenue. Displaying the roll of bills he told Mellon that he had found it, and invited Mellon to go with him and have a good time. The boys rode in the Bowery in a automobile, bought everything that struck their fancy, and visited every dime museum and show in sight.

Friday evening they went to a theatre, and after the performance had supper and put up for the night at a hotel. On Saturday they purchased revolvers and jackknives. They also bought several bottles of perfume, with which they saturated their clothing.

Yesterday morning they began to feel rather homesick. Hiring a cab they went to Harlem, and O'Conner, in his desire to get rid of the money, sought out some of his playmates and presented to them five and ten dollar bills. About 3 o'clock O'Conner returned to the home of his aunt almost exhausted. He told her a long story about being sick and going to a hospital.

When O'Conner was arrested two hours later he confessed. Mellon was also taken into custody. About $20 was found on O'Conner, which he said was all that was left of the $210, and $7.30 on Mellon.

Among the other purchases O'Conner made was a bicycle for $25, two gold chains, and a number of dime novels of the bloodthirsty and romantic type.

The boys will be arraigned in court this morning. The money order for $970, O'Conner says, he mailed back to the bank.

CENTRAL UNION ROW.

Wrangle Over a Proposition to Join the American Federation of Labor.

The Ceneral Federated Union discussed yesterday a proposal to apply for a charter to the American Federation of Labor. A number of the Unions had grievances against the Federation and the delegates of organizations affiliated with the Knights of Labor wanted to know how they would fare if the central body joined it. President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor was at the meeting.

Morris Brown of the Cigar-makers proposed to make the application for the charter.

Philip Kelly of the Theatrical Protective Union objected. While he was speaking, Mr. Gompers was escorted to the platform. Delegate Kelly asked Mr. Gompers how organizations connected with the Knights of Labor would fare.

"All I can say," said Mr. Gompers, "is that the American Federation of Labor is not antagonistic to any organization which works in the interests of organized labor."

Delegate Kelly thought the answer was not satisfactory, and moved that the question be deferred for four weeks until President Gompers would have a chance of giving a better answer. Delegates from the Plumbers and Gas Fitters' and Machinists' Unions asked Mr. Gompers why delinquent and seceding unions were admitted to the American Federation of Labor.

"Until we have the millennium," said President Gompers, "we will have these disputes. I can't prevent them rising. I don't know everything. If the Central Federation were affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and more in touch with the labor movement it should accomplish more than it has done," said Mr. Gompers.

Delegate Kelly's motion to defer action for four weeks was carried after a wrangle lasting nearly an hour.

President Gompers announced that he came to New York to confer with Santiago Iglesias, a delegate from the Federation Libre of Porto Rico, who is in New York with reference to organizing the workingmen of Porto Rico. The American Federation had appropriated $3,000 for the purpose.

The meeting indorsed a bill to cut through One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Street West from St. Nicholas Terrace to St. Nicholas Avenue so that it might be legally opened and graded.

Twenty-two organizations have indorsed the local option or home rule on taxation bill.

TEACHINGS OF CONFUCIUS.

Dr. MacArthur Says He Did Nothing to Elevate Woman—Replies to Minister Wu.

Dr. MacArthur, at the evening service yesterday in the Calvary Baptist Church, preached his second sermon on "Christianism and Confucianism." He admitted that all Confucius had taught was true. As was the case in all ethnic beliefs, he said, however, the whole truth was not there, and only Christianity could supply what was lacking. Confucius found terrible moral conditions. Those he strove manfully to improve. The degraded condition of woman had much to do with those conditions. Unfortunately, Confucius did nothing to improve her condition. He took the crown from woman's brow and trampled it in the dust, and as a result he robbed the marriage relations of their sweetness, their sanctity, and their purity. No doubt, the strength of Confucius is in his moral teachings, and these got him his most disciples.

"I do not say that Wu Ting Fang sought to depreciate the Christian religion. But I do say that he did not understand it. And yet but for Christianity he would not have learned a word of the English tongue. But for Christianity he would never have stepped outside his native China. But for Christianity he would not be the emissary from his country to this, the greatest country on God's earth.

"His eulogy of Confucianism lacks in convincing element, and lacks even of propriety, if I shall concede to his people that they possess tact, in conceding which I know most people will disagree with me."

FOR VIOLATING SUNDAY LAW.

Alleged Proprietors of Billiard Rooms Placed Under Arrest.

Meshan Meleto, twenty-six years old, of 424 West Seventeenth Street, the alleged proprietor of a billiard room at 168 Eighth Avenue, and Patrick A. Finch, twenty-five years old, of 313 West Sixteenth Street, who is said to run a similar place at 282 Eighth Avenue, were arrested last night by Detective Keogh of the West Twentieth Street Police Station and locked up, charged with violation of the Sunday law regarding the opening of pool and billiard rooms. Detective Keorgh heard the clicking of ivory balls as he passed the places and arrested the alleged proprietors, the players all escaping. The prisoners were later released on bail, and will be arraigned this morning in the Jefferson Market Police Court.

Woman Rescued from a Negro.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 13.—Early to-night in a thickly settled part of the city a negro man grabbed one of two women who were on their way to church together and was dragging her into an alley when her screams attracted the attention of Policeman Gorman. On the latter's approach the negro fled, but Gorman brought him down with a bullet in the leg and took him to the station house. The negro proved to be James White, who has been in trouble before for similar conduct.

Nurse Would End Her Life.

FREEPORT, L. I., Jan. 13.—Miss Mary King, a nurse employed in the family of W. L. Harvey, at Rockville Centre, attempted suicide to-day by taking acid. Dr. John E. Hutchinson was summoned, and after doing what he could, caused the nurse's removal to the Nassau Hospital, at Hempstead. Her condition is precarious. No reason is known for her act.

BOSSCHIETER MURDER TRIAL.

Selection of the Jury Will Be Speedily Effected—Bets in Paterson on the Verdicts in the Case.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 13.—The trial of the four men accused of the murder of Jennie Bosschieter begins to-morrow morning. The selection of the jury will not take longer than two hours, as it will be selected under the struck jury law. Prosecutor Emley will then open briefly with an outline of the case. Counsel for the accused have not intimated what will be the line of defense. The tenor of the report of Prof. Witthaus, who examined the girl's intestines, has not been made known. It is understand that it will show traces of chloral were discovered. If it does one part of the defense is likely to be an attack upon the report in an attempt to sustain the contention that no drug was administered to the girl, and that if she was stupefied she became so from liquor. It is known that eminent chemists have been consulted, and some engaged to attend the trial. They will coach counsel in the cross-examination of Prof. Witthaus.

Unless there is a long conflict among the chemical experts it is expected that McAllister, Death, and Campbell will know their fate on Saturday, in which event Kerr's case will probably be called on the Monday following.

Many bets are being made in the city over the result of the trial. The odds seem to be three to one that McAllister, Death, and Campbell are found guilty of murder in the second degree, and that Kerr will escape with manslaughter. No one seems to wish to risk money on a bet that the three, or any one of them, will be convicted in the first degree.

PAYNE DIED OF MENINGITIS.

Autopsy Shows No Evidence of Ill-Treatment at the New York Hospital.

Coroner's Physician Williams yesterday notified the police of the West Thirtieth Street Station that the death of John J. Payne in the New York Hospital had been due to cerebral meningitis, caused by typhoid fever. This was revealed by an autopsy.

Payne's friend, Frank Genelay, reiterated his statement that Payne had bruises on both ears and a depression at the back of the skull as though it had been crushed in.

A policeman of the West Thirtieth Street Station made a statement that agreed with Genelay's story, to the effect that Payne, upon entering the hospital, had no such marks of violence.

Superintendent Ludlam of the hospital issued a statement in which he said there was no fracture of the skull, and that Payne died from inflammation of the brain and pneumonia. The case, he said, was originally diagnosed as epilepsy and afterward changed to meningitis.

Genelay practically repeated what he said on Saturday. If he had had cerebral meningitis," he said, "how could he have walked to the hospital that first day? When he went to the hospital he had no bruises, no sunken in skull. Before he died a nurse showed me the marks. Then the Superintendent and the nurse wanted to know where John had received the injuries. I answered that he must have gotten them either in the hospital or on his way there."

Detective Lockwood reported to the police station that Mrs. F. Bergman, owner of the store over which Payne lived, had corroborated Genelay's story, as had a boy working in the place.

MR. WALLACE'S RESIGNATION.

Natural History Museum Officials Refuse to Discuss It.

No information as to why William Wallace had resigned the position of Superintendent of Buildings of the American Museum of Natural History was obtainable at that institution yesterday. Morris K. Jesup, the President, spent the greater part of the afternoon in the board room with Prof. Bumpus, the Curator of the museum. The attendant in the hall refused to take a card to Mr. Jesup, saying that his orders were positive not to open the door of the board room. Later a request was sent in for an interview with Mr. Jesup, and John H. Winser, the Secretary, came out and said:

"Mr. Jesup desires me to say that he has no information to communicate. Mr. Wallace has resigned, and his resignation has been accepted."

"Was Mr. Wallace's resignation expected?"

"Now, I really don't see how all this interests the public. Simply because an employe has resigned, all this fuss is made about it. I can't see any reason for it."

"Mr. Wallace has been here a good many years?"

"Well, what of that? There is a janitor down stairs who has been here a long while, too. Mr. Wallace was merely Superintendent of the building and not of the museum, as some people evidently suppose."

Employes about the building said that Mr. Wallace's resignation came as a surprise, but none of them was willing to express any opinion as to the cause.

"This place is run mighty strict," said one; "if a man does know anything he can't open his mouth about it. We have our orders and are expected to abide by them."

BOTH MET TRAGIC DEATHS.

Mother, Cause of Son's Accidental Shooting, Found Asphyxiated.

Mrs. Martha Mahon, wife of ex-Internal Revenue Collector William Mahon, was found dead in bed at her home yesterday morning. Death was apparently caused by the escape of gas from a radiator.

Mrs. Mahon was forty years old and lived at 602 Bloomfield Street, Hoboken. It is said the gas in the radiator was turned down on Saturday evening so there was only a small flame. In some manner this is supposed to have been blown or gone out, and the escaping gas resulted in death.

Mrs. Mahon was accidentally responsible for the death of her fourteen-year-old son in June last. She was handing a revolver to him that he might kill a cat in the back yard of their home when the weapon went off and the boy was instantly killed.

CHOPPED THE STAIRS DOWN.

Husband Who Made Wife a Prisoner in Their House Now Prisoner in Jail.

HACKENSACK, N. J., Jan. 13.—Frederick Eckenhauser quarreled with his wife yesterday, and while she was upstairs he took and axe and chopped out the lower stairs so that she could not get down. He then left the house, leaving her a prisoner on the upper floor.

Later in the day his wife was taken down by neighbors with the aid of a ladder and caused his arrest. He is now a prisoner in the county jail.

Deputy City Marshal Robbed.

Sidney W. Hochstader and his wife occupy the first floor of the flathouse 206 East One Hundred and Twenty-third Street. Hochstadter, who is a Deputy Assistant City Marshal, was twenty-two years old on Saturday, and the event was celebrated at the home of his parents, 226 East One Hundred and Nineteenth Street. Returning home after midnight, Mr. and Mrs. Hochstadter found the door leading to their apartment ajar. Inside everything was topsy-turvy. Tables and dressers had been the value of $500 taken. ransacked and jewelry and silverware to 400 Japanese Fishermen Missing.

YOKOHAMA, Jan. 13.—It is officially reported that four hundred fishermen are missing, and that they are supposed to have perished in a storm Jan. 10 off the west coast.

Guarding Against Carlists.

MADRID, Jan. 13.—The Spanish Government has decided to send warships to watch the coast of the lower provinces, in order to prevent the importation of arms by the Carlists, who are still agitating.

Spaniards Denounce Bullfights.

BARCELONA, Jan. 13.—A mass meeting was held here to-day, presided over by Señor Erobert, an ex-Mayor, for the purpose of formulating a demand upon the Spanish Government for the suppression of bullfights. Numerous speeches were made, and several of the speakers expressed the hope that the bullfight goon would disappear from the country.

APPROPRIATION BILL READY.

It Will Be Introduced in the Assembly This Evening.

ALBANY, Jan. 18.—The annual appropriation bill which apportions yearly to the several State departments and institutions the public funds needed for their maintenance and operation will be introduced in the Assembly to-morrow evening by Leader Allds, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee. This is the earliest date that the bill has made its appearance at any session of the Legislature. It has been introduced in former years about Feb. 1. The bill has been drafted on estimates furnished the Ways and Means Committee by the heads of the State departments and institutions. There has been an effort to keep the estimates down as much as possible, and many of the departments have asked for less than they did last year. Among the appropriations for which the bill provides are:

For State Factory Inspector, $122,000; State Treasurer, $20,800; Board of Mediation and Arbitration, $16,000; Court of Claims, $29,200; State Prison Commission, $13,000; State Bureau of Labor Statistics, $32,000; State Civil Service Commission, $46,140; State Forest, Fish, and Game Commission, $129,000; Department of Public Works, $925,644; Department of Public Buildings, $219,000; Tax Commission, $66,300; Department of Agriculture, $145,000.

WANTS PRISON PAROLE LAW.

State Commission Declares Present System Is Inoperative.

ALBANY, Jan. 13.—The Legislature is urged by the State Prison Commission in its annual report to enact a new parole law which will be mandatory upon the courts and applicable to State prisons as well as reformatories. The present parole law, so far as it applies to State prisons, is declared by the commission to be practically inoperative. Concerning the benefits to be derived from the proposed legislation, the board says:

"Prisoners committed to indeterminate sentences would more strenuously strive by industry and good behavior to earn a parole while yet in prison. The greater benefit, however, would be after their release. The fact that they were on parole would operate as a restraint, keeping them from returning to evil associations and habits. A prisoner kept in prison until the day of his final discharge and then released without employment or restraint, naturally and almost inevitably drifts back into his former life."

RHODE ISLAND OFFICER SHOT.

Deputy Sheriff Badly Wounded While Trying to Arrest Participants in Cocking Main.

WASHINGTON, R. I., Jan. 13.—A raid on a lot of cock-fighters near this village at 3 o'clock this morning is likely to result in the death of a deputy Sheriff.

Kent County officers made a descent on a roadhouse one and a half miles south of here and surprised over 100 men who had just completed arrangements for a cocking main. The officers, led by an agent of the Anti-Cruelty Society of Providence, entered the house and announced that the men were under arrest. Many escaped, but the names of seventy-five were taken. Of these fifty-eight were permitted to go on condition that they appear in the District Court to-morrow, and the other seventeen were taken to the County Court House, where they paid $22 each.

Some of the officers who had remained outside during the raid opened fire on those who fled. One man was shot in the leg, but escaped. Three men were located at a roadhouse near the scene of the raid. One of the three shot Deputy Sheriff Fish in the abdomen, and it is believed the officer cannot recover. He was taken to the Rhode Island Hospital, where he now lies in a critical condition.

The man who did the shooting is still at large.

MAINE FARMER MURDERED.

Negro and White Man Rob the House After Killing Its Owner and Injuring His Mother.

PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 13.—Thomas C. Moshier, a farmer, aged twenty-five, was murdered, and his mother, Mrs. Rufus Mosbier, aged seventy-two, was brutally assaulted at their home in Gorham Saturday evening, by two men who forced an entrance into the Moshier residence with the evident intention of robbery. The men also ransacked the house, taking what valuables they could find. One of the men was recognized as a negro.

About noon to-day, William Hands, a negro, twenty-five years of age, was arrested at Scarborough, while walking in the direction of Boston. In his possession were found a blood-stained razor marked with Moshier's name, $40 in money, consisting chiefly of bills, which were also stained with blood, and a watch. His hands and clothing were soiled and bloody. The man admits having been at the Moshier farmhouse, and says he left his companion in Portland. The story of the crime, as told by Mrs. Moshier, is as follows:

She and her son had eaten their supper when a knock was heard at the door. No attention was paid to it, as Mrs. Moshier thought the caller might be a man who formerly worked on the farm, and who, it is said, left under somewhat unpleasant circumstances. Soon after the kitchen windows were forced in, and two men, one of whom was a negro, jumped into the room. Moshier grappled with the white man, and the negro knocked down the woman, striking her a terrible blow on the head with a stick. She begged for her life, and, after striking her again, the negro went to the assistance of his comrade. Together they dragged Moshier into the front room. Mrs. Moshier fled to a room off the kitchen, and hid in a closet. The noises soon ceased, and the men went to the cellar for food.

The police of this city were notified, and, going to the farm, the body of Moshier was found in the parlor with his head beaten almost to a jelly. In the house were found two heavy fence stakes, one of which was matted with blood and hair, and had apparently been used to kill Moshier. Everything of value was missing.

TROLLEY COMPANY'S THREATS.

Will Sue for Cars Damaged by Running Into Wagons Crossing Their Tracks.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 13.—John and Joseph Hennion, farmers, brought a suit in the Circuit Court last week against the trolley company for damages. The Hennions sued for injuries received and the wreck of wagons, caused by the carelessness of the motorman, who ran his car at great speed. Attorney Gourley said that the action was one of a number too numerous in character, an annoyance too often in recurrence. He insisted that the car had been running at slow speed, and stopped almost immediately after the collision. The Hennions had been riding fast, and had suddenly darted upon the track while the gong was ringing out a warning. "Why," said the counsel, "if Passaic County jurors allow damages in actions of this kind simply on the unsupported say-so of the plaintiffs, with the weight of the evidence to the contrary, it would seem that but one course remains for the trolley company. It will be necessary to seriously consider whether suits should not be brought immediately against these reckless farmers, who chase about the city streets, for damages caused by their negligence in driving into our cars."

Judge Dixon charged that it was the duty of the motorman to keep a lookout for obstacles in the way. If it appeared likely that a collision might occur it was his duty to bring the car to a standstill. The Hennions, on the other hand, were equally bound to exercise reasonable care. That they did not know the location of the trolley tracks must be considered, but still it must be remembered that in these days all the principal thoroughfares are crossed by the trolley. The car was lighted by electricity, and made conspicuous the approach at least for seventy-five feet. The jury must decide whether the motorman or the Hennions were responsible. If both were jointly responsible, and the collision arose from a joint cause, the verdict must be for the defendants. The jury awarded Joseph Hennion $75, with $25 additional for the wreck of the wagon.

Neufeld Ready to Die.

SING SING, Jan. 13.—William Neufeld, who is to die to-morrow morning for the murder of Mrs. Annie Kronman, in New York, is calm. The execution will take place, probably, before dawn to-morrow, as the witnesses have been bidden for an early hour. Warden Johnson expects Neufeld to offer no resistance and to walk quietly to the chair. He will be accompanied by the Rev. Israel Davidson as spiritual adviser. Rabbi Davidson is the first minister of the Hebrew faith to support a murderer to the chair. The rabbi spent some time with Neufeld to-day.

COMPULSORY PENSION LAW

How Wage-Earners Are Made Provident in Germany.

Must Insure Themselves Against Disability and Old Age—A Report from Ambassador White.

Ambassador White, in a report under date of Dec. 10, 1900, has sent a translation of a note verbale from the German Foreign Office giving the more important provisions of the law relating to compulsory invalid insurance. Those coming under the head of this law, known as the "disability and old-age insurance law," are insured, after the completion of their sixteenth year. They include servants who are working for wages, private teachers and tutors—for instance, male and female private teachers and male and female private tutors, (public teachers do not pay any insurance for giving additional private lessons,) other employes, whose main occupation is that of a servant, and whose annual incomes do not exceed 2,000 marks. Under the term "other employes," the report says, mainly figure those who are employed in public or private institutions or business establishments of every description, as well as officials of the medium class; in the first class, therefore, the actual office personnel, (clerks, registers, circulators;) in the latter, private secretaries, companions, ladies in waiting, &c.

The wage earners are divided into classes. The number of the wage class is decided by the amount of the annual earnings of the insured, whether payment in cash or payment in kind. The law has fixed five wage classes, as follows:

To class 1 belong all persons under obligation to be insured, earning annually not more than 350 marks ($83.30.)
Class 2, those earning annually from 350 to 550 marks ($83.30 to $130.90.)
Class 3, those earning annually from 550 to 850 marks ($130.90 to $202.30.)
Class 4, those earning annually from 850 to 1,150 marks ($202.30 to $273.70.)
Class 5, those earning annually more than 1,150 marks ($273.70.)

The scale of assessments for each class may be seen from the following table:

Wage Class.	One Week. Pfg.	Dols.	Two Weeks. Pfg.	Dols.	Thirteen Weeks. Pfg.	Dols.
1.....	14	.03	28	.01	182	.43
2.....	20	.047	40	.094	260	.018
3.....	24	.057	48	.114	312	.74
4.....	30	.071	60	.142	390	.928
5.....	30	.085	72	.171	468	1.111

The amount of insurance paid out varies, of course, with the premium paid in by any particular class.

In enforcing the payment of the assessment, stress is laid on the fact that even every temporary employment makes the insurance compulsory, in so far as the Bundesrath does not make an exception to this. According to this regulation, compulsory insurance for temporary employment does not, as a rule, exist when performed by persons who do not follow the occupation of laborers and receive wages therefor, and who only do this occasionally when additional help is required, or who perform the work at regular intervals, but only in addition to their other work and against small pay, which for the time of employment would not suffice to pay for their support, and which would not be in comparison with the amount of insurance which would have to be paid for the time. The report goes on:

For deciding the question to which wage class the insured belongs—aside from the exceptions specified—the actual amount earned is not final matter, as the basis of computation, in the case of insured not belonging, as will generally be the case, to the "sickness fund," the annual wages, pursuant to the legal provisions of the "sickness" insurance law of April 10, 1892, is assumed to be three hundred times the amount fixed by the superior administrative authority of the place of employment, as the customary pay in that locality, of the ordinary laboring man or workingwoman by the day.

According to this, the annual wage is fixed at 300x2.70, 810 marks ($192.78) for males for Berlin; these persons, therefore, belong to the third wage class. The annual wages of females to 300x1.50, 450 marks ($107.10;) they, therefore, belong to the second wage class.

Teachers and tutors (female teachers and tutors) belong to the fourth wage class at least, but, whenever it is shown that they have an annual income of more than 1,150 marks, ($273.70,) to the fifth wage class.

In case a fixed amount in cash payment is agreed upon for weeks, months, or years; and if the amount is higher than that given above as the average payment, this payment is to be taken as a basis.

The premium for the insurance may be paid weekly, monthly, or quarterly, and in order to collect the premium a system of stamps is resorted to. The insured is required to provide himself with a receipt card whereon he is to paste the stamps procurable at all Post Offices, which then are receipts for having paid up his premium. These cards are furnished free by the Chief of Police in the circuit in which the employer resides. In case the servant should fail to procure for himself a receipt card, the employer may request that it be issued for the servant. The contributions are to be paid for every week in which the person has been employed under the conditions necessitating insurance for workingmen or servants. The contributions or stamps are to be paid by the employers; they are, however, entitled to deduct one-half of the same from the servants' wages on their payment. The stamps are to be pasted on the receipt card by the employer.

PRIEST RECEIVES A THREAT.

Father McLaughlin of Union Hill Repeats His Warning to Physicians.

Rev. William T. McLaughlin, pastor of St. Augustine's Roman Catholic Church, Union Hill, N. J., announced from the pulpit last Sunday that he would denounce by name any Protestant physician whom he detected trying to prevent Catholics from sending for a priest for dying friends or relatives.

Father McLaughlin said yesterday that, as the result of this announcement, he had received an anonymous letter threatening him with a libel suit. The writer inclosed a newspaper clipping of last Monday, underneath which was written:

And if you do, Reverend, look out for a libel suit which will knock your salary higher than Gilroy's kite. All R. C. Drs. don't believe that a life is spent is worth less than a life just begun. MURPHY'S.

In referring to the letter, which was read from the pulpit yesterday, Father McLaughlin said: "The writer of this communication, if he is a medical man, ought to have signed his name. It would be 'Dr. Cur,' or 'Dr. Coward.' If he or any one else thinks he can by such methods deter a priest from doing his duty, he little knows the obligations of a priest to his people. Let him go ahead with his libel suit; but let him be careful that he doesn't get entangled in the tail of the kite. I repeat again what I said last Sunday, that whenever I find a physician seeking to prevent relatives or friends or patients under their care sending for a priest, I will denounce him from this altar by name."

THIS WEEK IN CONGRESS.

Final Action on the Army Bill Expected —Talk of Night Sessions to Consider Subsidy Measure.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—The Army Reorganization bill will continue to engage the attention of the Senate at least during the first days of the present week. The opinion is quite generally expressed among Senators that the bill will be acted upon by the middle of the week, and even the critics of the measure join in this prediction.

Many phases of the question involved in the Army bill remain to be considered, and the general understanding is that there will still be no little discussion before the bill can be disposed of. The speech of Senator Platt (Rep., Conn.,) on Friday last in defense of the bill on general principles will call for replies, and there are also special features which will require more or less attention. Among these are Senator Daniel's (Dem., Va.,) amendment concerning the appointment of volunteers to offices in the regular army, the question of the disposition of officers who have held staff positions, and the provision for the enlistment of Filipinos in the American Army. The disposal of all these questions undoubtedly will fill the first two or three days of the week.

Senator Allison (Rep., Ia.,) intends to call up the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation bill when the Army bill is acted on, but whether this and other appropriation bills to follow it shall occupy the exclusive attention of the Senate so long as they are on the calendar is a question which has not yet been absolutely determined. The present indications are, however, that the appropriation bills will be considered in advance of all other measures whenever they are before the Senate.

When there are no appropriation bills to be taken up, the Ship Subsidy bill will be discussed. There are still numerous speeches to be made upon this measure, and already there is talk of night sessions for its consideration when it is taken up. There is little in the Legislative bill to arouse discussion, but there is a possibility that Senators hostile to the Subsidy bill may use the Appropriation bill for the purpose of delay.

Next Saturday will be devoted to eulogies in memory of the late Senator Gear.

A programme of miscellaneous matters will occupy the attention of the House during the coming week. The River and Harbor bill, which was debated for three days last week, will consume one, and possibly two, days. Although the bill was criticised very severely during the debate last week, it is in no danger of failure. Most of the attacks came from members who were disappointed in what the bill grants to their localities, and the actual opponents of the measure will be overwhelmed when the final vote is reached.

The District of Columbia Committee, which under the rules would be entitled to to-morrow, will demand a day later in the week if they give way to the River and Harbor bill to-morrow. After the latter bill is disposed of the bill to revise and codify the postal laws will be taken up under a special order. It will be followed by the District of Columbia Appropriation bill and the latter in turn by the Post Office Appropriation bill, if there is any remaining time.

BOTH CLAIM HORSE AND WAGON.

Peculiar Business Transactions Disclosed in Yorkville Court.

Hyman Godolfski, twenty-two years old, of 337 East Seventy-fourth Street, was arraigned in the Yorkville Court before Magistrate Olmsted yesterday morning. Morris Brodsky of 30 Suffolk Street appeared as complainant and charged Godolfski with grand larceny, claiming that a horse and wagon in possession of the latter belonged to him. Godolfski declared he bought the horse and wagon in New London, Conn., for $25, and had several witnesses present to testify to the genuineness of the purchase.

According to Brodsky's story, a man whom he had never seen before came to his stable at 30 Suffolk Street on Oct. 24 last and hired a horse and wagon for the day, promising to return the team at 7 o'clock that evening and pay $1.75 for its use. Brodsky did not ask the man his name, and the latter never returned.

While standing at the corner of Ninety-ninth Street and Lexington Avenue Saturday afternoon Brodsky saw Godolfski drive by with the team for which he had been so long looking. He called a policeman and had Godolfski placed under arrest.

When the case was called in court yesterday Godolfski had forgotten the name of the man from whom he had purchased the horse and wagon and the receipt the man gave him was lost, he said. In moving from New London to New York.

Magistrate Olmsted remarked that it was a queer way of doing business all around, hiring horses to people without securing their names and buying horses in the same way. He discharged Godolfski and told Brodsky he would have to get his team through the civil courts.

ENTERED DEAD WOMAN'S FLAT.

Colored Man Was Captured After an Exciting Chase.

Since Mrs. Clara Lee, a dressmaker, committed suicide in her flat, at 241 West Thirty-fifth Street, last Wednesday, no one has appeared to claim her property, and for that reason the Public Administrator has taken charge of the flat. On Saturday morning the flat was entered by Charles Randolph, a colored man.

The Public Administrator had placed a padlock on the door, which Randolph unlocked with a key. The ordinary lock which secured the door he forced, breaking the door in doing so. Mrs. Catherine Quinn, the janitress of the house, heard the noise, and hurried upstairs. She found Randolph in the dead woman's rooms, and was threatened with violence if she made any outcry. She was defiant, however, and Randolph ran to the street and to Eighth Avenue, where he boarded a north-bound electric car.

Mrs. Quinn's screams told passers-by that something was wrong, and they started after the fleeing man. Randolph, at Thirty-ninth Street, seeing he was pursued, jumped from the car and ran through Thirty-ninth Street to Ninth Avenue, and then north to Forty-first Street. He was captured by Policeman George Issing of the West Thirty-seventh Street Police Station.

In the West Side Police Court yesterday morning Randolph was held in $1,000 bail by Magistrate Hogan on a charge of burglary.

TRAVELING SALESMAN ARRESTED.

Mentz Said to be Wanted in Pittsburg for a Jewelry Robbery.

Louis Mentz, a traveling salesman of 122 East One Hundredth Street, with offices at 35 Maiden Lane, was arraigned in the Centre Street Police Court yesterday and held in bail of $3,000 by Magistrate Mayo for further examination. Mentz is charged with being a fugitive from justice, and is said to be wanted in Pittsburg for alleged complicity in a jewelry robbery there last July. He furnished bail and was released, leaving the court room hurriedly, and refusing to make any statement.

Mentz was arrested late Saturday evening at his office. It is declared that he was detected selling some of the stolen jewelry in Buffalo, and that he was arrested here on request of Chief O'Mara of the Pittsburg police.

WOUNDED MAN ACCUSES WIFE.

She Denies She Shot Him, and Says He Ill-Treated Her.

Mrs. Maria Maidt, a young woman, was held by Magistrate Zeller in the Harlem Police Court yesterday to await the result of her husband's injuries. The husband, Frederick, is now in the Harlem Hospital with a bullet wound in his left breast.

Maidt, who is about thirty years old, lived with his wife and three children at 2,291 Second Avenue. The husband got home late Saturday evening somewhat the worse for liquor, according to the wife, who in court yesterday declared that her husband choked and beat her and then threatened to shoot her. Mrs. Maidt ran into the street for assistance. With Policeman Kenny of the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street Station she returned to her rooms. The husband lay on the floor unconscious, blood oozing from his breast. Nearby lay a revolver.

The policeman agreed with Mrs. Maidt that it looked like a case of attempted suicide, but later, at the hospital, Maidt told Kenny that it was his wife who had inflicted the bullet wound. A charge of felonious assault was preferred against the wife, who denied her husband's story of the shooting.

SINGING SOCIETIES RESIGN.

Twelve Withdraw from the United Singers of Brooklyn—The Organization's New Officers.

At a meeting of the United Singers of Brooklyn, which had in charge the singing festival last year in the Thirteenth Regiment Armory, the resignations of twelve societies were read and were deferred for action until the next meeting of the singers. The societies which express a desire to withdraw are: Williamsburg Saengerbund, Olive Quartette, Central Quartette, Brooklyn Quartette, Redmen's Liedertafel, Bakers' Gesang Verein, Germania Alpine Roeschen, Cecilia of Bushwick, Harmerina Quartette, Haydn Mannerchor, and the Greater New York Liedertafel.

All these resignations grew out of dissatisfaction at the awarding of points for singing at the festival. An effort, it is said, will be made to keep the societies in the organization.

Before the meeting adjourned, the following officers were chosen for the year:

President—August H. Tiemann; First Vice President—Dr. W. John Schildge; Recording Secretary—Emil Rose; Corresponding Secretary—Bernhard Klein; Financial Secretary—Henry Floch; Treasurer—John Hummell; Librarian—Vincenz Mink; Trustees—Adam Schilg and Frank Kinzinger, Director—Arthur Claassen. Honorary President—S. K. Saenger, the retiring President.

GEORGE KLINGELHOEFER DEAD.

German Veteran of 1848 Passes Away at the Age of 79 Years.

George Klingelhoefer, for many years a gunsmith, died Saturday at his home, 187 Graham Avenue, Brooklyn. Mr. Klinkelhoefer was born in Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, seventy-nine years ago, and joined the army at an early age. During the uprising in 1848 he played a prominent part. After the disturbance was quelled he came alone to this country and immediately settled in Williamsburg, and later carried on business in the old City of New York. During the draft riots in 1862 he transferred his gunsmith business to Williamsburg.

Mr. Klinkelhoefer was an expert shot and held many medals, and was prominently identified with shooting organizations. At the time of his death he belonged to the Brooklyn, E. D., Schuetzen Corps and the Williamsburg Schuetzen Gesellschaft, as well as the Williamsburg Saengerbund, Diogenes Lodge, 208, I. O. O. F., and the Williamsburg Germania K. F. V. Mr. Klingelhoefer's wife died four years ago. One son survives him. The funeral will take place to-morrow and the burial will be in the Lutheran Cemetery.

PRETENDED TO TAKE ACID.

Woman's "Bluff," After Quarrel with Husband, Led to Her Arrest.

Because her husband had upbraided her and found fault with his Sunday dinner, Mrs. Anna McDonald, twenty-eight years old, of 2,458 Eighth Avenue, yesterday afternoon feigned an attempt to commit suicide with carbolic acid, and is now a prisoner on that charge in the West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Police Station.

Mrs. McDonald's husband, John, declared the dinner was not fit to eat, and putting on his hat, left the house. Mrs. McDonald then took a bottle of carbolic acid and placed it against her lips, which were blistered by a few drops of the acid. Then she screamed, and her children, becoming terrified, ran into the street where they told Policeman Ozab of the West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Station, that their mother had poisoned herself.

He summoned an ambulance from the J. Hood Wright Hospital, and the case was explained to Dr. Fox. The woman was taken to the station house in an ambulance and locked up.

FIGHT ON A FERRYBOAT.

Two Men Say that a Gang Assaulted and Tried to Rob Them.

As the ferry boat Vermont of the Grand Street line was coming into her slip, at the foot of Grand Street, early yesterday morning, a free fight was in progress among the passengers. The deck hands called Policeman Knowles, and he arrived in time to find two men cut about the face and shouting for help. They wanted the policeman to arrest three men who had run down Grand Street, but the men were so far away that there was no hope of reaching them.

The patrolman took the injured men to the station house, where they said they were Herman Hymes, a dealer in crockery, living at 222 Rivington Street, and Jacob Heschcowitz, a tailor of 244 Madison Street. They said they had been assaulted by a gang of toughs just as the boat was coming into her slip.

According to the stories told by Hymes and Heschcowitz, the gang tried to get their watches and money, but failed.

FIRE DROVE THEM OUT.

Men in Hotel Had Narrow Escape—Cat the Only Victim.

Five men were driven by fire from the Crotonia Hotel, at 1,856 Boston Avenue, early yesterday morning, narrowly escaping with their lives. The fire was discovered by Night Superintendent Weyler of the Union Railroad Company, whose power house is opposite the hotel. It had burned almost to the second floor, and Weyler had great difficulty in arousing the boarders, who, with William Trainor, the proprietor, got out in their nightclothes.

The only life lost was that of a Maltese cat in the kitchen. The loss was $1,000.

Simeon Bisgood Dead.

Simeon Bisgood, who was found unconscious near the Park wall, on Central Park West, near Eighty-sixth Street, on Saturday night, died yesterday morning in Roosevelt Hospital. He was stricken with apoplexy while out for a walk. Mr. Bisgood was seventy-three years old and lived at 170 Seventh Street. He was born in Ireland, and coming to this country enlisted in the United States Army when a young man. He retired from the army with the rank of Sergeant, after having served fifty-seven years.

THE GRIPPE.
seems to be epidemic, attacking both old and young, rich and poor alike. It cannot be prevented. The best thing to do is to go to bed at once, consult your Doctor, and as soon as you get over the acute attack, commence the use of SCOTT'S EMULSION. That will restore the vitality, and prevent Pneumonia or Bronchitis. It is a natural remedy.

AN EAST SIDE TRAGEDY.

Witnesses Say Man Found with Fractured Skull Was Thrown Out of Fourth Floor Window.

John Bellinette, a barber, twenty-four years old, living at 44 Oliver Street, is lying in a critical condition in Gouverneur Hospital with a fractured skull. He is said to have been thrown out of a fourth-story window, and five persons are under arrest in connection with the affair.

Shortly before midnight on Saturday, Patrolman Edward J. O'Rourke of the Madison Street Station found the injured man in the yard of 22 Hamilton Street. Timothy Hayes and John Delaney of 134 Cherry Street, which is directly in the rear of 22 Hamilton Street, informed the patrolman that about 11:30 o'clock they heard cries for help coming from the fourth floor of 22 Hamilton Street. They went to their windows and saw, they allege, a man being thrown out of the window where the noise came from. While they were still at the window they saw a man stoop over the body of the injured man and take his overcoat and hat.

Patrolman O'Rourke arrested Salvatore Adriate and his wife, Theresa, and another woman named Philamina Perchaine, who were found in the rooms from one window of which it was alleged the injured man was thrown. On a bed were found a coat and hat, which, the policeman says, are the property of Bellinette. The prisoners protested their innocence of any wrongdoing. They denied that there was any quarrel in their rooms, and said they did not know who the injured man was.

In the Essex Market Court yesterday, Magistrate Brann held them without bail to await the result of the man's injuries.

Later Detectives Shea and Sheehan of the Madison Street Station, who had been put upon the case, arrested Raphael Cresanzo and Francisco Rimardo. These men also were in the room at the time Bellinette was injured.

During the afternoon the grandfather of the injured man went to Gouverneur Hospital and identified him. Bellinette recovered consciousness for a few minutes at 8 o'clock last night. The nurse attending him said that he then told her his name was John Miller and that he lived at 66 William Street. The police, in view of the grandfather's identification, put this down as an incoherent statement.

Detective Sheehan says Bellinette was once sentenced to seven years for perjury, but his term was shortened owing to his good behavior. From what the detectives have been able to learn, Bellinette and Cresanzo quarreled on Saturday night. The latter accused Bellinette of cheating him out of some money, and Bellinette, on Cresanzo threatening to kill him, tried to escape from the room by the fire-escape and was either thrown or fell off.

PAIR OF SHOES HIS WARDROBE.

Bellevue Patient in a Queer Predicament Waiting for Some One Owning Clothes to Die.

Although his discharge certificate from Bellevue Hospital was given to him on Saturday, Robert Winfield, a colored man, is unable to take advantage of it and leave that institution, because his wardrobe consists only of a pair of shoes, more or less run down at the heel.

Winfield on Dec. 20 was taken to Bellevue from 149 West Twenty-sixth Street by an ambulance from the New York Hospital. He was suffering from acute indigestion, and was taken from his bed to the ambulance. He wore only a nightshirt and a pair of shoes, which had been thrust on his feet by the ambulance attendants. After his arrival at the hospital his nightshirt was removed and sent to the laundry, one of the hospital garments being substituted for it. His own nightshirt was lost, and when Winfield got his discharge this fact became known.

"Why, boss," said Winfield, when the certificate was given to him and he realized its import, "I can't go out in the cold world like this. I ain't got no clothes here to wear."

He was told he would have to get some, and he then dispatched a note to Mrs. Angelina Bird, who lives at 149 West Twenty-sixth Street. In this note Winfield expressed himself as follows:

Please send me my clothes. Ain't got no money, so s'pose I needn't come around.

Late yesterday afternoon a little black girl arrived with a note for him. It was from Mrs. Bird, and informed her erstwhile boarder that "two swell-looking colored ladies" had called at the house and said they were relatives of Winfield, and declared they had come for his clothing, as they were going to have it cleaned, mended, and pressed.

"It ain't no use," moaned Winfield, when she continued to inform him that the two "swell colored ladies" had failed to return with their alleged relative's clothing. "I ain't got no clothes and no friends. That woman sure did treat me bad. Do you s'pose I believe that story? What'd two swell colored ladies do comin' to get my clothes?"

An effort was made in the hospital last night to find a suit of clothes for him, but up to a late hour had not been successful.

"I've just got to lay here," said Winfield, "until some of these here 'unknown men' die; then maybe I'll get somethin' to wear that's warmer than a smile and this here old pair of shoes."

Solid Gold Life Size Statue of Maude Adams On Exhibition Here.

The solid gold life size statue of Maude Adams that created such a sensation at the Paris Exposition is now on view in our Upholstery department—third floor of main building.
This magnificent work of art contains nothing but 14-carat California gold—the largest quantity of the precious metal that has ever been seen in a single mass. It was modelled by the gifted American sculptress, Miss Bessie Potter, at whose studio Miss Adams posed for several months—and afterward finished by Tiffany's most skillful experts. An impressive and majestic figure wrought of purest gold to typify the simple grace and charm of our National womanhood. Be sure to see it.

ST. ANDREW'S BAY RANGE BEACON LIGHTS.

Notice is hereby given, by order of the Lighthouse Board, that, on or about Feb. 8, 1901, the following-described lights will be established at the entrance to St. Andrew's Bay from the Gulf of Mexico:

St. Andrew's Bar Range Beacon Lights.—Front Light—A fixed red lens-lantern light, 27 feet above the water, on the brown mast standing on the beach inside the entrance, between the Crooked and Hurricane Islands, to St. Andrew's Bay from the Gulf: The approximate geographical position of the light, as taken from Chart No. 184 of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, will be: Latitude, north, 30 degrees 4 minutes 14 seconds; longitude, west, 85 degrees 36 minutes 36 seconds.

Rear Light—A fixed white lens-lantern light, 45 feet above the water, on the brown mast, on shore, 600 feet (1-10 mile) NE. by N. in rear of the preceding. The approximate geographical position of the light, as taken from the above-named chart, will be: Latitude, north, 30 degrees 4 minutes 18 seconds; longitude, west, 85 degrees 36 minutes 32 se

Sale of SILVER and Silver-Plate

MONTHS ago we began preparations for this Annual Sale which was such a success a year ago. It has been no easy task. The manufacture of good silverware is more carefully conducted than it was in the past. And we will have none of the unworthy sorts. Trade conditions and events have been closely watched, and vigilance has been rewarded. So jealous of the market conditions are the large manufacturing interests that rather than let surplus stocks of their fine wares go on sale at a bargain they will melt them for the metal. One such splendid lot of plated ware is here, because the manufacturers agreed that the prompt distribution afforded by the Wanamaker stores would do no harm to the value of their regular lines. Our previous transactions have proved that.

Among the various conditions that made this sale possible are these:

1. The annual clearance of our own stock previous to inventory; and to make room for new goods.
2. The purchase for cash of four complete patterns of Rogers' spoons, forks, servers, etc., discontinued during the last year. This was the largest transaction ever consummated in this class of goods. (These are from the original Rogers' Bros., who made the name famous, and are not to be confounded with the goods of makers who use the name on most unworthy goods made for bargain purposes.)
3. The purchasing for cash of the stock made available by the closing out of the Western salesrooms of a large manufacturer.
4. The purchase for cash of the stock of three manufacturers of sterling silver.
5. The purchase of the surplus stocks of several of the largest factories manufacturing silver-plated table ware.

Every transaction has been with makers of high repute. None but high grade silverware has been bought. Not a piece is here that is unworthy of the best store in America. The change of patterns is vital to manufacturers, but of indifferent value to purchasers; because of the long service of silverware, which makes no distinction between the patterns of last year and this, a few years later.

Every piece is refined and artistic in style; of high intrinsic value; and the variety is so vast that every taste can be satisfactorily met.

Prices Are a QUARTER to a HALF Under Value

The display is elaborate, occupying all the main aisles of the main floor on the Broadway side, with an annex store in the basement.

TWIN SUCCESSES

Opera Cloaks and Plush Overgarments

With steady step as if to the tune of the march in Lohengrin have the Opera Cloaks kept up their stately movement from Paris to our cloak store, and out again to you and you and you. The collection remains rich in colors: hussar red, ivory white, pale lavender, pastel blue, pearl gray—nearly all the colors at each grade of price. And the pace hurries as reduced prices make double quick time.

Have you halted at the prices? Pause no more. The $70 cloaks are $45, the $43.50 cloaks are $30, the $30 cloaks are $20.

If we should add descriptions of linings and quiltings, Thibet fur and embroidering, you would, we are sure, hasten to make an early selection. But each has its own distinction; no common type marks the lines. And how can Paris cloaks, ample as elegant, be sold at the prices? That's our affair, yours to enjoy them.

And that other success—it is twins. Jackets and capes of heavy velvet plush. Never, to our knowledge, has there been a fabric of equal innate richness. Splendid constructive art has formulated the material into garments that silence criticism—they are beyond it.

The Jackets! Jets, braids, furs, chenille are serfs to the sumptuous velvet, heavy figured silks make the revers, form and finish are worthy of stuff and trimming and the result—unmatched distinction. Prices follow the Opera Cloaks—the reductions almost insult the garments. $95 to $60, $75 to $40, $38.50 to $20. What more can be said?

Capes, also! Equal art has been expended on them. Some are velour with silk, or embroidery, or fur. Some are silk with velour applique. You don't expect us to pay the printer his great prices for excessive description while we make losses of good money in reductions! One-third goes off. And that means that a week since the cost to you would have been one-half more.

LINENS
For All Uses—Pure, Cheap

Rarely are conditions more favorable to the consumer than those under which this sale is conducted. Of chief importance, the very low prices. Sharp reductions on prices already more than moderate offer most substantial savings. And that is really important were it not for the additional noteworthy fact that those new lowered prices stand only for new, pure, honest linens. Another feature that will not fail of appreciation is the excellent assortment. Wide choosing in housekeeping linens, of many grades, from which these lines:

Table Linen—
45c yd.—German; cream white; 60 in. wide; serviceable and very neat. Regularly 60c.
75c yd.—Scotch, bleached; 72 in. wide; a handsome linen that should sell for not less than $1.
90c yd.—Belgian, bleached; 69 in. wide; of silky flax susceptible of high polish. Was $1.25.

Dinner Cloths—
Irish damask, bleached; a broken assortment, in which these sizes are still in good supply: 2x2½ yds., $2.75 instead of $3.75 each; 2x3 yds., $3.25 instead of $4.50 each; 2½x2½ yds., $4.50 instead of $9 each; 2½x3 yds., $5.75 instead of $10.25 each.
Dinner Napkins to match some patterns, 26 in. square, $4.00 instead of $6.75 dozen.

Napkins—
$2.40 a dozen—Irish bleached damask; 22x22 in.; were $3; 24x24 in.; $2.90 a dozen; were $3.75.
Fourth avenue.

Napkins—
$2.75 a dozen—Scotch bleached double damask; 24x24 in.; were $3.75.

Towels—
10c each—Fringed huckaback; 18x36 in.; imported; a bargain at 12½c each.
25c each—Bleached German damask; assorted borders and knotted fringe; were 35c on Saturday.
50c each—Hemstitched huckaback, with damask combination pattern of clover; very soft, heavy quality; 24x45 in.; our regular price for this towel is 65c.

Bath Mats—
35c—Large Turkish bath mats; 8 colorings; regularly 60c.

Bed Linen—
$1.50 each—Fine linen sheets, hemstitched; from Germany; soft finish, splendid wearing quality; ¾-bed size; 72x90 in.; usually sold at $1.75. Full bed size, 90x94 in., $1.75 each; usually sold at $2.25.
42½c each—Linen pillow cases; 22x36 in.; usually sold at 50c.

New Offerings in the Under-price Store

Read the little list below. It may contain something of particular interest. It will pay you to look for the announcement regularly. New lots of desirable goods at very little prices are added daily:

Bohemian Glass Ware—
Principally vases. A broad variety of shapes, sizes and rich decorations. The prices are about half to one-third actual value: 15c from 25c; 40c from 75c; 50c from $1; $2.50 from $3.50; $2.75 from $4.
Also some water sets—pitcher and 6 glasses, at $1.75, instead of $3; $1.50, instead of $2.50.

Candy, Candy Boxes, Mottoes
Various lots reduced in price. The mixed candies are of the same grade that we sell regularly at 30c—a very moderate price. These are 25c. Candy boxes, doll shapes, at 25c—values 50c and $1. Snapping mottoes at 50c, instead of $1.

Globe Corsets and Girdles—
A well-known, well-liked brand. Both corsets and girdles are of excellent coutil, the former with low bust and short over hips. The regular price is $1 for either corsets or girdles, but now reduced to 75c.

Sheet Music, 5c and 10c—
They are mostly in fairly good condition—not quite perfect; the covers soiled a little. Many popular melodies in the two groups. Choice from one lot 5c; from the other 10c.

Drapery Stuffs at Half—
Remnants: The prices here quoted are just half regular value.
Sash muslins—1 to 5 yards in length—at 9c to 20c a yard.
Irish Point Lace—1 to 5 yards in length—at 20c to 75c a yard.
Cretonnes—1 to 3 yards in length—13c to 63c a yard.
Denims, Tickings and Printed Cretonnes—1 to 4 yards in length—at 8c to 13c a yard.

Women's Dressing Sacques
Of flannelette. One lot at 35c—were 50c. They are in neat stripes, with gathered ruffles of solid color. The other group comprises 6 attractive styles, values $1 to $1.75—now 75c each.

Pin Cushions Reduced—
About fifty prettily trimmed pin cushions, hardly fresh, but not seriously mussed; at 50c for 75c and $1 kinds; $1 for kinds that sell regularly at $1.50 to $2.25.

25c Papeteries at 15c Box—
Some with portrait designs on covers. Also small note paper with envelopes, in neat boxes. Moderately priced at 25c—now 15c.

Fast Flying Virginian, or Florida Special: Which?

Either is a golden winged excursion. Preparation begins at Wanamaker's—probably in the millinery. Early spring hats of chiffon, straw or felt, full trimmed, are ready, or will be trimmed to order.

The suit stock has many harbingers. If you are a south-bound woman you'll need some harbingers—organdie and point d'esprit dresses, actual novelties—bewitching with ribbons, lace and embroidery. No duplicates.

Why do the great private milliners and the great millinery retailers come here for so many models? No duplicates. Why do our alleged competitors in millinery so often buy our trimmed hats to sell again? No duplicates. Why do so many fashion leaders of individual tastes buy their hats here? No duplicates.

Individuality. There is no trust in taste. Corporations of originality and beauty will never be chartered. Over all our great stocks of articles for women's decorative wear we put the impress of singleness, individuality. And so the wise and prudent know this great organization to be a concentration of exclusiveness in style and styles.

The lawn neckwear is another readiness for the south-bound. From Paris, beautiful, the touch of finish to a costume But women know and the man scribe finds brain and fingers palsied and paralyzed over such topics.

The trains leave at 12.40 and 4.55 P. M., but Wanamaker's is at your command for ten continuous hours daily—Sundays excepted.

BILLIARD CHAMPIONSHIP

Class A Amateurs to Contest at Knickerbocker Athletic Club.

TO PLAY TWO GAMES DAILY

National Association Amateur Tournament Will Start To-night at Hanover Club in Brooklyn.

The Class A tourney for the amateur billiard championship of America will be given under the auspices of the Amateur Athletic Union in the theatre of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club next month.

The opening game is scheduled for Feb. 5, at 8 P. M. Thereafter two games will probably be played daily, at 2 P. M. and 8 P. M., until the tourney is finished. The games will be of 400 points each at the 18-inch balk-line, with the anchor position barred.

The winner of the tourney will subsequently play a game of 500 points with the present champion, Wilson P. Foss of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club, for the emblem representing the amateur billiard championship of America, won by him in the Class A tournament, held in February, 1900. This trophy, valued at $1,000, will become the property of the player winning it three times.

The prizes offered this year for the Class A tournament are strikingly novel and beautiful.

It is impossible to state at this early date just who will certainly make up the completed list of contestants for "Class A" championship honors in February, 1901, as the entries do not close for some time yet; and unexpected contestants may decide to play at the last moment. The list will probably include, however, Threshie, Cutler, and Schmitt, as representatives of Boston; L. L. Mial, Charles S. Norris, and J. A. Hendrick, as representatives of the Knickerbocker A. C., and C. F. Conklin of Chicago.

In the last "Class A" tourney, every contestant but Messrs. Foss and McCreery recognized the fact that they had no probable chance for first or second prize, and but a small chance for the prizes offered for high run or the high single average. The best any of them hoped for was to capture the third prize, which F. DeMun Smith succeeded in wresting from Charles Threshie in spite of the fact that the single average, grand average, and high run of Smith were lower than those of Threshie. Dr. L. L. Mial made the second high run of that tourney (60). Mr. Threshie, in one game, made the audience believe that his single average was destined to break the world's amateur record in 100 points at the fourteen-inch balkline game; but he slipped up at the close of the game through some unfortunate misses.

In the "Class A" of this year these conditions will not exist. All the prospective contestants are so evenly matched that every game of the tourney will be in doubt until the final shot is made.

The new contestant, Charles S. Norris, is regarded by many as a "dark horse" in the race. He showed enough speed and cool courage and coolness under pressure when he lately won the Knickerbocker A. C. championship that his friends think he will prove a hard man for any amateur to defeat before such a critical audience as will be gathered to witness the "Class A" games.

J. A. Hendrick of the Knickerbocker A. C. has already defeated A. G. Cutler of Boston three successive times in "Class B" contests—twice in 1899 and once in 1900. Cutler, on the other hand, defeated his Boston rival, Charles Threshie, last Winter by six points in a match of one thousand points; hence there is another old score to be settled in "Class A" next February before the billiard enthusiasts of Boston will be satisfied.

Norris has lately defeated Mial and Hendrick; and last year Mial defeated Conklin.

The handicap tournament now in progress at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club will be concluded this week, two games being played each night in the X, Y, Z class series. The games have been productive of considerable interest among the club members, and some of the games have shown a fair degree of amateur ability. The victor of each class will finish the match by playing one another for the all-around club handicap championship.

Frank A. Keeney and Arthur R. Townsend will open the tournament this evening at the Hanover Club, Brooklyn, of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players. This will be the most important amateur billiard contest of the season, until the Class A championship, under the auspices of the Amateur Athletic Union, to be held next month in the Knickerbocker Athletic Club. The Association of Amateur Billiard Players was organized about three years ago by several seceders from the Amateur Athletic Union, and the best billiard players in the association will be seen in the tournament this week.

There were six entries in all, but it is probable that only five will play, as J. Byron Stark, one of the most brilliant players in the amateur ranks, is liable to withdraw on account of ill-health. It was reported last week that he has been in poor health recently, and, believing that he would be unable to live up to his ability as a tournament player, his withdrawal may be announced to-night. The other competitors, in addition to the players this evening are Ferdinand Poggenburg, Frank C. Gardner, and Edward W. Gardner.

Poggenburg is the favorite, but he is not expected to win without a hard struggle, and some brilliant exhibitions with the cue are looked forward to by billiard enthusiasts this week. Frank Keeney is the former Crescent Athletic Club champion, but he enters the present tourney from the Oxford Club. The two Gardners are said to be playing an exceptionally strong game, and are quite likely to prove formidable opponents for the championship. Edward McLaughlin will referee all the games.

PHYSICAL EDUCATORS MEET.

Preparations Made for the Coming Convention of the National Association in This City.

The Convention Committee of the New York Physical Education Society, which is in charge of the arrangements for the biennial meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Physical Education, to be held in this city on the 18th, 19th, and 20th of April, met Saturday afternoon, at the Dr. Savage Institute of Physical Culture, 310 West Fifty-ninth Street, and organized, with the following officers: Chairman—Dr. Watson L. Savage, Columbia University; Secretary—J. Blake Hillyer, Staten Island, N. Y.; Corresponding Secretary—Dr. George W. Sitz, Boston, Mass.; Treasurer—Miss MacMartin, Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Dr. Gustav Schoeler, New York Turn Verein, New York City; Dr. Luther Gulick, Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Dr. Henry Ling Taylor, New York City, and Dr. Matilda Wallen, New York City.

Chairmen of sectional committees were appointed, as follows: Anthropometry, Dr. A. Boas, Columbia University, New York City; Colleges and Secondary Schools, Dr. R. Tait McKenzie, McGill University, Montreal, Canada; Elementary Schools, Miss J. H. Barcroft, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Normal Schools of Physical Culture, Dr. Winfield S. Hall, Northwestern University, Chicago; Playgrounds and Games, Dr. Luther Gulick, Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The following special committees were appointed: Ways and Means, Dr. Watson L. Savage; Exhibitions, Dr. Henry L. Taylor; Reception, J. Blake Hillyer.

An interesting feature of the convention will be the display of the entire exhibit of the New York public school system at the recent Paris Exhibition. The New York Society will meet next Saturday evening at the Savage Institute to receive the reports of the various committees.

Brooklyn Athletic Club Election.

The annual election of the Brooklyn Athletic Club was held at the clubhouse of the organization, on Bedford Avenue, near Fifth Street, Brooklyn, on Saturday night. Three hundred and thirty-seven votes were cast. The club showed a balance of $ on hand and no debts. The following were the successful candidates and the votes they polled:

Corinthian Yacht Club Officers.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Jan. 13.—Alexander Van Rensselaer, owner of the steam yacht May, was unanimously re-elected Commodore of the Corinthian Yacht Club at the ninth annual meeting of that organization, held at the Hotel Bellevue last night. All the Commodores of the club made their annual reports, and it was revealed that the organization was in an exceedingly healthy condition, both numerically and financially. There are now over one hundred yachts flying the club pennant. Covers were laid for eighty persons at the annual banquet, which followed. Among the guests of the club were: Admiral Bachler, United States Navy; Capt. J. W. Forsythe, United States Navy; Dr. Blackwood, United States Navy, and the Hon. William Potter.

The other officers elected in addition to Commodore Van Rensselaer were: Vice Commodore Robert J. W. Koons, schooner Priscilla; Rear Commodore E. Walter Clark, Jr., sloop Cherokee; Secretary Addison F. Bancroft; Treasurer George E. Kirkpatrick; Measurer Albert C. Wood; Race Committee, Addison F. Bancroft, Harvey J. Mitchell, and Kern Dodge.

Brooklyn Canoe Club Reunion.

The annual reunion, dinner, and election of the Brooklyn Canoe Club were held on Saturday night at the Clarendon Hotel, Brooklyn. The reports of the committees and officers for the year showed the organization to be in good condition, with no outstanding liabilities and a substantial balance. The following officers were chosen:

Commodore—Robert J. Wilkin; Vice Commodore—C. Valentine Schuyler; Purser—W. McK. Miller; Measurer—F. V. Henshaw; Chairman of House Committee—Percy F. Hogan; Chairman of Entertainment Committee—Samuel J. Bennett.

CROSS-COUNTRY RUNNING.

Four Harriers Broke Through the Ice in the Williamsburg Run.

There came near being a fatal ending to the cross-country run of the Williamsburg Athletic Association, which was held yesterday morning from the clubhouse. The course was toward Laurel Hill, taking in old Bushwick and a portion of Maspeth, L. I. Coming home my way of the Cooper homestead estate, a portion of the pack essayed to cut across the Cooper Pond. Their combined weight was too much for the ice, and it broke through. Then Joseph E. Reydell, who was in the lead and who did not know of his clubmates' predicament, made such good use of his long lead that he won by over 100 yards. In the meanwhile the rest of the pack had fished a quartet of runners from their icy bath, after great efforts, and the four athletes, nearly frozen, were taken to the clubhouse and thawed out, all hands taking turns in restoring the men to their normal condition. They finally recovered and were taken to their homes.

Nearly thirty runners participated in the run of the Brooklyn Athletic Club, held yesterday morning from the club grounds, at Maspeth, L. I., and some good sport was enjoyed. John C. Doyle was first home; J. J. Donnelley, second; Frank Veres, third, and Christopher J. Kenny, fourth. Time—52:28½.

William D. Wynne, the Captain of the National Athletic Club, won the cross-country run of the club, held yesterday from Maspeth, L. I. Six miles of the surrounding country was covered by the hardy athletes, and fast time was made. Anthony L. McKeever came in second, William J. Kirkwood, third; John J. Holt, fourth, and Thomas L. Brophy, fifth. Time—51:11.

One of the liveliest runs of the day was that of the Montauk Harriers, which went over a portion of the famous old Bay Ridge trail. The route covered a trifle over six miles in length. William M. Brown was the first runner in. He was followed in close order by Henry J. McTighe, B. E. Richardson, Henry B. Gannon, John F. Gordon, John J. Bennett, L. E. Richardson, D. C. McTighe, F. J. Gordon, Henry F. Brown, E. W. Ernest, Michael L. Murphy, John J. Kelley, Edwin J. French, Hugh Kelley, and William M. Grantlet. Time—49:51½.

Over in Long Island City, the Star Athletic Club held one of the biggest cross-country runs of the season. There was a big attendance of runners wearing the emblems of the St. George's, Pastime, Star, Xavier, New West Side, Long Island City, and St. Bartholomew Athletic Association in the pack that left the clubhouse and traveled over the usual four and a half mile course. William H. Hugg was first in; F. J. Hussey, second; J. J. Molloy, Xavier Athletic Association, third; Robert W. Kennedy, Star Athletic Club, fifth; J. G. Coben, St. Bartholomew Athletic Association, sixth, and J. J. Delehantey, Seventy-first Regiment Athletic Association, seventh. Time—27:03.

ATHLETICS AT N. Y. U.

Active Preparations Going On for a Strong Gymnastic Team.

If present indications count for anything this season will be one of the most active New York University has known for sometime. Arrangements for the gymnastic contests are being made by Manager Magnus.

The gymnastic team loses two men this year, and those vacancies have already been filled so that the team is now stronger than ever. In all probability there will be no contests for prizes as in the past, but regular weekly competitions will be held in order to aid the management in selecting the men for the team. Each man will be required to take a certain amount of gymnastic work. Prizes will be awarded at the end of the indoor and again at the end of the outdoor season, to each man who breaks a university record. The events in the indoor contest will be 100, 220, and 440 yard dashes, three-quarter-mile run, high jump, pole vault, and shot put.

During the Winter a team will be entered in the Forty-seventh, Eighth, and Ninth Regiment and the Knickerbocker Athletic Club games. The men who will probably make the team will be: Jones, high jump; Denchfield, Grasmuck, and Walz, sprints and quarter-mile; Simpson and Funk in the novice races, and Connelly in the shot put. This season Capt. Jones will make an effort to break the indoor record in the high jump. He will compete at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club games, and at the games of the Boston Athletic Association. On the 2d of March he will jump at the indoor intercollegiate meet at Philadelphia. Arrangements for the outdoor contests are now under way, and a meet will be held with Hamilton College, in New York City. A letter was received last week in reference to a meet with the University of California, but it is hardly possible that such a contest can be arranged.

The baseball candidates will commence training in February. This year the team has lost a number of good men, and a determined effort will have to be made to make a good showing.

A petition to sanction a hockey team has been refused on the ground that the four large teams are sufficient, and a fifth team would have to draw on the others.

Cornell's Athletic Finances.

ITHACA, N. Y., Jan. 13.—Cornell's athletic finances for the past year have been reported as follows: Baseball receipts, $4,040.14; disbursements, $5,119.26; deficit, $179.12; football receipts, $19,077.09; disbursements, $14,379.57; balance, $4,010.29; navy receipts, $8,807.57; disbursements, $6,255.36; balance, $2,642.21; track athletics receipts, $1,163.59; disbursements, $1,961.11; deficit, $797.52; general athletics receipts, $2,492.92; disbursements, $2,442.53; balance, $481.87; track, $174.17; baseball, $143.21. In addition the Athletic Council has now appealed to the alumni for $9,000 to be used for permanent improvements. Hereafter the alumni will not be asked for subscriptions but for one purpose only.

INDOOR BASEBALL SCHEDULE.

A Rearrangement of Games for the Various Military Teams.

On account of the non-observance of the dates in the armory indoor baseball schedule by certain of the teams, the old list was somewhat confused. A new schedule has been made, as follows:

Jan. 19, second game inter-city series, 47th Regiment Armory; Jan. 26, 9th Regiment vs. 2d Naval, 9th Regiment Armory; 47th Regiment vs. 12th Regiment, 47th Regiment Armory; 71st Regiment vs. 8th Regiment, 71st Regiment Armory; 17th Separate Company vs. 1st Signal Corps; 69th Regiment vs. 14th Regiment.

Columbia's Swimmers Active.

The prospects for a large and successful season for Columbia's swimming and water polo teams are at the present especially good. An unusually large number of men are taking an interest in swimming this year, and relay swimming races and water polo games are held several times a week.

The management of the water polo team is endeavoring to arrange a series of matches with other colleges, and it is possible that if a schedule is arranged, for the sake of a neutral tank the games may be held in George Gould's private tank at Georgian Court, Lakewood.

The first event in which the Columbia team will participate will be next month, at the Chicago Sportsmen's Show, where a contest in the water sports is proposed between the Eastern and Western colleges. The team will also compete at the New York Sportsmen's Show, and at the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo.

Legal Notices.

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW York, to all persons interested in the property and estate of THE PALERMO MICA COMPANY, greeting:

You and each of you are hereby cited and required personally to be and appear at a Special Term, Part I., of the Supreme Court, in and for the City and County of New York, to be held at the County Court House, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 18th day of February, 1901, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, then and there to show cause why George S. Leary, Charles H. Bell, and Edward C. Wood should not render an account of their proceedings as Directors and Trustees of the Palermo Mica Company, for the purpose of winding up its business and affairs, under and by virtue of an order of this Supreme Court, dissolving said corporation, and, if no cause therefor be shown, then to show cause why the account filed by said Trustees, in the office of the Clerk of New York County, on the 24th day of December, 1900, should not be passed and confirmed, as stated.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto caused the seal of this Supreme Court of the State of New York to be hereunto affixed.

[Seal.] WM. SOHMER, Clerk.

SIX PRISONERS FOR ONE.

Persistent Attempts to Get Burglar Sweeney Out of Queens County Jail.

When William Sweeney was arrested in Long Island City the police thought he was only a burglar. Soon it was learned he had been in State Prison and had William Carroll and William Warren as aliases. When he was indicted it was for burglary, second degree, second offense. This meant a long period in Sing Sing Prison. The prisoner's friends determined to get him out of jail. Recently two men, one in the uniform of a United States marine, were permitted to see Sweeney. They tried to pass him a set of saws and a bit for them. The men were Roger Colvert and John Balle, a deserter from the Navy Yard on the third day of his service.

They have since been held to await trial. On the day they were arraigned for examination a letter carrier brought a registered letter to the jail addresed to Sweeney. Sweeney was brought to the Warden's office to receipt for it. The moment he signed for it and the carrier placed it in his hands, Warden Ashmead grabbed Sweeney and wrenched the letter away from him. Sweeney made a strong objection, but Ashmead told him he would examine it. If it was of a legitimate nature it would be given to him. The letter was found to be in cipher. With the letter was the key. The letter, when transcribed, outlined a second plan to escape from custody. It was signed "Johnnie."

District Attorney Merrill at once placed Detective Butler on the matter, and a search was made for the writer. Warrants were issued for Kate Colvert, wife of the man in jail; for his brother John, and for John Buckley of 623 East Sixteenth Street, Manhattan, but they could not be found.

Detective Butler directed Warden Ashmead to detain any caller who might come to see either Sweeney, Colvert, or Balle. Yesterday, Mrs. Colvert and her brother-in-law called and were at once locked up. Then John Colvert told Butler that Buckley was the man wanted. He said Buckley wrote the letter and gave it to him to post, and also gave him the money for the fee and postage. He also said that Buckley was then at his home, on East Sixteenth Street. Butler went there and rapped at the door which was indicated as being Buckley's. A woman responded. She said Buckley was not at home. Butler said he was sorry, as he had a letter which must be delivered. The woman told him to wait a moment and went inside.

A few moments later the door opened a little and a man peeped out. Butler threw himself against the door, and it gave and he got inside. There were a number of persons in the room, and they showed a disposition to make trouble, but the detective drew his revolver and brought Buckley out. He joined the others in the Queens County Jail, so that six prisoners instead of one is the result of the arrest of Sweeney.

THE KAISER'S TRACTION PLAN.

BERLIN, Jan. 13.—Emperor William recently ordered Privy Councilor Rathenau, the Potsdam Director of the Allgemeine Elektricitaets-Gesellschaft, to report upon plans for introducing electric traction on Germany's trunk lines, a matter in which the Kaiser is deeply interested. Herr Rathenau informed the Emperor that the first experiments would be made next Summer on the military road from Berlin to Zessen, a distance of thirty kilometers.

Machines are now being built by the Allgemeine Elektricitaets-Gesellschaft and the Siemens & Halske Electrical Company which are expected to speed from 200 to 250 kilometers, (132 to 155 miles.)

The plan contemplates connecting the largest German cities electrically with a system of single cars, carying sixty persons each, running every ten or fifteen minutes, and capable of covering two hundred and fifty kilometers.

Emperor William expressed his astonishment at the figures and estimates placed before him, and promised to render all the assistance in his power to what he called a "great national undertaking."

RUSSIA'S BUDGET FOR 1901.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 13.—The Russian Minister of Finance, M. de Witte, has submitted his budget statement for 1901. This shows a surplus in the ordinary estimates of 73,443,450 rubles, notwithstanding heavy expenditures on account of the operations in China.

In the course of his stament M. de Witte announces that the financial situation is favorable, and no foreign loan will be required this year, unless unforeseen complications should arise. Such

WHAT ARE WE DOING IN THE PHILIPPINES?

The course of the Administration Senators in the debate on the Army bill seems to us to confirm very strongly the expediency and the necessity of giving the country fuller and more intelligible information as to the situation in the Islands than has heretofore been vouchsafed. We have already called attention to this matter, and the general policy of the friends, advisers, and supporters of the Government in the Senate makes it not merely desirable, but imperative, that more and better light shall be afforded.

In the discussion of the Army bill the Administration Senators have insisted on the need of an army at least as large as the one we now have in the Philippines. When questioned as to the time for which such a force would be needed, they have given but indefinite replies. They have been vaguely cheerful, but entirely unwilling and apparently unable to set a time at which the country could expect a diminution of the force. Nor have they given any clear notion of the elements in the situation which now require force or of what is being done to abate this requirement, or of the policy by which the Government hopes to secure progressive co-operation from a part of the native population in establishing peace and order and prosperity. This obscurity, and even evasiveness, in their utterances is the more to be regretted because the one source from which the Administration led us to expect adequate information has so far failed us. When the Taft Civil Commission was sent out, the character of its members, the views they expressed, and the instructions they were reported to have received, all justified the confidence of the friends of the Administration that from them we should from time to time be able to learn the exact facts necessary for an intelligent opinion as to the policy of our Government and its working.

Now, the only report from the Taft commission of any significance that has been made public was one on the eve of the election practically stating that the progress of pacification was satisfactory and that within sixty days after the hopes of the Filipinos in arms had been dashed by the defeat of Mr. BRYAN the insurrection would fall to pieces. Clearly, the prediction has not been fulfilled. The only authoritative statement of the situation since that time has been the report of Gen. MACARTHUR, which admitted that the insurrection had not fallen to pieces and that the use of a large army was made at once necessary and relatively unavailing because of the substantial unity of the natives in support of the insurgents. This report was sent in some three months after the management of affairs in the islands had been nominally turned over to the Civil Commission.

We submit that the situation is extremely unsatisfactory. It is the right of the American people that they shall know definitely what their Government has tried to do in the Philippines, how far it has really succeeded and how far it has failed, what are the causes of failure, and what remedy is intended. This right is recognized and urged, not by the opponents or the unreasonable critics of the Government, but by many of its faithful friends and supporters. These feel, and are justified in feeling, that they have not been accorded that candid and respectful treatment to which they are entitled. They are not blind partisans, and they cannot be asked to act as if they were. They are not children, and no one has the right to tell them to be good and keep quiet until their teachers get ready to talk with them. The American people as a whole are sensible and patriotic. They do not ask that their Government shall always be entirely successful. They can and will stand inevitable disappointment or delay with fortitude. But they want to know in reasonable detail about the management of their own business by their own agents. At present they have not that knowledge. The sooner it is given to them the better.

THEY DEFY NIXON.

The gamblers pay a very poor compliment to Mr. NIXON in reopening their establishments and continuing to pursue their unlawful calling while his Committee of Five is still investigating vice and in the very teeth of his high authority and plenary powers as the representative of RICHARD CROKER. Mr. NIXON caused the gamblers, most of them, to close their places soon after he began to collect the evidence that led him to the conclusion that immunity from arrest and prosecution is sold by a Gambling Commission in this city that levies assessments on the gamblers and is powerful enough to prevent police interference with their business. These men have had the hardihood to resume business. It is evident that they are not afraid of Mr. NIXON and his committee, not even though he bears aloft the flaming sword ostentatiously put into his hands by CROKER.

In view of Mr. CROKER'S instructions and Mr. NIXON'S professions, both public, this circumstance is interesting. Other matters, of still deeper interest, are hinted at in this paragraph from the news columns of our neighbor The Sun of yesterday:

> Gambling houses and poolrooms which have generally been closed or doing business under cover since New Year's Day, when the order was sent out to them to shut down, are opening their doors again. Mr. NIXON admitted that this was true, but would make no comment upon it. The gamblers are overjoyed at the news that Senator TIM SULLIVAN is on his way home. The prospect of his return is making the keepers of the gambling houses and poolrooms defiant. They do not hesitate to express their confidence in the Senator's ability to protect them as heretofore. They look to him as a foil to the Tammany Five, and openly assert that his "pull" in the long run will prove stronger than any influence the Five can exert.

Has corruption come to that pitch of audacity? Are we really about to witness a struggle for supremacy between the Gambling Commission and Mr. RICHARD CROKER? The decent part of the community would fervently pray that the coming of SULLIVAN with his strong "pull" may not prove to be an illusory portent of carnage were it not for the haunting fear that the Red Slayer and the slain will here prove to be one and indivisible. But whether CROKER and SULLIVAN fight or do not fight they would seem to be nearing their destruction.

An open defiance of the power that visibly controls Tammany and the attempt to continue against his prohibition the sale of immunity to lawbreakers and the bribing of the police authorities would shake the organization to pieces and it would be easily overcome next Fall. A failure on the part of the Gambling Commission to fight CROKER would lead inevitably to one of two things. Either Tammany would be deprived of the money contributions of vice and of its support at the polls by the ending of the traffic in immunity, which would bring about its downfall, since without the support of the vicious it cannot maintain its supremacy; or the community of interest and the relation of accomplices between CROKER and the Gambling Commission would be established, which would make an end of both of them.

The Tammany organization and those who protect and profit from vice in its name would now seem to be in a position where neither can get away. If either does get away the escape will be due to an incompetent drawing of the net that now incloses them or to a general public desire that present corrupt and ulcerous conditions shall continue.

THE SUBSIDY FORAY.

Whatever else may be said of the Ship Subsidy bill, it cannot be said that it enters the Treasury like a thief in the night. It is a daylight affair, and the glare of publicity has exposed every feature to recognition. Full public knowledge of the character of the bill and of the identification of its authors with its beneficiaries does not in the least shame or inhibit the promoters of the raid in or out of the Senate.

The seemingly virtuous amendment limiting to $2,000,000 the "speed compensation" provided for in the bill has fallen under the observation of Mr. JOHN DE WITT WARNER, who uncovers its deceitfulness in a letter to The Evening Post. The amendment provided that out of the $9,000,000 not more than $2,000,000 in any fiscal year should be paid "as compensation to vessels described in Paragraphs 8 and 9 of Clause B of this section." Paragraph 8 describes ships of "20 knots and less than 21," and Paragraph 9 ships of "21 knots or over." Mr. WARNER points out that of all the vessels of foreign or domestic construction now built or anywhere building, only the New York, the Paris, the St. Louis, and the St. Paul, all belonging to the International Navigation Company, are capable of or intended to have a speed of 20 knots or over. The true reading of Senator FRYE'S amendment he therefore declares to be this:

> Of which nine millions of dollars not more than two millions of dollars ($2,000,000) shall, in respect of an one fiscal year, be paid as compensation to the International Navigation Company in respect of its four best steamers, the New York, the Paris, the St. Paul, and the St. Louis.

Inasmuch as the highest sum estimated by critics of the bill as payable under the speed compensation clause was less than $2,000,000, it is not unreasonable to call upon Senator FRYE to explain what sacrifice the wholly selfish promoters of this grab at the public funds have made in offering this amendment. It meets no criticism, costs the grabbers nothing, and does not make the bill any more satisfactory to persons who believe, with Mr. CLEVELAND, that while it is the duty of the citizen to support the Government, it is not the duty of the Government to support the citizen.

MR. PLATT AND THE CANALS.

Senator PLATT has the air of giving a pledge to the opponents of canal improvement when he says that the appropriation of $62,000,000 for that purpose will not be made until the people have had an opportunity of passing on the matter at an election.

The general attitude of the Senator toward this question has been non-committal, as his attitude is apt to be toward any question involving only the public interests and not those of himself or his faction. But the seeming pledge that he gives in this case is not at all an evidence of his own policy, since no such appropriation could be made under any circumstances whatever unless the approval of the people had previously been distinctly given at the polls. Except for an emergency and within the limit of $1,000,000, or for the purpose of repelling invasion or suppressing insurrection, or for the defense of the State in war, the Constitution declares: "No debts shall be hereafter contracted by or on behalf of this State unless such debt shall be authorized by a law for some single work or object distinctly specified therein; and such law shall impose and provide for the collection of a direct annual tax to pay, and sufficient to pay, the interest on such debt as it falls due, and also to pay and discharge the principal of such debt within eighteen years from the time of the contracting thereof. No such law shall take effect until it shall at a general election have been submitted to the people and have received a majority of all votes cast for or against it at such election."

There is not the slightest intention or wish on the part of the friends of canal improvement to do anything without the full approval of the people, and they could not if they wished. Their plans are, however, of such value and importance to the permanent prosperity of the State that we have little doubt that the people, on due consideration, will assent to them.

THE DISCUSSION OF DIVORCE.

The discussion by the State Bar Association at Albany this week of the general question of divorce ought to be of some aid to the Legislature in their proposed action. Certainly there can be no doubt of the feeling of disgust and humiliation that every intelligent and right-minded lawyer of the State must feel at the revelations of the last few months as to the miserable tactics successfully employed to secure divorces in violation of the law. The Bar Association should be very anxious at least to make that sort of game impossible.

One of the obvious remedies for illegal and for scandalous divorces is the requirement of publicity in the proceedings and hearings. Undoubtedly there is some objection to this on the ground of the demoralization attending the publication of the details of such cases; but we are by no means sure that the net effect would not be wholesome. Decent papers will not publish details, and the others will find plenty that is unclean for their readers if this source be closed to them. One result may fairly be expected from publicity, namely, that divorce will not be sought with the same carelessness as now, and any policy that adds to the difficulty of divorce will tend to add to the caution with which marriage is entered into. The root of much of the trouble really lies in recklessness in marrying. A good deal may be done toward remedying the evils of divorce by working from that end.

EASY CRIME IN NEW YORK.

The greatest marvel among the many curiosities of crime is the ease with which the bold rogue can usually accomplish the undoing of his honest victim. One reasoning a priori would assume that the confidence man or the blackmailer must needs be extremely ingenious, and that to make his nefarious industry pay he must constantly keep his wits at work to devise new and plausible means to deceive. Not so. The rogue has learned from experience that anything original and outside the strictly commonplace in crime would excite suspicion by reason of its novelty. Perhaps it is for this reason that nothing in the swindling line has been invented since the beginning of written history. We have an occasional renaissance—about once in five years, the police say—and some trick so old as to have been forgotten comes to the front and does duty as a brilliant novelty; but the working of it demands genius, and the main dependence of the crook of ordinary talent is the tricks which everybody knows, but somehow fails to recognize when they are worked on him. Probably the average man does not consider it necessary to be on his guard against what are or appear to be the ordinary and expected happenings of life, but might be expected to scrutinize anything new and unusual with inconvenient thoroughness. The deadly monotony of the average life is so seldom intruded upon by a new experience that the path of least resistance for the practical swindler is to do something essentially commonplace. Prehistoric man doubtless discovered that the most attractive bait for his traps was not the unaccustomed and ordinarily inaccessible luxury of diet, but the staple of his intended victim's daily bread.

Occasionally, however, we hear of something in the confidence line which serves to show that the most theoretically impracticable scheme imaginable will work as well as another if the operator has the nerve to carry it through. Such an incident occurred in this city a few evenings since. The victim was not a stranger to the devious ways of metropolitan life. He was a resident, presumably reputable, and, as far as the evidence goes, sober. He was walking in Fifth Avenue, near Twenty-second Street, at an hour in the evening when the thoroughfares of that part of the city are well filled. To him came a stranger, who tapped him on the shoulder after the manner of the minion of the law in melodrama, and said: "I want you." To impress his victim he opened the lapel of his coat, displaying a sardine box label, which he said was the shield of a detective, and attested his authority to make an arrest without other warrant. The citizen courteously remonstrated, but was told that resistance was futile, and that to proceed quietly with his captor to the West Thirtieth Street Police Station was the part of wisdom. Up to this point there was nothing very remarkable in the incident. Cases of mistaken identity are of record, and any one might be arrested on a real or fancied resemblance to another. How one would be apt to take it would depend a great deal upon what sort of man he happened to be. If a casual or professional crook, conscious of crime or aware that he was "wanted" here or elsewhere, it would probably not surprise him, and if he had no alternative he would go quietly. If an honest man, knowing that the law had no claim upon him, he might be very much surprised, but we should assume that he would want to satisfy himself that he was in the hands of one having authority to make the mistake of arresting him. As he walked with his captor past the Fifth Avenue Hotel he probably met more than one obviously genuine and duly authenticated policeman. The natural course for an honest man with his wits about him would be to step up to the policeman or call him, ask if the man making the arrest was what he purported to be, a "plain clothes detective." This would have settled the question at once and made the captor a captive on the serious charge of impersonating an officer. In the incident under review the amiable citizen did nothing of the sort. He simply went where he was told to go. He did not even insist upon being taken straight to the station, but permitted himself to be led into a saloon where, without resistance, he surrendered his money, his watch, and a pocketful of railroad bond interest coupons. This he did under the absurd notion that he was bribing a policeman who had arrested him to let him go again. He further agreed to redeem his watch and coupons the following day by paying the pseudo detective an additional hundred dollars, and was left sitting in the saloon while the crook slipped away. It seems to have been nearly twenty-four hours before he reached the conclusion that he had been bunkoed.

Comment on such an incident is difficult. In a time when the citizen with more or less money, a valuable watch and negotiable securities in his pockets is so "dead easy" as he appears to have been in this instance, it looks like a waste of money to pay postage on letters inviting people from the rural districts to come here to buy gold bricks or green goods. "What fools these mortals be!"

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—In commenting the other day on the funny claim made by The Boston Transcript that certain Boston philanthropists, in putting legal services at the command of persons too poor to employ lawyers, had invented a new form of charity, we referred to the Legal Aid Society as a New York organization that had been doing just this thing for over a quarter of a century. The antiquity of Boston's invention would have been more strongly emphasized, however, if, instead of naming the Legal Aid Society, which has been in existence only since 1876, we had called The Transcript's attention to our Workingwomen's Protective Union, an organization which, though it chooses its beneficiaries from a single class—self-supporting women not engaged in domestic service—is undoubtedly the most important, as well as the oldest, enterprise of the kind in this city. The Protective Union began its work in 1863, and was incorprated five years later. Its activity, like its success, has been great, for not only has it protected the legal rights of almost innumerable workingwomen, but it has secured the passage of not a few laws that enlarge those rights and render easier their maintenance, and it has rendered a large amount of assistance in the way of finding employment for those unable to find it for themselves. The union's legal service branch has made itself a terror to employers inclined to heartlessness or dishonesty. The mere fact that it takes up a case is almost invariably enough to compel an immediate settlement of that case, and a settlement, too, that consists in the payment of the wages claimed. The courts are thus saved much useless toil, and many amounts, too small to justify a legal fight with the ordinary expenses, are collected for persons to whom the difference between getting or losing even a few dollars is a matter of tragical importance.

—However strongly inclined some of us may be to believe that a newspaper has performed its whole and highest duty when it has fairly and fully given the current news, with such comment and interpretation as that news really requires, beyond question that limit is occasionally passed nowadays with results so creditable to the resources of modern journalism that the public can safely be congratulated on the existence of a diversity of opinion as to the proper bounds of the journalistic field. Nobody, for instance, could study without wondering admiration the "review of the century" which was issued on Saturday as a supplement by our neighbor The Evening Post. Page after page was filled by articles dealing with every phase of the century's progress, and these articles were not the products of hasty compilation from the encyclopedias by hack writers, but the work of well-known, indeed, the best-known, men of the day, speaking with authority on subjects directly and deeply studied. In manner and matter the series as a whole fully attained the standards of excellence set by the great magazines that specially claim the name of "reviews," and all this the readers of The Post obtained practically for nothing; at any rate, they obtained the paper for its usual price. Other papers, not a few, have shown the same generosity and attained similar results. The Sun, to mention one more near neighbor, is publishing in installments, instead of all at once, a series of the same sort by writers of equal eminence, and from out of town to our exchange desk comes supplement after supplement, all recording the work of the nineteenth century at great length, and in all cases doing it more than fairly well. There may be some question as to what newspaper readers want from newspapers, but there is none at all that they are getting it, whatever it is, and for prices amazingly cheap. Yet how often we hear about the vices of modern journalism, and how rarely of its virtues!

—How strange it is that native Filipinos should have to argue vehemently and long with the representative of American Government for a complete separation of Church and State in the conduct of the insular public schools. The Filipinos plead that they had more than enough of the friars as teachers in the old days, and that now they want the schools to be schools, not irreligious, but non-religious, and providing only such instruction as can be accepted and utilized by the members of every race, the followers of every faith. And Judge TAFT argues for a compromise, for an allotment to the feared and hated orders of a part of the school day, and expresses apprehension as to the results to follow an immediate and complete abandonment of the old educational system. Then to quiet the advocates of secular instruction—all of them, by the way, Roman Catholics of unquestioned orthodoxy—he promises that if his plan, after fair trial, is found to work unsatisfactorily, the friars can be put out of the schools for good and all and the wishes of the natives granted. The Filipinos know so much about things Occidental that it is remarkable one of them at this point did not seize the opportunity to quote the lines in which the memory of JAMES BRAMSTON survives:

> I hear a lion in the lobby roar;
> Say, Mr. Speaker, shall we shut the door
> And keep him there, or shall we let him in
> To try if we can turn him out again?

—Prof. CHARLES ELIOT NORTON, while engaged last week in enumerating to the Unitarian Club of Boston the many reasons which, in his opinion, would justify its members for regretting the lateness of their appearance upon the terrestrial scene, laid much stress on the demoralizing tendencies of modern democracy. Popular government, he admitted, did well enough a hundred years ago, when the country was inhabited by a people of common stock, but now we were a wildly heterogeneous lot, and everything is all wrong. "There is," he continued, "in the great advance of multitudes, inevitably by mere weight of mass, a compulsory process reducing the civilization of the whole community to that of the level of the mass. The ideals of our own community are not now so firmly set on higher things as they were in our earlier youth. There is not so strong a sense of social responsibility. There has been an unquestionable change in the character of homes. The population is more movable and the homes are more transient. Observation for many years does not encourage me to believe that the influences of society at large and the influence of every home are favorable for establishing the quality in youth essential in a republic. It is a painful conclusion, but not one of despair. One must fall back to the hope of the slow, gradual, but steady progress of the race." It is difficult to understand just why there is hope in the progress of the race if the advance of multitudes is a reduction of civilization, but no doubt it is clear to Boston. We are more troubled by our failure to remember the "common stock" to which all Americans once belonged, and by our strong impression that people now stay in one place more rather than less than they did in the days when there was more land to "take up." Surely out West got settled somehow, and not quite all our ancestors lived and died on the old farm.

BUYING INTO THE POLICE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The letter of Donlos in to-day's issue of THE TIMES is likely to create a false impression, and so do much mischief, by its implication that the corrupt payment of money is essential at all stages of the process of appointment on the police force. As a matter of fact, there are literally no exceptions to the requirement that patrolmen must be appointed only from the eligible lists of the Municipal Civil Service Commission, and to secure a place upon those lists a candidate must successfully pass an examination in eight subjects, necessitating an inspection of his examination work by from ten to fifteen different examiners. The impracticability of bribing such a large number of persons is manifest, especially as it is not determined until after the conclusion of an examination to whom any particular set of papers will be assigned for rating. As to the possibility of obtaining a set of questions in advance, it is to be noted that no one person, not even the Chief Examiner, sees all of the questions to be asked until the candidates begin to assemble on the day of the examination. The actual appointing power (i. e., the Police Board,) has no right of selection from the eligible list, and but a limited range of rejection.

That unscrupulous persons may cajole money from applicants on the plea of getting them on the force is, of course, quite possible, but neither the Civil Service Commissioners nor the examiners should be held responsible for such extortion until it is shown that the culprits are directly connected with their office.

It is suggested, not required, by the commission that one of the vouchers shall be a physician, and nothing is said about the occupation of the three other vouchers, excepting that saloon-keepers are excluded. Only two roundsmen have been appointed in considerably more than nine months, and they received their promotion for acts of exceptional bravery.

The Public's Business.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your paper of to-day records an interview in which, in reply to the inquiry of one of your reporters concerning particulars of the sale of the Jersey Central, Mr. J. P. Morgan, as reported, answers: "Whose business is that?" "Whose business is it?" And then, answering his own question: "It's nobody's business but my own if I buy a property."

Believing that the public has an inalienable right to take part in all questions concerning public utilities, it seems to me important to protest against Mr. Morgan's attitude. It is unspund. The reporter's question needs no apology, and should have been respectfully answered.

The organizing ability of Mr. Morgan and others like him has helped much in developing the National prosperity. If his efforts have brought him large profits, so much the better. The writer doesn't grudge him a penny. But don't let him forget himself. The purchase of the Jersey Central is not his private affair. It is also an affair of the public. A PLAIN CITIZEN.

GLADNESS.

Ripley D. Saunders in St. Louis Republic.

If living is a joy to you,
Because your soul is sound,
And life seems good and sweet and true
That you have haply found,
Then sing no false and hopeless strain
Of doubting and despair,
But lift your voice all clear and plain
And sing that life is fair!

Sing of its beauty and its worth,
Its bright and sunny skies,
Sing all the loveliness of earth
As seen by happy eyes;
For then the souls despondent born
Shall find them brave and strong,
Their way less gloomy and forlorn,
Because of your glad song!

FELIX ADLER TALKS ON CITY DEGRADATION

New York Controlled by Men Who Profit from Lowlessness.

SAYS THIS CITY NEEDS A BRAIN

Education and a Club Where All Classes Would Meet on a Level Needed to Bring About Reform.

Felix Adler spoke yesterday morning before the Society for Ethical Culture, at Carnegie Music Hall, on "The Degradation of Great Cities and the Remedies." In his address he said: "A great city—what a terrible problem it presents! Who of us can say that he comprehends the city in which he lives? Victor Hugo is the only man who has adequately portrayed the mystery of a great city. From the progressive census returns, it appears to be a question of but a little time until one-half or more of the people of this country will live in cities. And we are bound to ask, Is our plan of government succeeding in cities? For it is not in New York alone that the question is presented. Croker and Platt are not the only figures of their kind before the public. It is because we have broken down here, it is because of the shame and hideous degradation of our municipal system, that many men are shaking their heads to-day, and are saying that the experiment of popular self-government is a failure.

"A good city is like a good man, and in my opinion there is no man who can be described as thoroughly good; one, that is, without passions that mislead him, above temptation, and without things in his life which he prefers to keep hidden. If there is such a man, white all through, it must be because he has been so situated that he has never got very deep into life. Most of the fighters in the work of this world have been more or less wounded and scarred in the struggle. In a good city, the moral forces are on top and the devils are chained.

WHY NEW YORK IS WICKED.

"What is a bad city? New York. [Sensation.] In New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, the devils are on top. We have put the burglar in charge of the bank. That is all the trouble. In this city, the maintenance of law is in the hands of those who are profiting by the violation of law. The whole movement for reform means simply to depose the burglar and the others who profit by the violation of law. There is at present what is called an 'anti-vice crusade' in this city. The newspapers record it, it reaches into private life, and there is evidence that even those in power cannot escape the impression that the signs are ominous. And many of those who at present feel most outraged by the conduct of our City Government are not without guilt themselves. It is because the forces of corruption have passed the line that even the worldly minded draw, that the present gust of indignation has come.

"There are social vices which have always existed, and which will doubtless for a long time continue to exist. The trouble is that they have been artificially pampered and positively encouraged. The vile stream has overflowed its banks, and is bearing the little children away on its terrible flood. It is that fact which has evoked the storm of protest.

"But why is it that leading professional and business men, college professors, and clergymen are compelled to take up work that ought to be attended to by the city's paid servants? Why should they have to give up their time to become moral scavengers, to teach the very elements, the A B Cs, of municipal affairs? I some times hear fools talk as if the whole situation were covered by saying that these evils are bound to exist, and I feel like saying: 'Of course they will exist as long as men like you exist, but beeause there must be a drain in a city is no reason for having it in the open street, or diverted into the homes of the poor.' Leave the drain where it ought to be, under the ground.

"Now, this state of affairs exists in all the large cities of the country, especially in the Democratic cities. And the problem is much more difficult in a democracy, not speaking in a partisan sense, than under a monarchy. Under a Government that is more or less autocratic, the great city is usually a capital and the seat of military power. Through that power the authorities are able to keep the lower classes down, and by lower classes I mean the criminal classes. Under the law, or ancient traditions, power belongs to the aristocracy, and the aristocrats use their power.

"Why is it that nowhere is there such a strain upon popular government, as in our city? There are all sorts of reasons. Some say, 'The masses are too ignorant.' Well, I am a great believer in education, but I know that there are very well educated on the intellectual side, who are among the greatest knaves that exist. I dare say there are thousands of men who are among the most active of the anti-social forces in this city to-day who could read the Constitution and comment on what they read intelligently. The fact that they are able to read the Constitution of the United States is no proof that they have assimilated and profited by the principles enunciated therein. Because illiteracy is a real danger, it does not by any means follow that literacy is a remedy for all our present ills. The poor children are taught in the schools to repeat, parrot-like, what is called 'civics,' but does that teach them patriotism? A child can be taught patriotism if the teacher is penetrated by a deeply patriotic feeling. By telling children of the struggles and achievements of such men as the heroes of the civil war, a spirit of patriotism can be inculcated, but not by teaching by rote mere lists of officers.

SOME REMEDIES SUGGESTED.

"We are also told that one remedy for the present condition is to improve the condition of the poor. And there is a great deal in it. If a man works twelve or fourteen hours a day, with no time for recreation, scarcely even to see his family, what sort of a citizen is he going to be? You might as well expect to carve a magnificent statue out of a log of rotten wood, as expect such a man to be a useful citizen. And under a government on a democratic plan, we must see to it that the elements of a decent human life are possible. Inevitably, political reform is bound up with social reform. There is no reason why domestic industries should not be excluded from the city entirely, if that should seem best, and the factory system substituted. And there is no reason for waiting for the millennium before introducing such a reform.

"Again, in Summer the poor can go to the seashore for recreation, but in Winter the grogshop is absolutely their only resort. There is to be a great public library soon in the centre of the city. Of course that is a good thing, but the city has done absolutely nothing toward providing for the wants of the great mass of the people. Why are there not free reading rooms, the same as schools, in every district? It would do more for good citizenship to have a recreation house established in every district than could be accomplished by a hundred fancy schemes for reform.

"But at the root of all the trouble is partisan dictatorship—the boss system, as it is called. Yet I am a little tired of belaboring the bosses. There are so many of them everywhere. They grow out of the natural conditions of affairs. Of course the people want a scapegoat. At present it happens to be the gentleman with the conspicuous personality who has the kindness to run the City of New York for us. People even talk as if the whole trouble would be mended as soon as we give him his congé. Such talk is, of course, futile, The older persons here remember his predecessor, and I am afraid you of the younger generation may have cause to remember his successor.

"I believe the dual party system is largely to blame. With two parties fighting, and all the time expecting battle, there is a tendency to concentrate power in the hands of a dictator. Goldwin Smith believes that the dual party system is everywhere weakening, and I am inclined to the same opinion.

"But the power of the boss rests on the income which he controls. This is in the first place from patronage which has been in part cut off from his control by the civil service regulations. The fanatics of civil service reform, however, overlook the fact that as this particular source of income was taken away another one came up through the corporations. The boss has benefits to confer, and fear to inspire. And in places of employment he has an entirely new means of reward. The next step must be to cut off this control over corporations. An officer of a corporation recently said to me: 'I hate and despise myself for signing this check, but I have got to do it.' In most cases the corporation officers do not themselves have clean hands. They enjoy franchises which they have not paid for, or in other respects they are profiting at the public expense. By preventing their enjoying the privileges to which they are not entitled, we can make corporations more independent, less subject to the fear of the boss. Public supervision and control and the publicity of accounts is generally favored as a means to this end.

"The third source of the power of the boss is crime. He gets supplies from the jailbirds. It is not enough for us to stop the mischief in the 'red-light' district. It is not enough to bring a few individual offenders to condign punishment. This is not merely an 'anti-vice crusade'; there never was a greater misnomer. We must cut off this line of supplies to the besieged citadel if we wish to destroy the power of the boss.

"But all these remedies are slow. Is there no way by which we can do something without waiting for education and improved conditions to effect their work? In the first place it must be said we are not a very courageous people. We ignore evils, we do not always face them.

"We beat our heads against a stone wall, and when we find that is ineffective, we return to the pleasant pastime. When we gained ground a few years ago, why did we lose it again? It is a libel on the people to say the majority really approve the present state of affairs. It is often said we have the kind of Government we deserve. I do not know about that—it depends upon your definition of 'deserve.' But it is due to the fact that the reformers themselves have somehow inspired mistrust that we have lost ground again. That awful cry, 'To hell with reform,' still rings in my ears. There is in it a hatred, a bitterness, that reminds me of the worst phases of the French Revolution.

WHERE REFORMERS FAIL.

"Why is it that we create mistrust? Is it not time for us to ask that question? 'Let us have good government; vote with us,' say the reformers. And with what scowling hatred, bitterness, is that invitation greeted. The reformers of this city present a sublime spectacle of ignorance with respect to their surroundings. This is a great cosmopolitan city with German, Bohemian, Italian, Russian-Jewish cities in it as well as an American city. Each one is influenced by its own natural leaders. The two organizations opposed to reform have the sagacity to appreciate this. And they select from these varied populations men who are shrewd and unscrupulous, but who are thoroughly identified with their people. We reformers have not displayed a bit of that sagacity. We generally invite some Germans and others to go on committees, but instead of being natural leaders of their people they are usually so assimilated as to be practically natives. And these invitations usually come after we have nominated our ticket and got the whole thing started. These varied poulations look upon it all as a scheme to give power and if not wealth supremacy—the right to lead to the native poulation and to those at the head of the movement. That right to lead is not conceded in a democratic community, we cannot expect that it should be conceded.

"What we need in this city is a brain. We have a nervous system, but no brain. There are tariff reform clubs and civic reform clubs—all along Fifth Avenue. We have University Settlements on the east side. But there is no single club or organization where the leaders of all sections meet, learn to know and to respect each other. There are all sorts of clubs, but not one of the sort that we need, a cosmopolitan club. We are too much disposed to hold aloof. Let us not repeat this mistake of having a reform movement accentuate the importance of one class. If any one class does claim supremacy, it will be punished at the polls every time. This is to my mind the deepest reason for the failure of reform movements in this city."

Prof. Adler announced that during the past week a $50,000 subscription had been doubled, and a $20,000 subscription increased to $30,000, and another $30,000 subscription received toward the construction of the Ethical Culture Hall on Central Park West, between Sixty-third and Sixty-fourth Streets. All these are conditional on the total sum, $800,000, being subscribed. But $250,000 more is needed, and Prof. Adler hoped it would be subscribed by the twenty-fifth anniversary, next May.

BOWERY MISSION ANNIVERSARY.

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage Preaches on the Purification of the City.

The Academy of Music was filled yesterday afternoon at the celebration of the twentieth anniversary of the Bowery Mission and Young Men's Home, 55 Bowery, and to hear the Rev. T. De Witt Talmage preach. Men who had come under the influence of the mission nearly filled the top gallery, and with them sat Mrs. Sarah J. Bird, who is known as the "mother" of the mission.

Nearly 6,000 men and women joined in the hymns under the leadership of the Rev. F. H. Jacobs. J. J. Hallimond, Superintendent of the mission, said that among similar institutions the world over the Bowery Mission held a unique place, being supported largely by small contributions from men who had been rescued by the mission or from their fathers or mothers. The whole community, he said, was now aroused over the purification of the city, but for twenty years the Bowery Mission had fought the battle for purity in one of the darkest and most desperate sections of the city. Never, he said, was the city so full of young prodigals, who come to the city, by some strange fascination find their way to the Bowery, and there short work is made of them; they are lured into the dives, poolrooms, brothels, and other dens, and robbed and turned adrift. Then it is that they find their way to the Bowery Mission and are often returned to their homes. Mr. Hallimond appealed for funds to extend the work among this class, and for their work in behalf of the unemployed.

The Rev. Dr. T. De Witt Talmage said: "The Bowery Mission has brought 30,000 souls to grace in the past year. It offers the bread of this world in one hand and the bread of life in the other. It is through such a Gospel as this, with one wing over this life and the other over the life to come, that this city is to be saved. My prayers and sympathy are with the movement for the purification of the city. It will be accomplished. The century opens with brightness. The most popular book to-day is the Bible, the most popular institution the Church, the most popular person, Jesus Christ. Thousands would die for Him where one would die for another man. We will probably have four or five great revivals this century like that in 1857, when 500,000 souls were brought to God. The city will be reclaimed. Official authority can do much, but nothing can take the place of the grace of God."

PEOPLE'S HOME CHURCH.

Methodist Mission Reopened and an Appeal Made for Funds.

The old Eleventh Street Methodist Episcopal Church celebrated its thirty-third anniversary yesterday afternoon, and was at the same time formally reopened as the People's Home Church. In the past few months the church has been reconstructed, and it is now equipped for "institutional" work of various kinds. The church is now connected with the building at 543 East Eleventh Street, which was formerly a tenement. Besides bath rooms and gymnasium for boys there are rooms for trade instruction, kindergarten, and a reading room. There are accommodations for both sexes, of all ages. On the upper floors there are also rooms for six resident women workers, as well as quarters for the pastor's family.

The Rev. Dr. Joseph Pullman presided at the meeting yesterday afternoon. There were several short addresses on the needs of the neighborhood.

Bishop E. G. Andrews and the Rev. Robert Lewis Paddock of the Pro-Cathedral, in Stanton Street, were the chief speakers at a mass meeting held in the evening.

The Rev. Dr. Frank Mason North said that there was a debt on the property, which the Church Extension Society would carry, and that $5,000 was needed to cancel the floating debt and complete the equipment. He, J. S. Hyler, and Samuel W. Bowne, each pledged themselves to raise $5 for each dollar raised among the people of the mission.

PRAISE FOR MR. PHILBIN.

State Board of Charities Passes Resolutions Eulogizing Him.

ALBANY, Jan. 13.—District Attorney Eugene A. Philbin of New York has been highly eulogized by the State Board of Charities in a set of resolutions adopted by that body upon his retirement as a Charities Commissioner. The resolutions conclude as follows:

"Mr. Philbin's frank, strong, and genial character endeared him to his associates on the board, and their sense of loss at his retirement is tempered only by the knowledge that this was due to his accepting a call from the Governor to the high and responsible position of District Attorney of the County of New York."

SCHOOL SYSTEM IN CUBA

Ex-Superintendent Frye Tells of the Great Progress There.

Hints Friction Leading to His Resignation Was Caused by Politics—Brings Home a Spanish Bride.

A pretty Spanish señorita for a bride seems to be about the only reward that A. E. Frye of Highland, Cal., secured for nearly two years of arduous work as Superintendent of Public Schools in Cuba.

Mr. Frye arrived from Havana with his wife yesterday, and they are at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. Mr. Frye has resigned his position, and, after attending to some business in Boston, will go to his home, in California. He is the author of many works, owns several fruit farms, and is possessed of independent means.

His salary in Cuba was $4,500 per annum, and this was reduced at his own request, first to $3,000, then to $2,400, and then raised without his knowledge to $3,600. All that he received in salary, with $1,700 additional, he contributed to charitable institutions in Cuba.

"I have neither the time nor the inclination to go into a general discussion of existing conditions in Cuba," he said, in reply to a question, yesterday. "It would do little good and might cause much harm."

"Is it true that there was friction between Governor General Wood and yourself relating to the management of the schools?" he was asked.

"All my conversations with Gen. Wood were very pleasant," he replied, guardedly.

"Is it true that you resigned because you felt that military officials were hampering you in your work?"

"Well, I won't say that. I applied for a leave of absence for three months. That was granted; but when I saw how things were drifting I decided to resign, and I telegraphed my resignation to Secretary Root before leaving Cuba. My successor, I believe, has not been appointed."

"What is the condition of the schools in Cuba?"

"There has been a great improvement. While there were not more than 10,000 pupils in 1897, there were 142,000 in May, the highest number ever registered before the war was 51,000, and the attendance never exceeded 17,000. There were no public schools, in reality, under Spanish rule, and the school property had little or no value. Recently Gen. Wood got the idea that many of the schools reported by me, and for which money was being drawn, did not exist. He gathered this by information submitted by subordinates. In my reports I reported the number of aulas, or bedrooms; while the military officers counted only the escuelas, schoolhouses, thus confounding matters. But I soon explained the facts to the satisfaction of Gov. Wood."

"Won't you say why you resigned?"

"No, except I felt that my work was through. But I will assert that under the system I have inaugurated no fraud is possible in the schools of Cuba. Under the old system there were 94 professors under pay in the University of Havana, where there were only 335 students."

While Mr. Frye, in reply to direct questions concerning appointments in the school department, would give no definite answer, he made such remarks as, "Well, places had been promised," "Some politicians had to be looked after," indicating that he was dissatisfied with the course of those in authority over him.

Mr. Frye says that the Cuban children are very apt pupils and learn with great rapidity.

Mrs. Frye was Señorita Arruebarrena. She is the daughter of rich parents in the Province of Biscaya, Spain.

COL. LUDLOW'S METHODS.

His Effective Way of Dealing with Bribe Givers for Public Contracts.

Bishop Potter, in a recent interview, spoke of having a military man as Chief of Police, and referred to the fact that Philadelphia once borrowed an army officer to run the city's water works. The officer was Gen. William Ludlow, who at that time was Lieutenant Colonel in the United States Engineer Corps.

Col. Ludlow was appointed Chief Engineer of the Philadelphia Water Department, and enforced military discipline. Political heelers who had won sinecures by "carrying their wards" were discharged, and their places filled by efficient men. Political bosses stood aghast at such independence, and treating all kinds of "influence" and "pulls," were compelled to leave the Water Department alone as long as Col. Ludlow remained at its head.

Many stories were told of his absolute disregard of politics and commercialism, in his efforts to furnish the city with pure water. Shortly after he had been installed, a wealthy contractor called at his office and requested an interview. He announced that he intended to bid upon certain contracts for the department, and concluded by handing the Colonel an envelope and remarking:

"There's one of my references, and you'll get ten more like it if I get the contract."

Col. Ludlow opened the envelope and found a crisp new one-hundred-dollar bill. Taking a cigar out of his pocket and placing it in his mouth, the Colonel twisted the bill up like an old-fashioned "lamp lighter," and touching a match to it, lighted his cigar with the burning banknote. When it was entirely consumed, he turned to the contractor, who sat speechless and aghast, and said:

"I'll take mighty good care that you don't get any contract while I am Chief of this department." Calling a messenger, he bade him show the man out.

Col. Ludlow never again was annoyed by an attempt to bribe him.

FOUND DYING ON THE STREET.

While passing the corner of Lispenard and Church Streets on Saturday morning about 7 o'clock Policeman Griswold of the Leonard Street Station found a man lying on the sidewalk in convulsions. The man was removed to the Hudson Street Hospital, where he was found to be suffering with alcoholism and epilepsy. He also had a scalp wound, believed to have been received from falling to the sidewalk. Dr. John Smith, the house surgeon, attended the man, but the convulsions continued, and he died early yesterday morning.

From letters found in his pocket it was learned that he was Eugene Seltz, who at one time lived at 211 West Twenty-third Street. The man, however, had not lived there recently. In his pocket was also found a card bearing the address, "M. F. Seltz, 1,332 F Street Northwest, Washington, D. C."

At the hospital it was said that death was due to epilepsy. Neither there nor at the Leonard Street Station was there any suspicion of foul play.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Eugene Seltz, who died in a hospital in New York City to-day, was the son of M. F. Seltz, a Washington tailor. He was thirty-five years old, and a salesman for woolen manufacturers.

Tailor Schwartz Left Some Wealth.

Among the effects of Joseph Schwartz, who died of heart disease at 38 Ludlow Street, yesterday morning, the police found $900 in Russian money and $150 in American coin, and a quantity of jewelry and clothing. Schwartz was a tailor, and boarded at the address given. He was found dead in bed by his landlady. He was married, but it was said his wife is in Russia.

"Florodora" Cast Complete Again.

For the first time in a fortnight the cast of "Florodora," at the Casino Theatre, will be the same which produced the piece. Miss Fannie Johnston, who plays the part of Dolores, and Mr. Hooper return to-night, both having been ill with the grip. Miss Baker, who has taken the rôle of Dolores temporarily, is to be the maid again.

McKelvey—Barteau.

Special to The New York Times.

STROUDSBURG, Penn., Jan. 13.—At the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Francis Barteau, at Delaware Water Gap, yesterday, their daughter, Agnes, was married to Charles Thomas Webb McKelvey of New York City. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. A. B. Williamson. The bridegroom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. John McKelvey of New York, and nephew of the late Thomas Webb, also a relative by marriage of the late A. T. Stewart.

ERNEST H. CROSBY'S LECTURE.

Monopolies May Own the Government, He Says, in Discussing Economic Questions.

Ernest H. Crosby lectured yesterday afternoon before the Woman's Henry George League at their clubrooms, 27 West Forty-second Street, on the "Purification of New York." This meeting was presided over by Mrs. J. S. Crosby, President of the league. "We are confronted," he said "with the fact that Wall Street is trying to purify the Bowery. I hope the movement will be successful, but I believe all the committees will find plenty to do before it is accomplished."

He spoke of the reasons for the immorality of the east side, and said it had its foundation primarily in that spirit of commercialism which desired to get something for nothing, and in the use of governmental powers for the enriching of individuals. Overcrowding in the tenements he cited as one of the direct causes of immorality. This overcrowding, he said, was due to the greed of the landlord who tried to get all he could out of his investment; to the high price at which the vacant lands in the suburbs were held, making it hard for working people to build homes accessible to their work; to the high rate of transportation on the street railways; to the high price of gas, and to the low pay and long hours of work which corporations and other employing agencies demand of their employes. These, he said, all have their origin in greed, in the desire to get something for nothing.

He declared that the Metropolitan Traction Company has at least $10,000,000 worth of watered stock, stock for which no money was ever paid, and which represents the value of the franchise that was given them by the people. The Consolidated Gas Company, he said he had been reliably informed, had formerly made gas for 45 cents per 1,000 feet, but now by a new process could make it at a cost of only 15 cents per 1,000. They charge the people, he said, $1 per 1,000, using their franchise, the power granted to them by government, to get money from the people.

"One of the lessons to be learned during this twentieth century," he said, "is that you can be tyrannized over by industrial concerns using governmental powers as well as by the Government direct. The protective tariff is a plain use of Government for enriching private individuals. Fortunes built up in that way are clearly against the public weal.

"I feel sorry for the policemen. I am sure they are no better or worse than other people. They only do what they see being done around them every day. It is their desire to get something for nothing—that is all. The manner in which they go about it is nastier, but in principle it is about the same as that governing other business enterprises around them."

He favored abolishing the tariff as a beginning in the right direction, and the adoption of the single-tax idea as another forward step. In the matter of Government ownership, he said he did not favor that as a rule, but that conditions could become such as to make it the lesser of two evils. There was such a thing, he declared, as the Government being owned by the monopolies. When it came, he said, to the question of the monopolies owning the Government or the Government the monopolies, he was for Government ownership every time. The best remedy of all, he said, was to educate the people up to the sentiment that every man is entitled to his own earnings.

The speaker did not appear to be very hopeful of the outcome of the present reform movement in the city, and said it was absurd to start a crusade against the east side and not against Wall Street. The crusade, he said, might result in the checking of such flagrant flaunting of vice in our midst, but that no permanent good would come until the seat of the trouble was attacked.

COMMODORE HENDERSON DEAD.

Chief Engineer of the Navy Passes Away at His Home in Yonkers.

Commodore Alexander Henderson, Chief Engineer, United States Navy, died at his residence, 87 Locust Hill Avenue, Yonkers, on Saturday evening.

Commodore Henderson was born in Washington, D. C., on July 12, 1832. He was the son of the late Col. Thomas Henderson, United States Army, and the grandson of Commodore Thomas Truxtun, United States Navy. He entered the navy as a Third Assistant Engineer in February, 1851. He was in Commodor Perry's fleet which visited the Orient in 1852-5, and opened up Japan to intercourse with Western civilization. He served in the Mediterranean in 1856-7, and took part in the famous Paraguay expedition in 1858.

He again served in the Mediterranean in 1859 and 1860, and in 1861, though a Virginian, of one of the oldest Southern families, with many of his relatives in the Confederate service, he returned to the United States and served in the Northern fleet throughout the civil war. He was in most of the bombardments undertaken by the Atlantic Blockading Squadron, and, while serving on the James River, participated in the siege of Petersburg and the capture of Richmond. Afterward he was successively the fleet engineer of the Asiatic and of the European stations.

In 1882, when the building of the present "new navy" was about to begin, Mr. Henderson was made the engineering head of the Naval Advisory Board, and the engines of the first vessels of the new navy were designed by him and built under his supervision. When the work of the Advisory Board was finished in 1889, he became Chief Engineer of the Boston Navy Yard, and filled that office until shortly before his retirement with the rank of Commodore in July, 1894.

The very day after his retirement from active service he went into business as Treasurer of the Manhattan Rubber Manufacturing Company. Later he organized and conducted a steamship company, running a line of vessels on the coast of Maine. He lived for three years in New York City, until 1897, when he took up his permanent residence in Yonkers.

When the Spanish war broke out, he volunteered his services, and again returned to active duty, serving until the close of the war as Fleet Engineer of the Auxiliary Navy.

He leaves a widow and five children. One of his brothers was an army officer, and one was an officer in the navy. One of his sisters married Gen. Eastman, United States Army, and another was the wife of the late Rear Admiral Thomas T. Craven, United States Navy; Rear Admiral Henry L. Howison, now residing in Yonkers, and Col. J. V. D. Middleton, United States Army, are his brothers-in-law, and his three sons and his son-in-law, William H. Stayton, all served in the navy during the Spanish-American war.

The funeral services will be held to-morrow afternoon in St. Paul's Church, Yonkers.

FISHERMAN'S GHASTLY CATCH.

Finds Mass of Human Hair on His Line —To Drag Conesus Lake.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Jan. 13.—While fishermen were angling through the ice on Conesus Lake, near Lakeville, last Thursday, one of them, after a difficult pull, landed his hook, and was horrified upon examination to find clinging to the line a mass of tangled human hair, apparently that of a woman.

The men were not far from the site of the Degarmo cottage, where last Fall occurred the tragic death of little Marie Lennon. William Degarmo, Jr., is now under arrest charged with the murder of the Lennon girl. Mrs. Lennon, the child's mother, disappeared about the time the child died, and a double interest now attaches to the fishermen's find. It is supposed there must be the dead body of a woman in the water under the ice. The lake will be dragged as soon as the conditions will permit.

MIXED COUPLE QUARRELL.

Husband and Wife Fire Many Shots at Each Other, but Neither Is Hurt.

Harry Goebble, a white man, and his wife, colored, live at 120 West Thirty-third Street. Last Fall the husband pawned a diamond ring, the property of his wife. Both went to the pawnshop Saturday night to redeem it. They stopped in various saloons and the woman lost her pocketbook. The husband chided her for her carelessness.

The wife, angry, grabbed a revolver, the husband another, and both began to blaze away. Their aims were very poor, as the only damage inflicted was the cracking of a small mirror. Policeman Reid of the West Thirtieth Street Station arrested them. In Jefferson Market Court there were counter charges of felonious assault. The woman seemed dazed and declared she had no recollection of having quarreled with her husband. Magistrate Flammer thought the woman's condition required investigation, and adjourned the case.

NOTED MONEY LENDER DEAD

Career of "Greatest of Modern Shylocks" Ends in London.

Samuel Lewis Made the British Nobility His Special Prey—Huge Scale of His Operations.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—Samuel Lewis, the notorious money lender and usurer, who has been called the "greatest and meanest of modern Shylocks," is dead.

Samuel Lewis was the most famous money lender in the United Kingdom of the last quarter of a century. He was the original of the villains in half a score of well-known novels, but, so far from the romances exaggerating the extent of his operations, the majority of them failed to do justice to it.

It is a strange coincidence that the death of Lewis occurs at the time that the new English act to regulate money lending goes into effect. The provisions of this act are directed mainly against the business methods of Lewis and the smaller fry which imitate them, and it is expected that the law will have a most salutary effect in checking some of the most flagrant forms of robbing rich young men.

It was from young men that the bulk of Lewis's immense fortune—estimated by some persons at £17,000,000—was obtained. Hardly a noble spendthrift of recent times who has come to grief but has been found to be indebted to the famous money lender for a large amount. Even royalty itself, if oft repeated reports have any foundation, was frequently engaged in business transactions with him, and there is no doubt that certain members of the British royal family have shown courtesies to the money lender at race courses and other gatherings which seem inexplicable on any other theory.

As to "Sam" Lewis's early antecedents little is known. He never talked about his after running through his immense inhis business was a gradual one. The moneylending public has heard about him in recent years chiefly through the reports of proceedings in the law courts. It was Lewis who was in great measure responsible for the downfall of Ernest Benzon, known to fame as "Jubilee Juggins." When that remarkable young man came into over £1,000,000 on reaching his majority, a large slice of it was paid over to Lewis, who retained his hold on Benzon until every penny of the latter's fortune was gone.

Another famous case in which Lewis was a prominent figure was that of the last Marquis of Ailesbury, who died in 1894, after running th rough his immense inheritance and mortgaging his beautiful estate, Savernake Forest, the largest single property in the United Kingdom. Lord Ailesbury was declared a bankrupt some time before he died, and at the bankruptcy proceedings one of the principal creditors was Lewis, who presented a claim for £257,000. This represented only the balance of his lordship's debt.

In November, 1897, still more of the light of publicity was thrown upon Lewis's business methods. At that time he sued Lieut. H. H. S. Clay of the Second Life Guards for £11,113, the amount of two promissory notes cashed for Lord William Nevill, son of the Marquis of Abergavenny, to which he had allowed them to go protest. It developed when the case came up in the courts that Lieut. Clay did not even know that he had indorsed the notes, the signatures being obtained from him by trickery. He thought he was witnessing a couple of deeds for his fellow-officer. It was also developed that the amount of interest even nominally charged to Lewis was a little under 40 per cent. per annum. Afterward Lord William had to answer in the criminal courts for his action in obtaining Lieut. Clay's signatures and was sentenced to a term of years in prison. At the civil trial it was stated that the parents of another confiding young man who had indorsed Lord William's paper had been obliged to pay to Lewis a sum of over £40,000.

It would be impossible even to recapitulate all the celebrated cases which have come to light through the medium of legal proceedings in which Lewis played the part of the unrelenting Shylock. Of course, the affairs which became known to the public were only a fraction—a very small fraction—of the volume of business which he transacted. He had nothing to do with middle class borrowers, confining his operations to the nobility and the very rich.

Eight months ago all aristocratic London was astonished to learn that this man, who had the reputation of possessing about as much heart as a piece of flint had married Miss Fanny Ward, the American burlesque actress. Every one expressed doubt as to the truth of the report, but it was stated that it had been fully confirmed. Miss Ward appeared in several productions in this city about ten years ago, her greatest success being in the part of Cupid in David Henderson's production of "Sinbad." Before she married Lewis, Miss Ward had also became known to fame through the medium of the law courts, suing the son of a wealthy New Yorker for breach of promise. The suit never came to trial, being settled by mutual agreement.

Lewis took his bride to his beautiful place on the Thames, at Maidenhead. He purchased it from Countess Cowley in 1895 for £12,000.

Scamper to Join the White Rats.

Forty-three new members were admitted to the association of vaudeville artists known as the White Rats, at a meeting held yesterday, among them being Maurice Barrymore, Peter Daily, Andrew Mack, John T. Keily, Otis Harlan, Joe Coin, and Eddie Gerard. This is the association organized to fight the so-called Vaudeville Trust. A vaudeville theatre in this city has been offered to the rats, to be run on a co-operative basis, but no decision in the matter has been come to. It was proposed yesterday, and taken up by the Board of Directors for consideration, that the female stars of vaudeville should be admitted to membership.

Two Lives Lost in Buffalo Fire.

BUFFALO, Jan. 13.—Mary Spitzman and Clara Meyers, servants, were burned to death this morning in a fire that gutted the fifth floor of the Buckingham apartment house, corner of Allen and Mariner Streets. The property loss is estimated at $85,000, $35,000 on the building and $50,000 on furniture and other contents of the building

Dead in Pool of Acid and Water.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 13.—The body of a man, apparently about sixty years old, was found this morning in a sort of swamp in the rear of the Flower City Kid Company's works on Berlin Street. He had evidently been drowned by falling into the pool during the night. His hair and beard had been partly burned off by acids that flow with the refuse from the kid works.

How the Pastor Raised the Debt.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 13.—By a house-to-house canvass among the congregation of St. Luke's Methodist Episcopal Church the Rev. Dr. Wilbert P. Ferguson, the pastor, succeeded last week in securing subscriptions enough to wipe out the floating and bonded debt, amounting to $40,000. As a result to-day was one of rejoicing and praisegiving in the church. Two former pastors, the Rev. J. Wesley Johnston of Meriden, Conn., and the Rev. Frederick Clare Baldwin, took part in the jubilation.

THE FRENCH RELIGIOUS BILL.

Provisions of the Measure Which Affects Roman Catholic Orders.

The Jesuit fathers resident in this city are intensely interested in the provisions of the French Religious Society bill, which is now being debated. Here are the most important features of the proposed law, which does not once mention religious orders, although it is aimed wholly at them. The Pope has repeatedly protested against the enactment of this law, and according to the Libre Parole has given orders to the Apostolic Nuncio in Paris to ask for his passports immediately if the vote this week is favorable.

Article 1.—An association is a convention by which two or more persons place their knowledge and activity in common with a purpose other than the division of the benefits thus obtained.

Article 2.—All associations established on an illegal basis or point of interest, or contrary to rights, which have no commercial value, are void and of no effect.

Article 8.—No association unworthy of legal recognition can in any case of form have the right of constituting a legal civic personality.

Article 15.—No association will be recognized legally existent without a special decree from the Council of State, if it be, (a) between Frenchmen and foreigners; (b) between Frenchmen alone when the seat and management of the same is situated in a foreign country or managed by foreigners.

Article 1 includes all religious orders, as the purpose of their formation is not the division of the benefits accruing from their community life. Article 2 is especially designed to forbid the emission of vows, which is therein called the renouncing of rights which have no commercial value, like the right of marriage, the right of possession, &c., which the monks renounce in joining their orders by the emission of their vows. Article 8 denies to this kind of association the right to constitute a legal civic personality, and, therefore, the right of possession before the civil law. Article 13 aims more directly at religious orders by disallowing all associations which, like monks and nuns, are generally composed of people of all nationalities, and obey a general and directors residing, now in Paris, but in Rome.

As most of the present religious orders in France have already obtained legal recognition from the Government since the laws enacted under President Grevy, in March, 1880, an amendment has been introduced by the Waldeck-Rousseau Ministry decreeing that all persons who have not been educated in the public schools of the State shall be deemed unfit to occupy any military, naval, or civic position drawing a Government salary. This will be the most fatal blow to the educational institutions of the religious orders, because French parents will hereafter send their children to the State schools instead of having them sent to colleges kept by monks and nuns to the danger of their careers in life.

MASTER MISSING, MAID TOO.

John R. Ditmars Left His Home in December, Servant Went Same Day.

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., Jan. 13.—The continued disappearance of John R. Ditmars from his residence, 69 Clinton Street, East Orange, and the fact that at about the time he left home Katie Gallagher, a servant employed in the house, also disappeared, has given occasion for considerable gossip in the Oranges. Mrs. Ditmars is prominent socially and a member of a number of women's societies.

Mrs. Ditmars admits that her husband left home in December and that the servant disappeared the same day, and intimates that she knows where her husband is. The servant was traced to Bloomfield, but all track of her was lost there.

Dr. R. M. Sanger, an East Orange dentist, has secured an attachment against Mr. Ditmars for $102, the amount of a bill for dentistry. The attachment has been levied against the stock owned by Mr. Ditmars in a building and loan association.

Mr. Ditmars is connected with the Laflin & Rand Company, the well-known powder manufacturers of New York.

DRUGGIST'S CAT KILLED.

Tiddledywinks Liked Birds and Was Fed on Ground Glass—Many Dogs Poisoned in Westchester.

George Smith, druggist, of Main Street, Westchester, up to last Friday, owned a cat known in the neighborhood as Tiddledywinks. On the evening of that day, Tiddledywinks disappeared. Yesterday morning some boys playing at the foot of Dock Street, along Westchester Creek, fished the cat's body from the stream and told Mr. Smith about it. A post-mortem showed him that his pet had been fed on ground glass.

Mr. Smith has his suspicions, but he wasn't saying anything yesterday. Some of his neighbors were heard to say last night that Tiddledywinks's reputation in that part of Westchester was bad, merely from the cat's predilection for birds and its success in catching them both before and after dark. Just what this has to do with the ground glass treatment is not known, but Mr. Smith would like to find out who killed his cat, which, he said, weighed forty pounds and measured, from tail to nose, 3½ feet.

The death of the cat revived the talk last night of the poisoning within two months of several dogs in the neighborhood. William Apfel, a near neighbor of the druggist, recently lost two Great Danes, Charles Roland and Brooks Brothers each a St. Bernard, and several other residents of the same locality have lost dogs of more or less value. Complaints have been made to the police and to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

POLICE CAPTAIN ASSAULTED.

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., Jan. 13.—A daring assault upon a police officer occurred in this city shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon, and the assailant is now locked up on a charge of attempted murder. The incident occurred at Main and Cone Streets, in the heart of the city, and Police Captain Daniel Leary was the intended victim.

For some time Capt. Leary has suspected Michael Kelly, a well-known character, of being implicated in petty robberies, and Kelly has openly boasted that he would "fix" the Captain. To-day the Captain was on his way home to dinner, in citizen's clothes, when Kelly stopped him. Drawing a revolver, the man aimed at the officer and pulled the trigger. The Captain thought his time had come. He has not carried a revolver in years and was totally unprepared for the assailant. The revolver failed to work, and a citizen who saw the affair ran to a telephone and called for assistance.

When Kelly saw Bicycle Policeman Cronin scorching up the street he started to run, but when Cronin caught him, in the Lackawanna Railroad freight yard, Kelly was still full of fight. He leveled his revolver at Cronin, but the latter was not unprepared, and soon covered Kelly, and forced him to back up against a fence, when he disarmed him. An examination of the revolver showed that it was an old weapon, and some new cartridges that Kelly had loaded it with were not the right kind for active service.

Capt. Leary decided after the occurrence to clean up his revolver and carry it with him, so that he would not be caught unprepared again.

RAILROAD CONFESSES JUDGMENT.

Big Four to Pay $2,000 for Discriminating in Freight Charges.

Special to The New York Times.

HARRISBURG, Ill., Jan. 13.—At a special session of the Saline County Circuit Court, held here yesterday, the case of the people against the Big Four Railroad was disposed of.

The railroad, through its attorney, confessed judgment for $2,000 on a charge of discriminating in freight rates.

Similar charges will be brought by individuals against the company in the April term of the Circuit Court.

TRIED TO ROB A BANK.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Jan. 13.—Policeman Charles W. Goss surprised a gang of men attempting to rob the German Savings Bank at an early hour this morning. He engaged in battle with three of the men, who were already in the bank, and one who was acting as sentinel on the outside. Goss is sure he wounded two of the men. None of the shots fired at him did him any damage.

The gang made their escape over the West Virginia Central Railroad track, terrorizing the few persons they met on the way by indiscriminate firing. They shot at the operator of the West Virginia Railroad as he raised the window at the station, a bullet crashing through the glass.

Nothing was stolen at the bank.

The bank has offered a reward of $250 for the capture of the burglars, and has given $50 to Policeman Goss.

MAIL FOR ANARCHISTS SEIZED.

Packages for the Paterson Organ of Anarchy Held by Postal Authorities.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 13.—Mystery surrounds the alleged seizure by the postal authorities of four registered packages mailed to La Questione Sociale, the organ of the Anarchists in this city. The Group of the Right of Existence and the comrades of the two other Anarchist groups located here have formulated a protest and a demand for the delivery of the matter which has been forwarded to the authorities at Washington.

La Questione Sociale and its editor, Pedro Esteve, came into prominence when the discovery was made that Gaetano Bresci, the assassin of King Humbert of Italy, formerly a silk weaver here, had been Esteve's friend and associate. Editor Esteve and his associates openly avowed their principles, but denied any connection with Bresci or any other in the commission of violence. With the departure of the Commissioner the incident was considered closed, and his report is supposed to be filed in the archives of the Italian Government as a chapter in the history of Italy. Secret agents have, however, appeared at the headquarters of the Anarchists, and at the meetings of the three groups. It appeared that all foreign communications have been watched with suspicion, the delivery of literature and pamphlets being followed by espionage and inquiry of detectives in New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore. The object was to learn, if possible, the strength and membership of the Anarchist groups, and if possible to identify its individual membership.

At the last meeting of the Group of the Right of Existence it was decided that action be taken upon the seizure of registered mail sent to La Questione Sociale. Mr. Esteve stated that he could not account for the action of the postal authorities. The usual registered notice had been sent by the local office, but when called for was found "suspected." He had requested that the packet be opened and its contents examined. The packages were opened and pamphlets and several books revealed. The packages were held, however, and copies of the pamphlets sent for inspection, while the rest, Esteve said, were held pending a decision. Two registered packages were followed by two others, and the same course adopted. It appeared, he claimed, that the Government, under pretense of examination for dutiable matter, proposed to suspect the registered mail of the Anarchist publication.

Editor Estevo said that a protest against the action and seizure had been ordered, but there was little involved beyond a desire to secure an official declaration. He said that pamphlets identical with those which had been held up when registered had been passed in the regular mail delivery without question. The packages contained books by Kropotkine, Malateste, "Patriotism and Government," by Tolstoi, and works of a like character.

At the Post Office a different state of affairs was made out. The packages, it appeared, had arrived stamped "Supposed to be liable for duty." According to the usual rule, the customs department at Newark had been notified and the packages opened with the orders to send copies of the pamphlets. Later the packages were called for, the Chief of the Post Office connection with the matter ended, as no order had come from the customs authorities.

THIEF BESIEGED BY TROOPS.

Frenchman Shuts Himself in Garret—Kills One Man, Wounds Two.

TROYES, France, Jan. 13.—At Saint Sabine Friday a man named Coquard, who was pursued by gendarmes because of many thefts, shut himself in the garret of his house with a quantity of arms and ammunition and threatened to kill any one who approached him.

Yesterday he wounded two persons, and the house has since been besieged by gendarmes and troops. This afternoon a citizen attempted, on his own responsibility, to make terms with Coquard, but the latter killed him. The body of the dead man was secured by two citizens under the protection of a company of infantry. The siege still continues.

Fifty Madagascans Drowned.

MARSEILLES, Jan. 13.—Mail advices from Antananarivo, Madagascar, dated Dec. 16, report the drowning of fifty natives from the capsizing of a barge.

Naturalized American Expelled.

BERLIN, Jan. 13.—Hugo Bettauer, a naturalized American who is connected with the Berliner Tageblatt, has been expelled from Prussia as an obnoxious foreigner.

The German Canal Bill.

BERLIN, Jan. 13.—The first Canal bill report estimates the yearly cost for interest and repairs at 9,900,000 marks, not counting receipts. It emphasizes the strategical importance of the canal in assembling war material and transporting sick and wounded, this feature applying particularly to the western and eastern frontiers.

French Naval Captain Dead.

PARIS, Jan. 14.—Capt. Bery, the well-known naval officer, is dead. He won fame in 1893, when, in command of a small French flotilla, he ran under the Siamese forts at the entrance to the Menam River and took his vessels to Bangkok, twenty miles up the stream.

FIRES EXCITE THE TENDERLOIN

Three Occur Within Two Hours, Two in Broadway Hotels, but Little Damage Is Done.

Alarms for three fires, all in prominent buildings, were sent in within two hours yesterday evening from boxes located in the Tenderloin. In none of the cases was the damage heavy nor were there any injuries; but there was much excitement in the neighborhood.

The first alarm followed the discovery of fire in the apartments of Milton Roblee, proprietor of the Bartholdi Hotel, Broadway and Twenty-third Street. Mr. Roblee's apartments are on the second floor of the hotel, and some one had dropped a lighted cigar stump in a waste paper basket. The paper blazed up, in the absence of any one in the room, and set fire to a writing table. There was considerable excitement in the hotel when the engines came clanging to the hotel corner. The blaze was quickly extinguished, and the damage amounted to about $50.

An hour later Policeman Hauk of the West Thirtieth Street Station saw a third-floor awning ablaze on the Forty-first Street side of the Criterion Hotel, at Broadway and Forty-first Street. He sent in an alarm, and then ran into the hotel and informed the clerks. He and one of the clerks ran up stairs and beat the fire out with clothes. The damage was trifling. It is supposed that one of the guests on the fourth floor had dropped a lighted match out of the window on the awning.

Twenty minutes later fire was discovered in the basement of the McCreedy Building, a twelve-story office structure at 143 Fifth Avenue. It was in the boiler room, and was caused by an overheated boiler setting fire to one of the wooden beams resting against it. An alarm was sent in, but Policeman Crowley of the West Thirtieth Street Station, and the firemen in the building, had the blaze out when the engines responded. The damage was $50.

Mosquito Fleet Leaves Bermuda.

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Jan. 13.—The United States war vessels Annapolis, Frolic, Wampatuck, and Piscataqua, constituting the mosquito fleet, which arrived here Jan. 2, sailed at 9:30 this morning for Manila.

Steamer Abandoned, Crew Saved.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—The crew of the British steamer Strathleven wae landed at St. Michael's, Azores, to-day by the German ship Ardgowan, after having been rescued Jan. 6 in lattitude 35 north longitude 25 west, from their ship, which was abandoned in a sinking condition.

The Strathleven sailed from Pensacola Dec. 20, bound for Barcelona, in command of Capt. Innes. The Strathleven was an iron, schooner rigged, screw steamer of 1,588 tons net, built in 1875 at Port Glasgow. She was owned by H. Abram, and hailed from Glasgow.

Lord Salisbury's Half-Brother Dead.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—Lord Lionel Cecil, half-brother of the Marquis of Salisbury, is dead.

Lord Lionel Cecil was the sixth son of the second Marquis of Salisbury. The latter, who was the father of the present Prime Minister, died in 1868. He was married twice—first, to Miss Frances Mary Gascoyne, and in 1847 to the Hon. Mary Catherine Sackville-West, daughter of the fifth Earl De La Warr. The present Marquis of Salisbury is a son of the first marriage, and Lord Lionel of the second. The nobleman who died yesterday was never active in public life. He was born on March 21, 1853. He was at one time a Major in the Third (militia) Battalion of the Northumberland Fusiliers.

MARRIED.

HOLDER—DAVIS.—At Church of Epiphany, New York City, Jan. 12, Estelle Bennett Davis to Frederick Devoe Holder.

DIED.

AMY.—On Friday, Jan. 11, 1901, at his residence, 18 West 27th St., after a lingering illness, Henry Amy, in the 73d year of his age.
Requiem mass at the Church of St. Vincent de Paul, West 23d St., on Monday morning, Jan. 14, at 10 o'clock. It is earnestly requested that no flowers be sent.

New York, January 12th, 1901.

At a special meeting of the Board of Trustees of the EMIGRANT INDUSTRIAL SAVINGS BANK held at the Bank this day, it was

Resolved, That the members of this Board have heard with profound regret of the death of their friend and associate Trustee, HENRY AMY, who for twenty-six years, as a member of the Board, has by his valuable services, and genial, kindly manner endeared himself to all who knew him.

He was elected a member of this Board of Trustees January 21st, 1875, and served on the Finance Committee from 1879; being elected its Chairman in 1892, which position he held until his death.

His great financial ability was ever at the service of the Bank, and by his long years of practical experience in banking, his advice and services proved most valuable to this institution of which he was an honored member.

Resolved, That the Trustees extend to the family their sincere condolence; that an engrossed copy of these Resolutions be sent to them as an expression of sympathy, and that the Board attend his funeral in a body.

Committee { JAMES G. JOHNSON, JOHN BYRNE, JOHN CRANE.

JAMES McMAHON, President.

At a special meeting of the IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY, held January 12th, 1901, the following Resolutions were unanimously adopted:

By the death of HENRY AMY the Irish Emigrant Society has lost one of its oldest, most useful and honored members.

For over twenty-five years he was prominent in its councils, active in its management, and heartily interested in its mission.

Though not of Irish birth or extraction, he was as zealous for the welfare of the emigrants from that country as his associates, who were its sons or their descendants. Much of this feeling was the outgrowth of his kindly impulses, coming from a generous heart and inspired by his solid practical faith, which was manifested in his unostentatious charities.

Mr. Amy was at the time of his death a member of the Finance Committee, upon which he had served for many years. His prominent position and long experience in financial affairs rendered his counsels valuable to the business management of the Society, and his genial manner and thoughtful consideration for others endeared him to all who came in contact with him, and especially to his fellow-members, who sincerely mourn his loss, and who will miss his presence amongst them:

In private life he was a model husband and father; an edifying examplar of the true Catholic; in public he bore an unblemished reputation.

His associates of the IRISH EMIGRANT SOCIETY, desiring to manifest their sorrow and sense of loss occasioned by his death—

Resolve, That this Memorial be inscribed upon the minute-book of the Society, and that an engrossed copy thereof be presented to his bereaved family, with the expression of their deepest regret and sympathy.

Committee { CHARLES V. FORNES, MICHAEL E. BANNIN, JAS. McMAHON.

JAMES RORKE, President.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Wall Street will resume business today with reasons for increasing confidence. The action last week of the Louisville and Nashville Directors, followed by that of the Delaware and Hudson officials—larger dividends in each case being declared—has added to the confidence of the investing and the speculative public alike. The feeling is that in neither case would so liberal a policy have been decided upon did not conditions and the general outlook warrant. With widespread prosperity—extending to manufacturing lines, to the railroad field, to all forms of enterprise—the promise for the future is that increased dividends will be the rule.

***

It is more than a coincidence that members of representative Stock Exchange brokerage and banking houses should continue to talk so confidently of the market's future. The views presented in these columns yesterday, and their uniformity—all agreeing that higher market values are not only logical, but certain—are peculiarly suggestive. Wall Street cannot in a few days discount assured years of prosperity.

***

Gold export shipments may be made this week, and some estimates have it that on the present movement something like $15,000,000 may go out. But with the cash holdings of New York banks increased over $11,000,000 last week alone, with call rates down to 3 per cent., and the return flow of money from the interior but begun, it is clear that exports can be made without disturbing in the least the local money market. Such, indeed, is the best opinion in Wall Street banking circles.

The fact is the exports will help in that they will give encouragement to the foreign markets, their betterment being in turn reflected here.

MISSOURI PACIFIC OUTLOOK.

The recent remarkable activity and strength in Missouri Pacific stock have set Wall Street guessing as to the reasons for the buying, and what, if any, developments are pending in the affairs of the company. Incidentally, it has been noted that the buying of the stock by the same banking house which one day last week took 40,000 shares continues. While no official information on the subject is forthcoming, the belief is that this buying foreshadows an early dividend declaration on the stock, ton which 8 per cent. is being earned, as shown by official figures,) while there is also again suggested a possibility of a consolidation in the Southwestern group of railways.

The annual meeting of the company has been fixed for March 12, at which time it is believed important announcements will be made.

ERIE AND READING.

Messrs. Hambleton & Co., the Baltimore bankers, reviewing market conditions, write:

"The possibilities in connection with both the Erie and Reading properties are undeniably great.

"The first preferred stock of a road which shows earnings equal to 4 per cent. dividends, and more, as is stated to be the case with Erie, and with improving prospects and reasonable promise of paying dividends at that rate, cannot be regarded as dear at a price in the sixties, when other 4 per cents. stocks command prices ranging from $10 to $20 higher. The Erie Road is very favorably situated, being a most important link in a great Eastern trunk line system, with valuable Western connections, and dividends on its first preferred stock appear assured in the near future. If it is put upon a 4 per cent. basis, as generally expected, this stock is relatively the cheapest of the railroad preferred shares.

"We hold a similarly high opinion of Reading first preferred. It paid last year dividends at the rate of 2 per cent., and an increased rate to 1 per cent. is regarded as approximating certainty. The amount of the issue is comparatively small, being $28,-000,000, and it ought not to be difficult to provide earnings for the full 4 per cent. dividends, with a large surplus above that. Reading first preferred, selling low in the seventies, could easily advance ten points, in our judgment, on merit.

"We are far from thinking that the bull market has or is about to terminate; on the contrary, we believe it will continue for months to come. More deals are promised, but they will probably not all come at once. Declines must and will inevitably occur; reactions help to keep the market normal and healthy; but on all such set-backs the good railroads should prove profitable to buy. The market has the best leadership Wall Street has ever seen—not mere speculators for a turn, but the most powerful and influential railroad and banking interests, whose far-reaching plans cannot in the nature of things be completed and executed in a day or a fortnight, but must necessarily extend over a much longer period of time."

ON THE LONDON EXCHANGE.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—On the whole, the Stock Exchange last week had a quiet but uncertain experience. The improved feeling resulting from the announcement that the creditors of the London and Globe Finance Corporation, Limited, would be paid in full changed to anxiety when it was learned yesterday that this had apparently not yet been arranged for. Before the close of the Exchange disquieting rumors were afloat to the effect that the creditors would have to accept half the face of their claims, and that even this would not be cash down.

The markets on the whole, however, were not much affected, although consols closed 3-16 lower. Home railroad securities, with one or two exceptions, improved from one-half point to two points.

The American division still continued the most active and the most interesting of the entire market. The week opened with a break, followed by large realizations, St. Paul dropping sharply. On further information, however, a good recovery took place, and the market, displaying considerable strength, finished well above the worst figures. Among the increases were Union Pacific, which rose 2½ points; Northern Pacific preferred, 2½; Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, 1¾; Reading firsts, 1¾; Erie, firsts, 1¾; New York Central and Hudson River, 2; Baltimore and Ohio, ¼; Chesapeake and Ohio, 1⅜; Union Pacific preferred, 1½; Illinois Central, ½; Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé, 1; Norfolk and Western, 1, and Pennsylvania, 1.

Mining shares remained all the week under the shadow of the failure of the London and Globe Finance Corporation, Limited. The news from South Africa helped the depression, and mines generally closed lower, Rands losing five-eighths on the week.

ARIMEX CONSOLIDATED COPPER COMPANY.

Capital..... $5,000,000.

This company was organized under the laws of the State of New Jersey for the purpose of purchasing and operating copper producing properties.

Its capital is $5,000,000, divided into 200,000 shares of common stock of the par value of $25 each. It has no bonds or mortgage debt.

Of this capital 120,935 shares, or $3,023,375 of the capital stock, has been issued in payment for certain properties. The balance of 79,065 shares remains in the treasury of the company.

The company owns the following properties:

1,750,000 shares out of a total of 2,000,000 of the par value of $5 each, of the Table Mountain Copper Company of Illinois	$8,750,000
90,000 shares out of a total of 100,000 of the par value of $10 each, of the Angang Copper Company of New Jersey	900,000
500,000 shares out of a total of 500,000 of the par value of $10 each, of the Oxide Copper Company of New Jersey	5,000,000
	$14,650,000

The Oxide Copper Company owns the Copper Prince group of copper claims, located in the Silver Bell mining district, Pima County, Arizona, comprising thirty claims. Early in the Spring of the year 1900 a contract was entered into by the company for extensive developments by sinking a shaft five hundred feet, which, with cross-cuts, would develop a large part of the property, and in other ways. At the present time this shaft is down about 370 feet, and work is being vigorously pushed.

The Table Mountain Company owns twenty-seven claims, situated in the Bunker Hill Mining District, Pinal County, Arizona.

The Angang Copper Company consists of about four hundred mining claims, situated at Zituacuaro, in the State of Michoacan, Mexico, known as the Chirianganguceo Mines. Development was planned early in the year on a large scale, and Mr. Adolphe Rock, the resident director and general manager of the company, has devoted himself to this work. These mines were worked many years ago by Mexicans in a very desultory manner, large bodies of ore having been taken out and large dumps remaining, showing the extent of the former operations. Mr. Rock has unwatered the shafts, built houses for the workmen, buildings for the company, begun work on the roads, and generally begun a systematic development of the property on a large scale.

During the year 1900 development work on an extended scale has been carried on vigorously on the property at the Angang and Oxide Companies, and to a smaller extent on the properties of the Table Mountain Company, under the supervision and direction of the President of the Arimex Company, Mr. Charles H. Dickey of Baltimore, Md. The development has proven the property to be so rich as to warrant immediate extension of development operations on a very large scale, which operations, in the opinion of the Directors, will give enormous net returns.

From the fact that this property has been in charge of practical copper mining men, and that the chief executive officer, Mr. Dickey, is also President of the Parrot Company—which, since the formation of the Amalgamated Copper Company, has been one of that company's largest producing copper properties—the chances of mistakes have probably been reduced to a minimum.

For the purpose of placing all these properties upon a dividend earning basis in the shortest time possible, the Board of Directors have voted that 60,000 shares of the treasury stock of the company be sold by subscription at par, $25.00 per share, by Messrs. E. N. Morison & Company, Bankers, Baltimore, Md., and any other selling agents they may select.

OFFER FOR PUBLIC SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Notice is hereby given that offers for public subscription for 60,000 Shares, of the value of $25 each, of the stock of the will be received at the office of either of the undersigned until the twenty-third day of January, 1901, at the rate of $25 per share. Subscriptions must be accompanied by certified check for 20 per cent. of the amount of such subscription, the balance to be payable within ten days after notice of allotment.

ARIMEX CONSOLIDATED COPPER COMPANY

Temporary negotiable receipts will be issued, on payment of sums due on allotment, exchangeable for certificates of stock as soon as same can be engraved.

We reserve the right to allot any or all of the above-named amount at any time on or before January 23.

We also reserve the right to allot or reject any subscription in whole or in part.

Subscription blanks sent on application.

We respectfully refer intending subscribers in Baltimore, Washington, and Philadelphia, who are more or less unfamiliar with the investment quality of copper stocks generally, to the following statement of Thomas W. Lawson of Boston, Mass.:

COPPERS IN THE PAST.

Four years ago I publicly called attention to "Coppers"—to the fact that although they had been actively dealt in on the Boston Stock Exchange for over fifty years, and had been and were still the basis of a large portion of New England's wealth, their merits as first-class and semi-speculative investments were almost unknown to investors and speculators in this country and Europe; to the fact that investigation would prove that an investment in the stock of any of the good producing "Coppers" would give much larger yearly net returns, with a surer guarantee of permanency for a longer period of time, than a like investment in any other class of stocks, and I stated my belief that, so soon as these facts became known to investors and speculators throughout this country and Europe, there would begin a "scramble" for "Coppers" unparalleled in the history of the stock market, with the result that the price of such stocks then for sale in the open market would multiply, that this increased value would hold and be further increased for years to come.

At this time, and in all my subsequent statements, the following were named as some of the leading "Coppers" which would multiply in price: Butte & Boston, then selling at $2 to $14; Boston & Montana, then selling at $50 to $75, and Calumet & Hecla, then selling at $225. So radical did these views seem that they were adversely criticised by those interested in financial matters, and more particularly by professional financial critics, but it is now known and admitted that my predictions erred on the conservative side only, for the present prices of the "Coppers" then called to the attention of the public show an increase in value of hundreds of millions of dollars, or more than has ever accrued to any other class of stocks in a like period. The prices of the three named, Butte, Montana, and Calumet, alone show an increase in value of $115,000,000.

It is now known that never in the history of stocks has there been a parallel to the "scramble" for "Coppers" which carried the price of Butte from $2 to $108 per share, Montana from $50 to $400 and Calumet from $225 to $900, and others in like proportion, or another instance where such a tremendous increase in price held and became permanent. The fact that the public were so quickly educated, that such a great increase in values came in such a short time, and that this increase has held and is still advancing, and that seven out of every ten persons interested in financial matters in this country and Europe are now familiar with the merits of "Coppers," when four years ago not one in one thousand had even an intelligent idea of their worth, in my opinion proves the following statement, which was used in all my public utterances:—

"Owing to a peculiar combination of conditions, this great industry, copper, is the only one of all the great staples that has absolutely escaped the march of modern progress—escaped it for fifty years, until to-day it is possible for capital to be invested in this business on a basis that will give to it 100 per cent. net profit on all gross business—a business where the working of a natural law of supply and demand, not the artificial law of arbitrary combination, allows the producer to make his selling price such as will give to him from 100 to 150 per cent. net profit on his entire product."

THE FUTURE OF "COPPERS."

Intending purchasers of "Coppers" for investment or for speculation should first find a correct answer to these questions:—

(1) Will the earnings of "Coppers," at the present price of the metal, allow of larger net returns than can be secured from any other class of stocks?

(2) Can the permanency of production of copper mines be as surely ascertained as the future earning capacity of corporations which are the basis of other stocks, and,

(3) Will the present price of copper, the metal, be maintained? The answer to these three questions will enable one to decide whether "Coppers" are a purchase at present prices. A cursory investigation of "Coppers" will prove that no other class of business will give as large net earnings as are at the present time derived from "Coppers" at the ruling price of the metal.

A careful investigation of the present method of conducting the copper mining business will prove that in no other industry can the future earnings be as surely ascertained for so long a time in the future as "Coppers."

The reason for this is that all good producing copper mining companies first, that is, before beginning to "produce," "block out" for years in advance the copper ore which they afterwards are to "produce," and each year thereafter add to this reserve an amount of ore equal to from 50 to 100 per cent. of their yearly production; in other words, "Coppers," while paying the very large dividends they do pay, set aside each year in the form of blocked-out ore, 50 to 100 per cent. additional dividends.

So consistently has this been practiced, that mines like the Boston & Montana can at any time after their ore has "run out" pay to their stockholders a sum equal to the present selling price of their entire capital stock.

A thorough investigation will prove conclusively that the present price of copper, the metal, is permanent, that is, that it will surely be maintained for years to come, and that it will be maintained through the working of the natural law of supply and demand.

The present selling price of copper, the metal, is about 17 cents per pound. The cost of production is from 5 to 7 cents, yet with this enormous disproportionate net profit, the consumption throughout the world is so rapidly and steadily increasing beyond the possibility of production as to insure for years to come this or any other price which does not actually prohibit the use of this metal.

The only factor that can adversely affect the selling price of copper, the metal, is the discovery of new mines.

Demonstrated facts indicate conclusively that the entire production of all new mines for the coming ten years will probably not equal what has been taken from the old ones in the past three years.

The answers to these questions prove that no purchase of stocks can be made which will be so free from the risk of loss, so sure to pay for the present and for the future such large returns, and consequently so sure to give such large profits as "Coppers." In my opinion, the purchase of good, producing "Coppers" at present prices will give as large, if not larger, returns in the coming two years than have been realized in the past four.

"COPPERS" AS AN INVESTMENT.

In buying "Coppers" for speculation or investment, intending purchasers should, if possible, confine their purchases to the stocks of established, producing mines, for while such stocks are freer from the risk of loss than any other class of stocks, there is no greater risk than that which attends the purchase of the stocks of new copper mines.

No investment in a gold or silver mining stock, the stock of a land company or an industrial based upon patents, is attended with so great a risk, as an investment in the stock of a new copper mine. At least 499 in each 500 of the new copper mines whose stocks are offered for sale publicly are worthless, a large proportion of them being swindles of a most flagrant character, organized and conducted for the sole purpose of selling stock.

The reason for this is self-evident; to mine copper and legitimately conduct a copper mining business at the present time calls for the investment of a very large amount of cash capital. No new copper mining company can begin business, under the necessary modern methods, without the expenditure of at least $1,000,000 to $5,000,000 cash before any dividends can be earned, making it the most uninviting field for small capitalists who intend to conduct the business legitimately, and the most inviting field for schemers whose only purpose is to sell stocks on promises which can never be redeemed.

As an illustration of the difficulty of securing new copper mining properties: "During the past few years it has been necessary for me to closely follow all alleged discoveries of copper mining properties in the United States, Canada and Mexico. Of these there were four hundred and eighty odd which appeared to have sufficient merit to warrant investigation. Of the four hundred and eighty investigated, in only forty odd instances did they have sufficient merit to justify the expenditure necessary for complete investigation by the employment of engineers and mining machinery, and of these forty odd only three met all the requirements necessary for the establishment of a legitimate copper mining business."

Meetings and Elections.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL R. R. CO.
Public notice is hereby given that a special meeting of the stockholders of the Illinois Central Railroad Company will be held at the Company's Office in Chicago, Illinois, on Saturday, January, 26, 1901, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon, for the purpose of acting on these five propositions and transacting such other business as may, in connection therewith, come before the meeting.
FIRST—That in order to provide necessary moneys for the purchase of additional cars and locomotive engines needed for the accommodation of the growing traffic on the Company's lines of railway; the construction of additional second tracks, side tracks, and station and terminal facilities; the reduction of grades; the elimination of grade crossings at different places along said railway lines, and other improvements of a permanent character, some of which purchases, additions and improvements have already been undertaken, and for other corporate purposes, the capital stock of the Illinois Central Railroad Company be increased by an issue of 60,000 new shares of $100 each, from 600,000 shares to 660,000 shares of $100 each, thus making the whole capital stock of the Company $66,000,000.
SECOND—That each shareholder shall have the privilege of subscribing at par on or before March 4, 1901, for one share of such new stock, for every ten shares of stock registered in his name on the transfer books of the Company at the close of business on December 20, 1900, and for fractions of shares in like proportion—payment for the new stock to be made in full at the Company's office in the City of New York, on or before Monday, March 4, 1901.
THIRD—That stockholders entitled to subscribe for fractions of shares shall, upon payment therefor, receive scrip convertible into full-paid stock when presented in sums of $100 or multiples thereof, but such scrip shall not draw dividends.
FOURTH—That the shares, or fractions of shares, of the new issue, if any, not subscribed and paid for on or before March 4, 1901, may be disposed of by the Board of Directors at such price, or prices, not less than par, as may be approved by them.
FIFTH—That the new shares shall be entitled to participate in all dividends which may be declared payable after March 4, 1901.
For the purposes of this meeting, the stock transfer books will be closed at 3 P. M. on Thursday, December 20, 1900, and remain closed until the morning of Monday, January 7, 1901.
By order of the Board of Directors.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call during the week loaned at 2½@3 per cent., closing on Saturday at 4 per cent.

Time money, 4 per cent. for thirty days and 4@4½ per cent. for longer periods. Commercial paper rates, 4½@4¾ per cent. for sixty to ninety days' indorsements, 4¾@5 per cent. for choice single names, and 5@6 per cent. for others.

The Bank of England gained £470,438 bullion during the week, and the proportion of reserve to liabilities, which in the previous week was 29.56, became 33.91 per cent. The rate of discount remained unchanged at 5 per cent. The Bank of France gained 5,500,000f. gold and lost 825,000f. silver.

Foreign exchange market was firm. Posted rates were $4.84 for sixty days and $4.88 for demand. Actual rates on Saturday were $4.83¼ for sixty days, $4.87@$4.87⅛ for demand, $4.88 for cable transfers, and $4.82¼@$4.83 for commercial.

In Continental, Paris francs were quoted at 5.18⅛@5.18⅜ less 1-10 for long and 5.15⅝ for short; reichsmarks at 94 9-16 and 95 3-16, and guilders at 40⅜ and 40⅝.

New York exchange was quoted as follows: Chicago—10c premium. Boston—5c premium. San Francisco—Sight, 15c premium; telegraphic, 17½c premium. New Orleans—Commercial, 25c discount; bank, par.

OUR LONDON CABLE.

THE FIVE PER CENT. RATE

Divergence Between the Bank and Market—Likelihood of a Fall in Exchanges—Discount Struggling Toward 4¼—The Bank Expects the Market to Harden.

Cable Correspondence.
Copyright, 1901, THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—As yet our 5 per cent. bank rate has done nothing except slightly to turn the exchanges in our favor. As always happens when the Bank fails to pull the market with it, on most days of last week bills could be discounted at finer rates than had prevailed before the bank rate went up. Short money, too, is cheaper. On Friday the bankers struggled to get a 3¼ per cent. for seven-day advances, but had often to take a 3. If this divergence between the Bank and the market continues, the exchanges must again slip down and the small outflow of gold go on as before.

Discount, down almost to 4, struggles now toward 4¼. At the Bank itself a rather hopeful view is entertained, based on three considerations: First, some millions of the market's bills are in the Bank's possession, falling due chiefly within this month. As these are paid off, the credit outside must diminish in volume. Secondly, the Bank is quietly borrowing from other bankers what surplus balances they consent to part with, and, finally, revenue payments must now average more than £2,000,000 a week, and, if not immediately disbursed again, will alone deprive the outside credit dealers of a sensible portion of their present floating balances. Therefore the Bank says we may expect the money market to harden from now onward.

I hope the Bank will prove a true prophet, but it is not a strong hope, just because the Government is pouring out money so steadily. It has had to borrow another £1,000,000 on the current account with which to pay dividends. Altogether it owes the Bank on mere current advances £11,500,000, and the Bank also holds £1,500,000 in Treasury bills. The total floating debt, excluding the two issues of Exchequer bonds, now exceeds £32,000,000, and more than one-third of this credit has been advanced by the Bank itself. Here is the source of the sloppy state of our market, and its helplessness and afflictions are not to be got over, as I keep insisting, without the issue of another large public loan. So I will not prophesy about the future, particularly as there are many other troublesome influences at work screening off the influence of the Bank over the market.

Nor can I speak with confidence of the future of our stock markets. They are laboring and sick and burdened with the sequels of much rotten business, and are unsupported by a public eager to speculate. The investment business is fair, but is nearly confined to home securities of an approved type. I have been again and again told lately that the Stock Exchange has opened a huge short account with your railroad shares, but I do not believe it.

Inside the market there are doubtless groups of bears, but not outside, and the selling is altogether of no importance. The public still clears out and takes its money. When the London and Globe burst occurred many jobbers rushed the small bears with Milwaukees, Eries, and Readings as a hedge, and the sales on your market thus induced amounted to moderate figures for a few days, but already much of that business has been evened and balanced, and the selling now is mostly genuine.

The best proof of the inability or the reluctance of the people to invest freely, let alone speculate, is found in the feeble support given to the £4,000,000 of local loans stock issued last week. It brings the total of that stock, presumably representing advances to small municipalities issued within twelve months, up to £9,000,000, and it would not have been all sold without help from the banks. Two years ago stock already existing stood at a respectable premium; on Tuesday last applications at 98 received 70 per cent. Stock Exchange money will be as dear for settlement this week as at the end of December. A. J. W.

THE MANCHESTER MARKET.

MANCHESTER, Jan. 13.—Business in cloth last week was in full swing and healthy. Although the oscillations in cotton had a somewhat disturbing effect, hindering negotiations, the general situation remained firm. The strength of the position consists in the fact that enough business already has been secured to enable manufacturers to await developments.

Inquiry from India slackened considerably. The merchants seemed disinclined to operate further until prices over the sea should adjust themselves to parity with Manchester. The demand from the large China markets was well maintained. Buyers and sellers expressed satisfaction with the progress made, some producers of these descriptions being fairly engaged. There was a good number of orders for the Mediterranean market.

During the past week the outside market was dull and very irregular. It seemed to be more affected by the irregularity which the Stock Exchange market showed on some days than it was by the strength which appeared there on others, while at no time was the activity on the board reflected to any considerable extent in large transactions on the curb. The week was particularly unfavorable in the matter of prices, for, although a few considerable advances were recorded, a considerably greater number of declines showed at the close of the week. In very few cases was there direct cause in any news developments for the declines which occurred, and, indeed, the list as a whole was little affected by the week's occurrences. In one or two cases declines occurred in issues which were the subject of favorable rumors. It would seem that the continuation of very large transactions in the Stock Exchange market remained as an unfavorable influence on the outside market, which could not succeed in attracting much attention in the face of the great activity on the board.

Several of the largest of the week's advances showed in bonds which are bought for investment, and in this is a suggestion of the conditions prevailing in the outside market at present. The January disbursements have led to considerable demand for investment securities, but issues not in demand from this source found few purchasers. It is still contended by observers of the market that a quieting down of the Stock Exchange market would result very favorably for the curb market, at least as far as it would be benefited by an increase in transactions.

Distilling of America occupied the place of greatest prominence among the industrials because of the trading in the stock which preceded and followed the announcement late in the week of the plan of the stockholders' committee. The stockholders of the company were offered the privilege of subscribing at 85 to a collateral trust bond bearing interest at the rate of 5 per cent., the object of the issue being to supply the company with additional working capital. The success of the issue was practically guaranteed by the bonds having been underwritten to the amount of $4,000,000. The conditions surrounding the business of the company are said to be fairly favorable, and it is thought that the earnings for the present year are likely to exceed those of last year.

American Agricultural Chemical advanced very sharply during the first part of the week on Boston buying, but subsequently lost more than the gain. The common stock sold up to 32½, and subsequently declined to 29, and showed a net loss of 1 point at the end of the week. The preferred stock advanced less, but also declined less, and closed fractionally higher for the week.

American Bridge common followed an irregular course, and after showing some strength preceding the closing of the books for the dividend on the preferred stock declined sharply. It closed at 43¾ bid, a net loss of 1¾ points. The preferred stock followed a similar course, but closed with only a slight net loss. Crucible Steel advanced fractionally, but did not show much activity. Application was made during the week to list the stock on the Exchange.

Among the bonds which were in specially good demand during the week were United Railways of St. Louis 4s and Nassau Electric 4s. The St. Louis bonds advanced steadily, and closed with a net gain of 2⅛ points, at 88½ bid. On some days the trading in these bonds was quite large. A gain of nearly 6 points showed in the Nassau Electric 4s, which sold up to 94⅞. Around 92 the bonds were fairly active, but above that figure the advance was not accompanied by large transactions. At the end of the week 94⅞ was bid for an unlimited amount of the bonds. Indianapolis Gas bonds recovered from their recent decline, advancing to 94.

Telephone, Telegraph, and Cable was very weak, being offered down to 5⅜, which was little more than the amount of the last assessment paid at the close of the year. Statements were made to the effect that the company had disposed of its holdings of Erie Telephone and Telegraph stock, but the President of the Cable Company refused to give any information in regard to the matter. Union Typewriter common was in demand and sold up to about 40, and showed a net gain of over 2 points.

The copper stocks were not very actively traded in. British Columbia Copper was duller than during any recent week, and showed practically no change in price. Union Copper was traded in to the extent of a thousand shares on one or two days and sold up to 5, but showed no net gain for the week. A Director of the company announced that a discovery of an additional vein on the company's property had been made, and that it was richer than any of the other veins thus far opened up.

FILIPINOS LAY DOWN ARMS

Leader of the Iloilo Province Insurgents Surrenders.

Bolomen in Benguet Also Capitulate—Gen. MacArthur Says Other Surrenders Will Follow.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Gen. MacArthur reports the surrender of Delgado, Commander in Chief of Iloilo Province, Panay. He also reports that other important surrenders are expected during the next few days. His cablegram to the War Department is as follows:

"Delgado, Commander in Chief Iloilo Province, surrendered Jan. 11 to Robert P. Hughes (Brigadier General Volunteers) with four officers, twenty-one men, and fourteen rifles. His command much scattered. Other surrenders expected during the next few days, important; signify end organized armed resistance Iloilo Province, Panay."

The dispatch gave much satisfaction to the War Department, although the command surrendered by Delgado is not a large one. It also was noted by the officials that the assurances were for the end of "organized armed resistance," indicating that there was considerable of the onorganized marauding still in progress.

MANILA, Jan. 14.—Optimism is taking the place of conservatism among the military men here, the cause being the numerous surrenders, captures, and destruction of insurgents' camps, coupled with the increasing understanding of the Americans' intentions among the natives, the propagation of the principles of the Federal Party, and the knowledge that they are approved by the United States Philippine Commission and the military authorities, and the carrying out of the terms of Gen. MacArthur's proclamation, classing all who do things inimical to the interests of the army as rebels and traitors, is having pointed effect, with the offering of local autonomy and protection, and showing the certainty of the punishment of those who remain rebellious.

The cutting of communications and supplies has destroyed the remnants of the insurgents' organization. The inhabitants of the towns are disinclined to any longer contribute secretly to a hopeless cause, and it is generally believed that the pacification of a sufficient number of provinces to inaugurate a general scheme of provincial government will be accomplished before many more weeks have elapsed. The most pronounced resistance at present is in remote Southern Luzon, Northern Mindanao, Cebu, and Bohol.

The first batch of thirty leading insurrectionists, who have been ordered to be deported to the Island of Guam sail on the transport Rosecrans to-morrow.

Gen. Wheaton reports that fifty-three armed Bolomen have surrendered at Benguet.

Sixteen of Geronimo's band were captured Sunday night and brought to Montalban.

RELIGION IN PHILIPPINE SCHOOLS.

Natives Ask to Have It Taught by Catholic Teachers.

MANILA, Jan. 14.—Representatives of the Central Catholics, at a meeting here, spoke on the subject of religion in the schools, and urged the adoption of amendments providing for the employment exclusively or principally of native and Catholic teachers, and for permitting religious teaching in the schools. They argued that native teachers could achieve better results than Americans, and that the public schools would be far more successful if the prevailing religious customs were not disturbed.

In order to avoid a long response from their opponents on the question of religious teaching in the schools, Judge Taft announced that the commission, under its instructions, could not possibly adopt the amendments suggested by the Central Catholics. The Commissioners are unanimous in the belief that a great majority of the Filipinos desire religious teaching in the schools. They hold that the purpose of the bill for public education will be partially defeated unless the children of Catholics are permitted to attend the public schools.

PROBLEM FOR NAVY DEPARTMENT.

Disposition of Exiled Filipinos Is Now in Its Hands.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Gen. MacArthur, by his order exiling twenty-six Filipino leaders to Guam, with its garrison of seventy-five marines, has shifted to the Navy Department a responsibility which it never anticipated. The Island of Guam is under the control of the Navy Department, and the moment the agitators reach that isle they will be under that department's jurisdiction. The Navy Department has issued no orders for their treatment or disposition, and no orders have been given for their subsistence and maintenance.

The Filipinos will not be kept in confinement, for there is no provision for anything of the kind in the Island of Guam. Gov. Schroeder will not be directed to imprison them, to sequester them, or to do anything else with them. It will be left entirely to his fancy to decide what to do with them, but he will be responsible for them.

Gov. Schroeder does not yet know what is in store for him. Communication with Guam is slow. The first he will hear about it will be when the transport looms up in the harbor and the malcontents come ashore. It is said at the Navy Department that life in the lazy, sleepy Island of Guam will be the greatest possible punishment for these active spirits, without the addition of confinement, which is out of the question, in view of the lack of facilities.

Mr. McKinley's Escort to the Capitol.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—It has been decided that President McKinley's personal escort to the Capitol and return on the 4th of March will be Troop A of the First Regiment of Cavalry, O. N. G. This organization was similarly honored four years ago.

GOVERNOR OUSTS S. W. BURT.

Removes Democratic Civil Service Commissioner and Appoints John E. Kraft, Also a Democrat.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 14.—Gov. Odell sent to the Senate to-night the nomination of John E. Kraft of Ulster County as a Civil Service Commissioner in the place of Silas W. Burt, who has been removed. The only explanation given in the Governor's office of the removal of one Democrat from the board and the appointment of another was that "the Governor wished to reorganize the board."

A more satisfactory explanation of the Governor's action was obtained from other sources. The Civil Service Board consists of three members. As it was constituted under the Roosevelt administration, the Board was composed of George P. Lord of Dundee, William M. Collier of Auburn, and Silas W. Burt of New York. Burt was the Democratic member of the board. At least he was so reputed. The Democratic organization in the State has for some time past questioned the character of Mr. Burt's Democracy.

As far back as two years ago Chairman Frank Campbell of the Democratic State Committee sent a letter to Gov. Roosevelt asking for Burt's removal from the board on the ground that he was not a Democrat. This letter, which was generally believed to have been instigated by David B. Hill, if it was not actually written by him, was never made public by Mr. Roosevelt, who saw fit to ignore the request which it contained.

Senator Hill has long been after Burt's official scalp. His antagonism to Burt dates back to the time when the Civil Service Commission waived competitive examinations for Appraisers appointed for Greater New York. Gov. Roosevelt approved this action of the board, for which he was severely criticised by civil service reformers, who accused him of proving recreant to the cause of civil service reform for partisan ends. Commissioner Burt voted against the resolution to permit the appointment of the Appraisers without a competitive examination, but he took no strong stand against it. Senator Hill was greatly incensed at Burt for not making a ringing protest.

It was immediately following Gov. Roosevelt's approval of the board's act that Chairman Campbell of the Democratic State Committee sent his letter to Gov. Roosevelt asking for Burt's removal.

John E. Kraft, the new member of the board, was the former Democratic Mayor of Kingston. He is a newspaper man, having for many years edited The Leader, the Democratic paper of Kingston.

WAR TAX REDUCTION.

Action Being Taken on the Measure by the Senate Finance Committee Is Not Disclosed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—The Finance Committee of the Senate persists in maintaining a profound secrecy about the War Tax Reduction bill, and if there have been any meetings to consider what shall be done with it they have been held very quietly and no inkling of what has been done has been given, unless perhaps in confidence to members of the Republican end of the Ways and Means Committee. So far as the Democrats are concerned, they are not likely to know anything about the bill until that situation has been reached which Senator Allison is said to have described.

"We shall not report the bill," he is said to have declared, "until we are quite sure it can and ought to be passed."

"A surplus is much easier to dispose of," Senator Allison is quoted as having said, with reference to the prospects of the Tax bill, "than a deficit.

"The surplus of revenue for the first six months of the fiscal year has been $20,000,000. Secretary Gage estimates it to be $80,000,000 for the year, but it may be less. If it reaches only to the $40,000,000 indicated by the Treasury report of to-day, the passage of the House bill would come pretty near to presenting the alternative that Senator Allison suggested in his comment.

There are members of the Finance Committee who were determined to increase the reduction figure of the bill to $50,000,000, and Senator Aldrich has been quoted as saying that he would prefer to reduce it to the extent necessary to sweep away all the internal revenue taxes intended to be removed. As a willingness has been discovered among Senators to permit the surplus to accumulate for this year, that preference falls in with the programme of Senators who would postpone reduction until the internal revenue taxes laid on account of the war can be substantially abolished.

There does not appear to be much reason for believing that the Senate contemplates reporting a measure making about the same aggregate reduction as the House, but differing materially in the items upon which the reduction is to be secured. As there is only a short time left for all the business of the Senate it is evident that the reduction bill would have a hard time of it, and be in danger of smothering between the Subsidy bill and the appropriation bills. There can be no more fruitful subject for talk than taxing measures, and if the Senate transforms the House bill it is likely to be discussed again in the House, in order to give the Republican framers of it a chance to assert their right to prepare money bills and their resentment of the Senate's attempt to turn them inside out.

The chances for passage of the Tax Reduction bill and the Ship Subsidy bill look about even, with neither good.

LIGHTS MADE HER NERVOUS.

Brooklyn Telephone Girl Fell Unconscious in Front of Switchboard.

Angelina Curran of 73 First Place, Brooklyn, is ill at her home, and her married sister, with whom she lives, says that the trouble is nervous prostration, caused by the electric light system in the Central office of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, in Willoughby Street, where Miss Curran was employed until yesterday afternoon. Miss Curran, according to the statement of the sister, was never sick before the telephone people substituted miniature electric lights for the old system of dropping disks.

Since the improvement came in, it is claimed, that the young woman has rapidly developed undue nervousness on account of the flashing lights. She grew worse and worse, until yesterday afternoon, she had a fainting fit and fell unconscious before the telephone switch board. She was taken home in a cab. A physician was called in, and last night her condition was pronounced serious.

ANOTHER GIFT BY MR. CARNEGIE

Offers to Spend $100,000 on a Public Library for Conneaut, Ohio.

Special to The New York Times.

ASHTABULA, Ohio, Jan. 14.—The City of Conneaut, Ohio, the location of the projected new tube works of the Carnegie Company, is to be the recipient of a free public library, the gift of Andrew Carnegie. The conditions are that Mr. Carnegie shall erect and supply it and the city maintain it.

This proposition will come before the City Council probably at its next meeting, and, as Conneaut people are much elated over the project, there is no question that the conditions will be agreed to. Mr. Carnegie will expend in the erection of this library about $100,000.

It was also learned here to-day that the Bessemer Railroad Company, with its northern terminal at Conneaut, is planning to erect its extensive machine shops at Conneaut Harbor, in close proximity to the river. The main building will be 200 by 500 feet in size, and will be of brick.

These shops will be equipped also for making repairs to large lake vessels. It is further stated that switches are to be built from the main lines of railroad to the location of the new tube plant. Next week the work of hauling material for the construction of the tube plant may be begun.

DELAY OVER JOINT NOTE

Prince Ching Announces Trouble in Procuring Imperial Seal.

RUSSIANS LEAVE PE-CHI-LI

Taoti Sheng Among Others Mentioned as Possible Successors to Li-Hung-Chang.

PEKING, Jan. 14.—Prince Ching has notified Señor de Cologan, the Spanish Minister, who is the doyen of the Diplomatic Corps, that the agreement was signed yesterday morning, but that he did not expect to be able to present it to the foreign envoys before Wednesday, owing to the difficulty of obtaining the imperial seal, which, he asserted, is in the Forbidden City, and in the private apartments of the Emperor, guarded by the Emperor's most trusted servants. He said also that a personal order from the Emperor would be required before those who have the seal in charge would deliver it even to Prince Ching.

The Ministers have been annoyed at receiving messages from their respective Governments asserting that press dispatches say the agreement was signed Saturday, which is officially denied.

LI-HUNG-CHANG'S SUCCESSOR.

State Department Favors the Appointment of the Taoti Sheng.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Secretary Hay was back at the State Department to-day for the first time in a week, and although able to direct affairs, he still showed signs of the severe cold he has had for some time. The Chinese question was about the first thing to engage his attention, and when Minister Wu called, at 10 o'clock, there was a conference lasting half an hour. Mr. Hay had received dispatches from Mr. Conger announcing that the Chinese envoys had been empowered to sign the joint note, but the fact of signing has not been officially communicated, either to the State Department or to the Chinese Legation. Both the Secretary and the Minister feel satisfied, however, that the press report of the actual signing is correct, and they are gratified that this conclusive stage of the proceedings has been reached.

The official discussion now turns to the execution of the terms of the agreement. The State Department is making efforts to hurry these final proceedings to a close, and in this there appears to be co-operation by all of the powers.

The prospect that Li-Hung-Chang may have to retire from the Peace Commission because of his infirmities has led to some canvass among officials as to those available to take his place. Among those informally mentioned are the Taoti Sheng, the Imperial Director of Posts, and Liu-Kung-Yih, Viceroy of Nanking.

Sheng, it is reported, has been made Assistant Minister of Commerce, which gives him a position of great weight. He has been nominated, at the request of Li-Hung-Chang, to assist the peace envoys, and Prince Ching has, it is reported, asked that he be made one of the plenipotentiaries. The Ministers at Peking are said to prefer the appointment of Chang-Chi-Tung, who is an anti-foreigner, and the Shanghai correspondents have been denouncing the favors extended to Sheng as an insult to the Europeans.

Minister Wu was asked to-day what truth there was in the London reports that Sheng's promotion indicated hostility to foreigners.

"Sheng is a Chinaman," said Mr. Wu, "and serves his country. But he is not hostile to foreigners. He was denounced as a liar for saying that the Ministers were alive. Now, Sheng is Director General of Telegraphs. Is it not the duty of such an official to transmit the telegrams that come over the wires? Is he charged with the responsibility of their truth or falsity? No; but were the telegrams false? I don't remember that Sheng's statements about the Ministers were untrue. London denounced him, and London denounced me.

"The British were determined to believe that the Ministers were dead.

"They claim to be the most civilized people in the world, and they are the most prejudiced. I do not know why Sheng's promotion should give offense to foreigners."

Consul General Goodnow is warm in Sheng's praises. He says that he tried to get the Shanghai correspondents to go and see Sheng and get information from him, but they declined to do it. He declares that Sheng is a great admirer of America.

The State Department is disposed to look favorably on Sheng's promotion and will offer no opposition should he be selected to succeed Li-Hung-Chang as plenipotentiary in view of the latter's illness. The Department prefers him to Chang-Chih-Tung, who is an able man, but strongly anti-foreign.

Liu-Kung-Yih, who, like Sheng, is assisting the plenipotentiaries and who is reported to-day to have offered modifications of peace proposals, is a strong pro-foreigner. During the Boxer ascendancy, when the anti-foreign clique had the ear of the Empress Dowager, Liu-Kung-Yih boldly went to Peking and in a personal interview with the Empress demanded the suppression of the Boxers.

NEW HONORS FOR DE WITTE?

Report that He Is to be Made Russian Imperial Chancellor.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 14.—It is stated on good authority that Emperor Nicholas, from his private means, has presented to M. de Witte, Minister of Finance; Gen. Kouropatkine, Minister of War, and Count Lamsdorff, Minister of Foreign Affairs, 200,000 rubles ($100,000) each, as an expression of his gratification over the development of Manchurian affairs, the protection of the railway, and the suppression of disturbances in Manchuria.

The cost of the war to date—62,000,000 rubles—astonishes the initiated. The proposals to devote 130,000,000 rubles to railways in 1901, and not to negotiate a loan are equally gratifying.

This favorable budget unquestionably strengthens M. de Witte, and it is generally anticipated that the Czar will signally recognize his services. Reports emanating from certain Ministries assert that M. de Witte will become Imperial Chancellor on the Russian New Year, with superior directive powers over all the departments of the Government. Some persons, who are usually well informed regarding such matters, doubt the story, which, naturally, cannot be confirmed.

At all events, M. de Witte's star is evidently in the ascendant. His love of peace, his determination to develop Russia's internal resources, and his pronounced American sympathies are sufficient reasons why the world, and especially America, can congratulate Russia.

Russia has had Chancellors intermittently. The last was Prince Gortschakoff, who died shortly after the Berlin Congress.

FAMINE IN SHEN-SI PROVINCE.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 14.—There is a famine in the Province of Shen-Si, and it is said that about 5,000,000 people are facing starvation.

RUSSIANS EVACUATE PE-CHI-LI.

TIEN-TSIN, Jan. 14.—The Russian troops, except 1,000 men detailed to guard the legation of Russia and the Tien-Tsin and Shan-hai-Kwan guards, are evacuating the Province of Pe-chi-Li and entraining for Kin-Chow, Manchuria. It is reported that they are going to Mukden.

PEKING, Jan. 13.—Russia to-day began turning over the railway to Germany. The latter intends to place the management of the line with former employes of the company, under military supervision. Germany has requested the station masters, engine drivers, and mechanics who were formerly employed to report at the German headquarters, when they will be given their old positions.

THE SUBSIDY BILL'S CHANCES.

One Senator Says It Is a Physical Impossibility to Pass It at the Present Session.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Disposition or even discussion of the Subsidy bill appears to be further away than ever. A leading Republican Senator said after adjournment to-day that unless some skillful effort be made to press the Army bill it would still be pending next week. This admission, made by a warm friend of the Subsidy bill, taken in connection with the remarks of two other Republican Senators, neither of whom desires to be regarded as an opponent of the Subsidy bill, gives as clear an idea of the prospects of that much-talked-of bill as can be offered.

"We have just about thirty-three days of legislative opportunity left," said one Senator. "Our Saturdays are all pre-empted for obituary services, and not one of the great appropriation bills has been taken up. Unless the Subsidy bill can be rushed through without debate, which not even Mr. Hanna expects, the appropriation bills will be in danger of postponement to a dangerously late day, and there is no disposition either at this end of the avenue or the other to have an extra session just to pass an appropriation bill that was defeated because of the interference of the Subsidy bill.

"We may be able to get along a little while without subsidies, but appropriations we must have. I do not see that there has been any factious opposition to the Army bill, but I see that it has been delayed. The opposition to the Subsidy bill may be just as effective without being exhibited as factious."

Another Senator, a Western man, talked of Mr. Hanna's impatience to get the bill before the Senate and upon the statute books.

"There could be no warmer advocate of a measure," he said, "than Mr. Hanna is for his pet measure. Possibly the worst thing he has done for the subsidy cause was to become the sponsor for the bill, although I believe him when he says he has not a penny's worth of interest in it pecuniarily. But Mr. Hanna seems to regard the Subsidy bill just as he would a job to be turned out of some great plant over which he might have control at Cleveland. Having made up his mind that something should be done, he just says: 'Get hold, boys, and finish it up.'

"He does not regard the objections of outside or inside critics. It would be better for his peace of mind if he did, for if he has made up his mind to be happy or downcast, depending upon the fate of the Shipping bill, he will have a melancholy hour before the session is over, for it is not at all likely that the bill will be passed. It is a physical impossibility. We shall not have hours enough to dispose of it at this session, and all other work would go on more smoothly and quickly if it were formally postponed to a day in December, 1901."

Mr. Hanna's propaganda does not hesitate, in the face of this state of things, as pictured by Republican Senators, to assure the country that the Army bill is to pass to-morrow, and the Legislative Appropriation bill is to-day. Yet Mr. Allison admits that there might be enough filibustering on the Legislative bill to induce him to lay it aside in order that discussion might proceed.

Senator Thurston, who will manage the Indian Appropriation bill, which is to follow the Legislative bill, expresses his entire willingness to give the Shipping bill a chance, and he does not see that there ought to be prolonged debate on the Indian bill. If it is indulged in, however, he will assume that it is in the nature of filibustering against the Subsidy bill.

FOREIGN TRADE IN 1900.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—The preliminary figures of the Bureau of Statistics of the Treasury Department on imports and exports for the calendar year make a better showing than the estimated figures given in THE NEW YORK TIMES'S financial review for Jan. 7, in which it was necessary to adopt arbitrary figures for December.

The whole commerce of the United States amounted to $2,307,102,970, which is better by over $18,000,000 than was estimated. This increase is made up of larger imports than were looked for in December by more than $5,000,000, and by exports larger by $13,000,000 than the Bureau of Statistics regarded it as reasonable to expect.

The difference between the preliminary official figures for balance of trade and those made up partly by estimate is $8,998,708, the excess of imports being $648,-998,208, accounted for by the persistency of both exports and imports to exceed estimates.

ELECTORAL COLLEGES MEET.

ALBANY, Jan. 14.—The members of the Electoral College of New York State met to-day at the Capitol and cast their ballots for William McKinley for President and for Theodore Roosevelt for Vice President of the United States.

After prayer had been offered by the Right Rev. T. M. H. Burke, Roman Catholic Bishop of Albany, the college organized by the election of Charles H. Russell of Brooklyn as temporary Chairman. Walter B. Atterbury of Brooklyn was elected, an Elector in place of Michael J. Dady of Brooklyn, who was unable to be present. Elector E. H. Butler of Buffalo was elected permanent President. Samuel Rowland of Brooklyn and Peter McCarthy of Troy were elected Secretaries.

The votes of the college were then cast for President and Vice President of the United States, William McKinley receiving 36 votes and Theodore Roosevelt a like number.

William Sherer of New York City was appointed to take a certificate setting forth the result to the President of the United States Senate; James Yereance, to deliver a similar certificate to the Justice of the United States Supreme Court of Northern New York, and Henry C. Fisher, Norman J. Katz, and Samuel S. Koenig to mail a like certificate to the clerk of the United States Senate.

The Electors paid their respects to the Governor, and were entertained at luncheon by Elector S. L. Munson of this city, at the Fort Orange Club.

Proceedings similar to those described in the foregoing took place yesterday in every State of the Union.

MISS GOULD IN WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Miss Helen Gould delivered an address at the residence of Secretary Root on the establishment of libraries at military posts throughout the country and at foreign points where our troops are located. She also spoke on other subjects in which the Women's Auxiliary to the Army and Navy Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association is interested. The address was heartily received. Miss Gould's audience was composed of women interested in the Women's Auxiliary and the Army and Navy Branches of the Young Men's Christian Association.

This evening Miss Gould was entertained at dinner by Senator and Mrs. Elkins. Among the guests present to meet her were the Secretary of War, the Secretary of Agriculture, Justice McKenna and Mrs. McKenna, the Chinese Minister and Mrs. Wu, Senator and Mrs. Hanna, Senator Bacon, Gen. Bates, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lee, Mrs. Edwin Gould, Miss Northrope, Miss Hartshorne, and Davis Elkins.

GET-TOGETHERS ON VICE

Bishop Potter Is Impressed with the City's Reform Efforts.

Mr. Baldwin Also Speaks at the Club's Dinner and Believes Past Mistakes Can Be Avoided.

The Get-Together Club, at its monthly dinner held at the Hotel St. George, Brooklyn, last night, discussed "The Anti-Vice Crusade; After Suppression—What?"

The Rt. Rev. Henry C. Potter presided at the dinner, which was attended by about 200 men from all walks of life. Prior to the Bishop's introduction of the speakers a vote was taken on the question of admitting women to one or more of the dinners during the year, and the ballots as announced by ths Secretary showed an adverse opinion as to such a proceeding.

The Bishop as he arose said:

"I had hoped that in Brooklyn a vote on the question of the presence of ladies would have been unanimous in favor of admitting them. I think the time will come, and more speedily than you believe, when the counsel of both sexes will be essential in all forward movements.

"The subject for the evening is, 'After Suppression—What?' and I suppose I must say something as to this title. I confess that if I had the authority of prescribing the subject I should change it to read, 'The Anti-Vice Crusade Before Suppression—What?' for I have grave doubts as to the immediate suppression of vice, and I have met many who are equally doubtful.

"We may undoubtedly do a great deal in civic matters and make vice less indecent, less insolent. The mere suppression is not essential. Nothing has impressed me more during the last three months than the efforts of the metropolis to make itself a more decent city."

The Bishop then read an extract from a newspaper describing the settlement of the east side bakers' strike, and how men stood outside of the strikers' headquarters and shouted to the passers-by that the strike had been settled, and that hereafter the people would get good, pure, and clean bread on which union labels had been placed.

"What we want," continued the Bishop, "is good, pure tenement houses on which the union labels of morality have been placed. The only piece of advice I gave to those who came to me when the Committee of Fifteen was appointed was that at least two representatives of labor should be placed on the committee, and that the committee should recognize all classes. We have initiated this crusade not for the crushing out of vice, but for the triumph of virtue."

Bishop Potter then introduced William H. Baldwin, Jr., Chairman of the Committee of Fifteen, who spoke on the subject "The Committee of Fifteen—Its Origin, Scope, and Purpose." Mr. Baldwin said:

"I speak for myself alone, and not for the committee. The committee is composed of hard-headed men, and they understand their business, and at the right time will speak for themselves."

Mr. Baldwin talked at some length on the congested conditions existing on the east side, and the prevalence of vice there. As to the remedies he said:

"Partisanship would ruin the attempt we are making to reform conditions; any suspicion of partisanship would ruin the movement. The greatest mistake we could now make would be to produce anything sensational. My purpose is to pursue a careful and businesslike policy in handling existing conditions. We should have no false notions that any one can stop what is called vice. Our duty is to stop the public trade in vice.

"We must clean the streets. Think of the thousands of children here in New York to-night who are not safe. Think of the wives that are in danger. Your own wives and children are at home safe and secure from harm, but the wives and children on the east side are not. I would kill the man who touched one of my children.

"The great difficulty we will have in handling the present conditions is that the people soon get tired of these questions and drop them after the first agitation. This time we have got to stay with the problem—this year, next year, and the year after. Now that we have started the movement, we must keep it up. I believe that the city is now entering into an era of virtue and morality, and that we will not make the mistakes that have been made in reform movements of the past."

After Mr. Baldwin had finished, Bishop Potter departed, and Robert C. Ogden presided. Henry George spoke on "Who Are the Criminals?" Dr. Josiah Strong on "Visual Education in Civics," Milo B. Maltbie on "Municipal Ideals Realized," and J. N. Bogert, State Organizer, American Federation of Labor, on "What Labor Wants."

DRINKING AT WEST POINT.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Jan. 14.—The Congressional committee which is investigating the hazing practices at the Military Academy held three sessions to-day.

The first two sessions and the greater part of the night session were occupied in the examination of Cadet Lewis Brown, Jr., of Newport, R. I., who was one of Cadet Keller's seconds in his fight with Booz.

The Congressmen put Brown through an exhaustive examination, in the course of which they elicited the fact that in violation of the rules and regulations of the institution, the upper-class men carry intoxicating liquor into the reservation, and consume quite a considerable quantity of it.

Another stringent rule seems to have been broken with impunity. This is the regulation prohibiting smoking. Cadet Brown acknowledged that the majority of the cadets were cigarette smokers, and that plenty of cigarettes were smuggled into the institution.

Gen. Dick, Judge Smith, and Mr. Driggs handled Brown without gloves, and tackled him frequently as to the right of upper class men to treat fourth class men in direct violation of the academy's regulations.

Mr. Driggs told the witness that the first class men thought they were the "whole thing," and Judge Smith said they were conceited, arrogant, and ignorant in their presumption of setting their judgment against that of the authorities of the academy.

Cadet Joseph F. Barnes of the District of Columbia, another of Keller's seconds, was the only other witness called. He was examined as to the methods of hazing and the calling out of fourth-class men to fight when they refused to comply with the demands of the upper-class men.

TARIFF CONCESSIONS TO CUBA.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Petitions for the modification of the American tariff law as regards Cuba have frequently been made. It is due to the failure of the Senate to act upon the reciprocity treaties that no move has been made in that direction. A year ago, in his annual report, Secretary Root proposed that as soon as the reciprocity treaties were acted upon; the same terms given to the other powers should be voluntarily extended to Cuba.

At that time it was supposed that the reciprocity treaties would go through without much difficulty, and the Administration had in mind the immediate modification of the tariff so as to extend to Cuba the benefits to be derived from the countries with which the treaties had been made. It was held that the adoption of these treaties would furnish a good reason for the voluntary extension of the same privileges to Cuba, without waiting for a request to that effect, and it would have been proposed as a matter of course. Since then the reciprocity treatiea have been hung up, and the project for the extension of their benefits to Cuba has languished with them.

LATE BRITISH LOSSES.

Official List Shows a State of Affairs More Serious than Reported by Gen. Kitchener.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The official list of the British casualties in the recent fighting at Belfast shows twenty-nine killed, fifty-three wounded, and seventy-two missing. This does not account for the British losses at other points of simultaneous attacks by the Boers, namely, Wonderfontein, Nooitgedacht, and Wildfontein, and shows that affairs in that quarter were more serious than Lord Kitchener reported them to be.

INDIA SHORT OF TROOPS.

LONDON, Jan. 15.—"Owing to the drain for South Africa," says the Calcutta correspondent of The Times, "the India army is now 9,000 below its normal strength and contains 15,000 men who ought to have been relieved and sent home. There are also 5,000 others who will soon be in the same position."

The Times, referring to the dispatch editorially, suggests that if recruits could be obtained to fill their places, an offer might be made to these 15,000 whose time has expired, to serve in South Africa.

NO MORE FETES, SAYS ROBERTS.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—Lord Roberts has written a letter to the Lord Mayor of London, postponing the city's reception and expressing the opinion that "in the present unhappy circumstances in South Africa there should be no further feting for some time." His Lordship's decision applies to all similar proposed functions. He is visiting the Queen at Osborne to-day, but it is said his visit is not connected with the war.

British Rout Gambian Rebels.

BATHURST, Gambia, West Africa, Jan. 14.—The British punitive expedition arrived at Dumbutu on Jan. 11 and completely surprised and routed the rebels. The troops captured the town after an hour's fighting. Sixty rebels were killed, sixty were wounded, and 200 were captured. Six important chiefs will be brought to Bathurst. The British casualties were six West Indians wounded. More fighting is expected.

OCEAN CABLE TELEPHONY.

Prof. Pupin Explains His New Submarine System.

Prof. Michael I. Pupin of Columbia University, the inventor of the new system of submarine cables which will revolutionize the construction of telegraph cables and make a telephone communication between London and New York possible, explained yesterday the important points of his invention, saying that the descriptions of his system which have recently been published were erroneous in many respects.

Prof. Pupin, when asked if the sum of $200,000, which he was reported to have received for his patent, was correct, replied that that figure multiplied by two would be nearer the mark. Accordingly he receives outright from the American Telephone and Telegraph Company $400,000, besides an annual salary reported to be $7,500 a year during the life of the patent.

Heretofore what is known as the "resistance" of the cable has made telephoning across the ocean an impossibility. Even in ocean telegraphy, if the speed of transmission is accelerated beyond a certain point, the words are confused at the other end of the wire on account of this resistance, and in an attempt to talk over 2,000 miles of wire nothing but a confused, unintelligible sound has resulted.

It has been toward the overcoming of this resistance that Prof. Pupin has directed his efforts and has spent years of study and research. He has long been a proved fact that the resistance of the wire could be neutralized to some extent by what is known as a "choke coil." This is an ordinary coil of wire in connection with the cable, which, when placed in a circuit, helps to overcome the resistance.

In his laboratory at Columbia Prof. Pupin has experimented for several years with "choke coils" of every description. At last he discovered the variance of the cable which he had put the little induction coils every eighth of a mile, the best results were obtained.

When a cable is laid across the ocean after Prof. Pupin's method, at every eighth of a mile, for the whole distance, a little induction coil inserted under the sheath will nullify all of the resistance of the wire, and will allow the message to pass along to its destination with lightning rapidity.

Prof. Pupin has also found that his cable can be used in ocean telegraphy with equally as good results as in ocean telephony, much time being saved when the message is telegraphed over the cable reinforced with the induction coils.

The plan also is practicable on land as well as underneath the ocean, and a direct telephone connection with San Francisco is one of the possibilities of the near future. One of the features of this cable is the fact that steel wire may be used in place of the more expensive copper.

The commercial and economic aspect of Prof. Pupin's invention is the necessary reduction in rates which will result from the reducing of the time of transmission. It is estimated that the new cable can do three hundred times the business of the old-fashioned article.

Prof. Pupin, from whose brain the whole system has emanated, was graduated from Columbia in 1883. He went abroad and studied in Germany, receiving the degree of Ph.D. from the University of Berlin in 1889.

Upon his return to America he accepted a position on Columbia's Faculty, and it has been in the laboratories of the university that he has pursued the investigations which have resulted in his invention.

BREAK IN CRUDE PETROLEUM.

Prices Fall on the News of the Strike in Texas.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 14.—No bomb has been thrown into the oil trade in late years that caused such wide consternation as the announcement of Col. J. M. Guffey's great strike in Southeastern Texas.

Anticipating that the new gusher would break down the price of crude petroleum, there was a rush of producers who had some to sell when the Standard Oil Company's purchasing agency opened to-day. Those who got there early sold out at Saturday's closing quotation—$1.25 per barrel. At 11 o'clock the Standard announced that it would not pay more than $1.20. The Producers' Oil Company, which is a combination of small operators, also dropped its price 5 cents. Independent operators, who have been hoping for one-dollar-and-a-half oil, are displeased at the reduction, as, in all probability, the price will go lower.

A telegram was received at Col. Guffey's office to-night from John Galey, who started for the scene last Friday, stating that he had arrived and found the well greater than the first reports showed. There was a rush to the new field from this section.

GONG CRUSADE IN CHICAGO.

Automobile Firm Supplants the Clanging Noise by Mellow Chimes.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 14.—A beginning has been made in Chicago to supplant the clanging gongs of public vehicles by more mellow chimes, a down-town firm which operates several automobiles being the first to make the change.

The Municipal Art Association and the Anti-Noise League are interested in the matter, and it has been suggested that a crusade against gongs be inaugurated.

ALFRED G. VANDERBILT MARRIES MISS FRENCH

St. John's Church, Newport, Exquisitely Decorated.

"Harbourview," Where Reception and Wedding Breakfast Are Given, a Gorgeous Floral Bower.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, Jan. 14.—Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, the second son of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, was married to-day at noon to Miss Ellen French, the second daughter of Mrs. Francis Ormonde French. The ceremony took place at the Zabriskie Memorial Church of St. John the Evangelist, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends who had come from New York and Boston to be present at the event.

There has never been a wedding at Newport which has excited so much general interest. The Vanderbilt weddings have usually taken place in New York, and it is the first time in the history of this town that such a fashionable event was arranged for midwinter. Various special trains from Boston and New York brought the many guests. The first of these trains arrived from New York on Saturday and the second yesterday, while those who came from Boston arrived early this morning.

The greater number of those who came here for the wedding were relatives of either the Vanderbilt or the French families. The immediate relatives of the Vanderbilt family were entertained by Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt at The Breakers, while Hill Top, two of the Muenchinger-King cottages, Hartmann's, and the Elbridge T. Gerry cottage were used for the other guests.

It was a beautiful day, almost cloudless, and with a crisp, frosty wind. The decorators had been at work at the church all night, as nothing could be done until after the service yesterday.

From an early hour the street near the church was crowded, and when the time of the wedding approached quite a large gathering of spectators had assembled. They were good-natured, and gave very little trouble to the police in charge. Many were anxious to gain admission to the church, but as this could not be done without cards they were disappointed

Although the ceremony was set for noon, an hour or more before that time saw the arrival of some of the guests at the church, and these were able to listen to an organ concert and inspect at leisure the floral decorations.

THE CHURCH DECORATIONS.

Pink, green, and white in many charming combinations were the prevailing colors, the distinctive flowers being the Gloire de la Reine begonia, the Golden Gate rose, and the white Azalea. The centre aisle was a lane of begonias and asparagus, standards eight feet high being tr procession moved down the aisle and out of the church.

RECEPTION AT HARBOURVIEW.

The ceremony at the church over, the bridal party and the relatives and friends were driven to the home of the bride's mother, Harbourview, on Halidon Hill, overlooking the harbor, where a reception and wedding breakfast were given.

Electricians, florists, carpenters, and decorators had been at work at Harbourview for some time, and the house was most elaborately adorned. The guests entered through a driveway made of a continuous arch of evergreens. Numerous box trees and green bushes were placed in the grounds, so as to convert them for the time being into a garden, although in the depth of Winter. The house itself was a veritable old English rose garden.

The guests were divested of their wraps in the cloakroom, which had been transformed into a Turkish apartment for the occasion. They then went through the hall into the library, where Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt received the congratulations of their friends.

This room was so decorated as to represent a rustic summer house. Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt stood under a canopy of Golden Gate roses, surrounded by those who were helping them to receive the guests. Around the room, arranged on the walls, strung in festoons from the ceiling, and heaped about in gorgeous profusion, were pink orchids, pink roses, and begonias, interspersed here and there with white roses.

Mrs. French received with her daughter and son-in-law. She wore a gown of purple velvet and guipure lace. Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mrs. Eaton, and Mrs. Amos Tuck French were in the same room. Mrs. Eaton wore blue-gray panne velvet and Mrs. French pale-gray moire, trimmed with rich black lace. Mrs. Vanderbilt was dressed in deep mourning. She took no part in the reception.

After the guests had tendered their congratulations they wandered through the house and admired the floral decorations. Wherever there was a fireplace it was banked with flowers and plants. On the piazzas, too, Winter seemed to have been changed to Summer, for they had been transformed into long vistas of shrubbery, winding arroors of beautiful plants and blossoms. It was to these outside promenades that the men guests retired for their cigarettes.

Both inside the house and out on the verandas music by Nahan Franko's orchestra was heard almost continuously. The musicians had been placed in a central room. Their melodies, wafted in and out among the myriads of flowers, were mingled with the buzz of hundreds of voices.

In the ballroom, besides the same profusion of flowers that were seen in the rest of the house, there were tall ferns, waving palms, and many hanging baskets of orchids and vines. Everywhere delicate electric light effects, produced by thousands of tiny bulbs of all colors, combined with the floral display to add to the brilliancy of the scene.

The billiard room held the bridal presents. Pink satin draperies covered the walls, while the ceiling was colored pale gray. Since Saturday this room, continually under guard, had been closed except when the presents were being exhibited to friends of the young couple, and after the reception was over the gifts were again sent to the Aquidneck Bank vaults for safe keeping.

THE WEDDING BREAKFAST.

When the guests had wandered through the house, and all of them had taken their turn at congratulating the bride and bridegroom, the dining hall was opened. There the prevailing decoration was the poinsettia, the crimson Mexican Christmas flower, the blossoms of which were offset by an indescribable variety of other kinds of blooms and green shrubs. In the centre of the room was the bride's table, at which were seated the bridal party and the immediate relatives of the young couple, twenty-two in all. This table was decorated with orchids, roses, lilies of the valley, and orange blossoms from the South. In the midst of the central floral ornament was the huge bride's cake, adorned with white satin ribbons. This the bride cut, drawing each portion toward her by means of the ribbons and doing it so gracefully that the guests applauded her as each slice was detached.

At the family table, which was placed at the head of the room, Mrs. French and Mrs. Eaton presided. Fourteen covers were laid at this table. The other guests were seated at small tables, ten in number, each laid with ten covers.

The wedding breakfast was served by Delmonico of New York. The menu cards read as follows:

Gombee volaille passé en tasses.
Mousse au jambon.
Radis. Olives. Celeri. Amandes salées.
Filet de bœuf, aux champignons frais.
Petits pois nouveaux.
Poulet de grain désossé.
Salade de laitues.
Macedoine de fruits au marasquin.
Bonbons. Marrons glacés.
Devises. Café.
Newport, R. I.
Lundi, 14 Janvier, 1901.

Those who sat at the bride's table were Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, Miss Pauline French, Miss Elsa Bronson, Miss Isabel Stillman, Miss Edith Gray, Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, Reginald Vanderbilt, Robert L. Gerry, Potter Palmer, Jr., Frederic M. Davies, William Fitz Hugh Whitehouse, Jr., Ord Preston, Ernest Iselin, W. Bayard Cutting, Jr., and William P. Burden.

Among the other guests at the breakfast were:

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Alexander,	Mr. and Mrs. John R. Livermore,
Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Andrews,	The Rev. Dr. and Mrs. George Orenville Merrill,
Mrs. and Mrs. James A. Burden,	The Rev. Dr. and Mrs. George Brinley Morgan,
Charles F. Beatty,	Miss Morris,
Capt. and Mrs. French	George C. Munzig,
E. Chadwick,	Mr. and Mrs. D. H.
R. L. Cotheet,	Morris,
Mr. and Mrs. Julien T. Davies,	Miss North,
Mr. and Mrs. J. De Forest Danielson,	Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs,
Mrs. Paul Vincen Dahlgren,	Mrs. Potter Palmer,
Miss Dahlgren,	Mrs. C. C. Pomeroy,
Mrs. John C. Gray,	Miss Greta Pomeroy,
Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gwynne,	Mr. and Mrs. Edward Potter,
Peter Goelet Gerry,	Mr. and Mrs. W. Edgar Shepherd,
Mr. and Mrs. John Hammond,	James Stillman,
W. Delancey Kountze,	Baroness Sellliere,
Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Kingsland,	Andrew H. Sands,
	Henry Whitehouse,

At the family table were seated Mrs. F. O. French, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Amos Tuck French, Gen. the Hon. and Mrs. Herbert F. Eaton, Mr. and Mrs. H. McK. Twombly, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Vanderbilt, and Miss Lila Sloane.

The wedding breakfast at an end, the time for the departure of the bride and bridegroom arrived. The coachman and the bridegroom wore white satin rosettes, and on the bridles of the horses attached to the carriage which was to take Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt to the boat were white ribbons. The housings for the saddles were heavy white-corded silk, while the whip was tied with bows of rich satin ribbon.

The bridal couple were accompanied by the bride's maid and the bridegroom's valet.

Mrs. Vanderbilt looked charming in a going-away gown of gray cheviot, trimmed with chinchilla and silver embroidery on both the coat and skirt. The blouse of gray panne velvet was trimmed with silver and magnificently embroidered. The hat was a large toque of silver gray velvet.

As the young couple started from Harbourview they were pelted with rice and slippers. At the station the Vanderbilt car was attached to the 3 o'clock train. The bridesmaids, maid of honor, best man, ushers, and members of the Vanderbilt and French families were at the station when Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt departed, and the newly wedded pair were again pelted with rice and slippers.

It is said that Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt have chosen Canada for their wedding trip. They will go to New York later in the Winter.

Shortly after the departure of the bridal couple, the other guests began to leave Newport. Special trains were waiting to convey them to their destinations, and before night this city had once more resumed its midwinter quiet. Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, however, entertained a number of her relatives at dinner at The Breakers.

The flowers used both at the church and at Harbourview were sent by the bride and bridegroom to the Newport and Emergency Hospitals. The bride and her mother made a number of gifts to poor families in honor of the event of to-day.

In addition to those at the breakfast, the following were present at the wedding ceremony:

Miss Brooks,	Robert Laurie,
Dr. and Mrs. C. A. Brackett,	Lieut. and Mrs. W. McCarthy Little,

Miss Webb,

The train bearing the guests from the Vanderbilt wedding arrived promptly at its scheduled time over the tracks of New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, drawing up in the Grand Central Station at 9:50 o'clock last night. It consisted of five parlor cars, a buffet car in front, and a private car behind. There were 129 persons aboard, who quickly hurried out of the station and away.

It was stated that none of the Vanderbilt family were on the train.

EVERYTHING IN GOOD TASTE.

Though the Wedding Was an Elaborate One, Nothing Was Overdone—Some of the Gowns Worn.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, Jan. 14.—Nothing could be more satisfactory than the way in which everything in connection with the Vanderbilt-French nuptials passed off to-day. Even the slipper which the guests threw after the newly married couple lodged on top of the carriage quite out of reach of the coachman, and was carried triumphantly down the road.

"It has been the greatest day Newport ever saw," one of the young men guests said on the boat which took the greater number of the people who had come on to the ceremony across to the special car which carried them back to New York.

"Everything was in perfect taste," said a woman guest. "Nothing was overdone, and it was an absolutely dignified wedding."

To the big crowds which gathered outside, the pretty little church where the ceremony was held the wedding was something of a disappointment. They expected to catch a glimpse of many elaborate gowns, and there was little to gratify them in this respect.

The greater number of the women who attended the breakfast at the house wore, with the Vanderbilt family, gowns of quiet colors, and gray, black, and mauve or purple predominated. Another thing which gave a quiet tone to the gathering at the church was the fact that the greater number of guests were townspeople.

THE CHURCH DECORATIONS.

The church itself was decorated with charming grace, but with great simplicity and freedom from conventionality. The begonia-crowned wands at the ends of the seats, which formed columns of floral torches along the centre aisle, were twined loosely with the graceful Southern smilax and the same pretty vine hung simply from each arch at the entrance to the chancel. Twined up the transept pillars, ran along the window seats, and hung from the supporting beams to the roof on either side.

There were a few palms, a touch of rose pink in the green here and there, white bridal roses at the entrance to the sanctuary, white lilies above the altar, and that was all. There were not even lighted candles on the altar, a feature of the regular church services, for the Church of St. John the Evangelist is what is known as a "high" church. But Mr. Vanderbilt is a "low" churchman, and it was the desire of the bride to have the candles omitted.

The service was simple, and while there were some twenty choir boys in addition to the acolytes, and half that number of men, the choir sang only twice.

Something of the dignity of the service and the gathering was due to the fact that no more people had been invited than the church, which is small, would comfortably hold. Apparently every seat was full, but no more than that, and there was no pushing and crowding to see the bridal party.

BRIDE AND BRIDESMAIDS.

There was never a simpler or more effective wedding procession. The bride's magnificent and almost priceless gown had the appearance of absolute simplicity. Everything about it was in straight lines or soft folds. The ivory white satin showed only by a faint shimmer here and there at the edge or beneath the lace.

The latter was a magnificent point lace, covering the whole front of the gown from neck to hem, while the collar and cuffs to the sleeves were of the same lace. The veil was some wonderful old lace which has been in the French family for many years.

According to the present style of bridal veils, this was worn off the face and held in place on the top of the head by a small coronet of orange blossoms, from whence it fell in soft folds almost to the edge of the long satin train, which was outlined with orange blossoms.

A magnificent string of pearls, the gift of the bridegroom, hung well down below the waist. These pearls are large and very beautiful, almost perfectly matched—so perfectly that only two of them will have to be changed later.

The soft gray of the bridesmaids' gowns brought out in strong relief the big clusters of American Beauty roses, each tied with broad satin ribbons matching the color of the petals. The little maid of honor, Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, in her short frock, made a pretty figure, wearing the same color and carrying the same flowers.

There was a slight variation in the conduct of the service from that frequently used, for it was not until the ring was to be placed upon the bride's finger that the couple passed forward to the white rose entrance to the sanctuary. There the ring was first blessed upon the altar, and then the ceremony continued.

SOME OF THE GOWNS.

The bridal party was at the church promptly at the appointed minute, and there was not a moment's delay in the service. At the outer door of the church a maid was waiting with a long wrap of ermine, pink silk, and lace for the bride; a fur-lined coat was awaiting the bridegroom, and they were driven quickly away, bridesmaids and guests following.

The general quietness of the gowns worn was increased by the outer wraps, which many of the guests did not lay aside in the church. Mrs. French, the mother of the bride, wore a gown of rich purple velvet with broad insertions of black lace, and a bonnet to match.

Mrs. Eaton, the bride's sister, was one of the most beautiful women present, in a wonderful soft pale shade of blue velvet—moonlight blue it is sometimes called—trimmed with sable. Her two boys, handsome little fellows, who look much like their mother, were in velvet suits of purple, and were the most picturesque figures at the wedding.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt was in black uncut velvet, showing a little white in the bodice, but more in the magnificent collar and strings of pearls that she wore. Pearls are favorite jewels with the Vanderbilt family. Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney was in purple, and she also wore pearls. Mrs. W. D. Sloane wore black and purple in stripes. Mrs. Elliott F. Shepard was in gray uncut velvet, Mrs. Frederick Vanderbilt in royal purple velvet with pearls, and Mrs. Seward Webb in mauve.

Mrs. George Grenville Merrill, in black silk with insertions of lace over white and with diamond ornaments; Mrs. David H. Morris, in pale gray; Mrs. C. B. Alexander, in black velvet; Mrs. Benjamin Porter, in velvet, and the Baroness de Selliere, in mauve.

Mrs. De Forest Danielson, wearing black velvet and diamonds, was one of the most striking-looking women present. Mrs. Potter Palmer, whose son was one of the ushers was in maroon velvet; Mrs. Metuchin Moore in mauve, and Mrs. Rathbone Baker wore a striking gown of old rose velvet with a unique fringe of the material forming a deep trimming around the lower edge of the skirt.

Mrs. William M. Kingsman was in a figured blue velvet. Mrs. F. C. Chadwick, wife of Capt. Chadwick, wore a red cloth gown, and Mrs. Paul Andrews wore a covert cloth with a baby lamb coat and sable furs.

TOWNSPEOPLE WERE THERE.

Among the more plainly dressed of the guests in the church were both men and women wearing little bows of white ribbon. They looked, at first sight, like a delegation of "C. T. U.'s," but in reality they were the men and the maids of the Vanderbilt-French households, wearing breastknots of bridal white.

It was interesting to see the townspeople arrive, and spoke well for the thoughtfulness shown in the sending of invitations—no one seemed to have been forgotten. There were two nice-looking elderly men, each with a slight stoop.

There were Newport's bootmakers, there were the Postmaster, his wife, and two married daughters; there were the manager of the telephone exchange and his wife, an ex-Mayor of Newport who is President of the Police Commissioners, and there were the fish dealer and his wife.

It is of this fish dealer that a story is told of how he picked up a fish-cart load of bridesmaids from a broken down drag and carried them on to their destination, to give a glorious send-off to another bride and bridegroom, not long since.

There were another Police Commissioner, a carpenter, a local tailor, and a Newport dentist, with his wife. There were also the man who sells fire extinguishers and the man who sells staterooms on the New York boat.

AT HARBORVIEW.

The same general simplicity and good taste prevailed at Harbourview as at the church, and events followed each other like clockwork and with the same ease and freedom from stiffness and conventionality. On entering the house the men turned to one side and the women to the other to lay aside their wraps, and met again without confusion.

In the centre of the dining room at the breakfast was a large table for the bridal party, and around it were smaller tables for the other guests. The centre of the bride's table was banked with white roses of a warm, creamy tint, and in the centre of this bank stood the bride's cake.

It seemed a Chinese puzzle at first to know how the flowers were to be surmounted to reach the cake, but this had been arranged. The bank had been made to open on the side nearest the bride and through this opening the cake was taken and placed before her. It was a proper bride's cake, containing a ring for the next bride or groom-to-be, a thimble for the bachelor and a gold piece for wealth. The fates had not been decided before most of the guests left the dining room.

The menu for the breakfast was a fine one, but it was a simple breakfast. Nothing, as the guests said, had been overdone.

The wedding cake was in beautiful but simple boxes. They were of fine white satin with the monogram "V. F." on the top in silver, and a white satin bow at the front. There were also little white satin slippers filled with bonbons for souvenirs.

There was the usual gay time when the bridal party left the house. There was plenty of rice to throw, and the young couple received thick showers of it.

GAYETY AFTER THE WEDDING.

The afternoon in Newport was lively. The streets were filled with crowds, and by 2 o'clock they began to wend their way to the boat, where the bride and bridegroom were expected, but did not appear. The guests arrived, the ushers with wilted gardenias still in their buttonholes.

A carriage load of them came singing down Bellevue Avenue, and it was not until the boat had started that the crowd finally made up its mind that there was to be no bridal couple at the landing.

On the boat there was a continuation of the fun of the breakfast. The day had been ideal, a perfect Newport day. On the water the air was exhilarating. At least half the guests remained on deck, and there was a procession of brisk promenaders walking up and down and around the cabin during the entire hour's trip.

On the stern of the boat a group of the ushers and other young men, guests, including Reginald Vanderbilt, and led by Harry Payne Whitney, gave a series of choruses, which, if not Metropolitan Opera House music, were very jolly and lively. It took two engines to run the special train up to the Wickford junction, and the local train loaned its engine for the purpose, and lay at the dock until it returned.

The elaborateness of this wedding has been a good part in the attention to details. In the care of the guests coming to the wedding this was particularly shown. To each one coming from out of town a card was sent, giving the time of the departure of the special train to Newport, and the name of the house where he or she would be entertained, and the time at which the train would start on its return trip.

Baggage was all delivered to them safely at the house where the guest was to be entertained, or if, having friends, he or she elected to stay with them, the baggage was delivered at that address.

Some of the guests made arrangements for carriages to take them to the church and house on the day of the wedding, but this was unnecessary, for they were notified later that carriages would be sent for them. All this was at the expense of their hostess.

A particular interest has been taken in this wedding by the friends of the young couple because it has been unmistakably a love match and the attachment is of long standing.

The young people of Newport tell of how a number of years ago, at the dancing classes they attended, Alfred Vanderbilt would dance with no other little girl than Elsie French, and they tell of the boy's taking a long tramp that he might stand on the sidewalk to see the little girl drive by in the pony carriage, handling the reins herself for the first time. The wedding is only a natural consummation, and there is a general feeling of satisfaction in it.

"Every one looked so happy coming out of the church," said a girl who was one of the interested outside crowd, "and sometimes they all look so cold-like."

THE VANDERBILTS IN BOSTON.

Newly Wedded Couple Arrive Unexpectedly and Go to the Hotel Somerset.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 14.—Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt arrived in Boston on a special train this afternoon. Their coming was a great surprise, as it had been stated that they would spend their honeymoon on the much-advertised "Farm" near Newport. Just after 4 o'clock—4:11, to be precise—the special arrived at Back Bay station, and from the middle car of the train the couple alighted, Mr. Vanderbilt assisting his bride down the steps of the car. Hardly a soul was in sight, and those who were had no intimation that the visitors were the much-talked-of couple. From the rear car two trunks were handed out. One bore the initials "E. F.," the other "A. G. V." This was the only baggage carried.

Hailing one of the public carriages, Mr. Vanderbilt called out, "To the Touraine." This was evidently to put a few by-standers on the wrong scent should there be any newspaper men in the station. However, Mr. Vanderbilt soon changed his mind, and was driven to the Westminster. Again a change in the programme was made, and instead of alighting there, fresh orders were given, and the carriage rapidly turned and drove past the public library to Commonwealth Avenue, finally halting in front of the Hotel Somerset.

The clerks were for a moment staggered when Mr. Vanderbilt called for the manager and stated his identity. He wished his presence in the hotel kept a secret, and ordered that no cards or messages be sent up to him. The coming of the bridal pair was so unexpected that no preparations had been made to receive them, and a great scurrying round ensued to find apartments for the distinguished guests. The Gen. Miles suite, officially called the "State suite," was occupied. Resort was had to the third floor. On that floor on the southwesterly side, fronting on Commonwealth Avenue, a three-room suite was made ready.

The bridegroom declined to register, saying he and his wife would retire to their apartments immediately.

Mrs. Vanderbilt was attired in a rather long dark coat, cut in the prevailing style, showing underneath a gray traveling dress of rough material. The bridegroom wore a dark paddock coat and black derby.

It was about 4:30 o'clock when the couple were observed to their apartments, and shortly after 6 word was sent to the office to have dinner sent to the rooms. The intention of the pair had been to attend the performance of "Ben Hur" at the Colonial Theatre, and tickets and a carriage had been ordered for 7:40 o'clock, but just before that time word was sent to the office that, owing to the fatigue of the journey, the couple would remain in their apartments, and requesting that the carriage be dismissed.

The indications are that Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt will leave here to-morrow, although no notice to that effect was given to the hotel authorities. The small amount of baggage carried would indicate that their stay is to be brief.

The guests were in blissful ignorance that the Vanderbilts were in their midst. The hotel people maintained silence, and the clerks and manager both denied that the principals of the most famous wedding in years were at the hotel.

"Vanderbilt here? I guess not. You've got the wrong place this time. Didn't know they were in Boston. Got a Vanderpool here, but no Vanderbilt. Look at the register and satisfy yourself." This is what was told inquirers. But the couple were in the house. A reporter followed them from the station to the hotel and saw them in their apartments, hotel officials to the contrary notwithstanding.

Funeral of Thomas N. McCarter, Sr.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 14.—The funeral of Thomas Nesbitt McCarter, Sr., was held this afternoon in the First Presbyterian Church. The honorary pallbearers were: Chancellor William A. Magie, Chief Justice David A. Depue, Vice Chancellor John R. Emory, Vice Chancellor Henry C. Pitney, Justice Gilbert Collins, Wheeler H. Peckham of New York, Cortlandt Parker, Sr., John J. McCook, Robert H. Savre, the Rev. Dr. E. E. Craven of Philadelphia, Edgar B. Ward, Warren N. Trusdell, Amzi Dodd, James P. Dusenberry, and Col. Edward H. Wright. In the body of the church were Gov. Voorhees and more than 100 members of the bar. The interment was in Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

BOSSCHIETER MURDER DETAILS TOLD IN COURT

Within an Hour Jury Is Selected to Try the First Case.

McAlister, Campbell, and Death Listen Nonchalantly to Testimony of the Victim's Family and Witnesses of the Crime.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 14.—The trial of three of the four men who are accused of the murder of Jennie Bosschieter was begun in the Court of Oyer and Terminer, in the old Court House, in Main Street, today. The three men—Walter McAlister, Andrew Campbell, and William Death—who are the persons most concerned in the progress and outcome of the trial, surprised everybody by their deportment during the relation of various incidents of the awful story by the witnesses. If they felt their position very keenly they certainly did not show it. Particularly was this true of McAlister, who kept up a continual chatter with Campbell, who sat beside him.

A big crowd began to gather about the Court House at an early hour, but a few of the very curious arrived earlier than was looked for. They were men who thought they had some influence with the Sheriff and the County Clerk, and pestered those officials for nearly two hours before Justice Jonathan Dixon, who is presiding, opened the trial. Few of the early arrivals found their influence strong enough, however, and were compelled to join the crowd which stood along the curb in front of the building, or go away. This crowd on the outside was perhaps the best evidence of the great interest which Paterson is taking in the case. It must have numbered 500 persons at various periods of the day, and was larger when the opening hour of court was at hand. In one instance during the morning session it broke out into something like a chorus of cheers, which were proved to have been caused by some one who gave the false impression that the prisoners were being led into the building.

Not the least of the unusual features of the trial was the rapidity with which it moved. Unless a snag is struck to-day, when the medical experts are to be heard, it will be concluded much quicker than was expected. Less than an hour was required for filling the jury box. The opening speech of Prosecutor Emley, too, consumed less time than it was predicted it would, and even the testimony of the witnesses who were heard in the afternoon was delivered with so much facility as to surprise even those who are familiar with the facts they had already told once to the Coroner's jury.

Few of the witnesses were cross-examined. Only August Sculthorpe, the hackman, better known as "Garry Hen," failed to get off without being called to account by the defense. Ex-Judge Hoffman of Jersey City took him in tow at the conclusion of his direct testimony, and he was still on the stand when the trial was closed for the day at 5:30 o'clock. In spite of close questioning his direct testimony was not shaken. His was the most important evidence given during the day. But he omitted something when going over the experiences of the night beginning with the evening of Oct. 18 and ending on the morning of the next day which Prosecutor Emley thought of while ex-Judge Hoffman was cross-examining him. It was a bit of evidence regarding a sound he heard while the unconscious girl was being hurried off to the cabin from the woods near the Rock Road. He said he heard a sound as of a bottle striking a stone. This bottle, he explained, he found on the Monday following the Thursday of the preceding week, when he visited the woods again in company with a detective. It contained "some kind of stuff," he said.

The audience, which on some pretext or another actually got into the courtroom, gave a hint of the social and business standing of the accused men. It was a respectable-looking audience. No women were present, aside from those who were compelled to be there as witnesses, and a few who were there for the newspapers. Even these witnesses were kept in an adjoining room, and were only admitted into the trial room when called upon to testify.

THE JURY SELECTED.

The twelve jurymen, who were selected from thirty-six talesmen, are as follows:

Charles Brett, Walter Brooks, John McAllister, John E. Hackett, George Hardcastle, Charles Irving, Anthony Thomas, Mathias C. Winan, Edward Bergen, John Rubin, George B. Conlin, Joseph Smith.

Prosecutor Emley, in his address, gave a comprehensive idea of the shocking drama as it is now pretty well known. He dwelt particularly upon the fact that a great crime had been committed, which had resulted in murder whether drugs had been administered or not. His speech consumed almost all the time there was left before the recess, only one witness being called before court adjourned. The witness was Surveyor C. W. A. Fonda, who only testified to certain maps and charts describing the scenes of the murder, which are to be used during the trial.

A murmur of expectancy went up from the crowd when the clerk called the name of Mrs. Bosschieter, the victim's stepmother. A woman of medium height, with a dark complexion, and rather frail, she proved to be. She took the witness chair with little hesitancy, and, while she spoke low, she made herself easily understood to the Prosecutor, who repeated over most of the answers, to the great gratification of the newspaper men.

Mrs. Bosschieter, in reply to the preliminary questions, said that she had been in this country about eleven years, coming here from Holland; that she lived at 155 East Fifth Street, and had lived there for three years.

"Where did Jennie work in October last?" the Prosecutor asked.

"In the Paterson ribbon factory."

"Had she worked steadily for the last three years?"

"Except when work was slack."

"When did Jennie leave the house on the night of Oct. 18 last?"

"Ten minutes before 8."

"Did you know she was going out?"

"Yes; she was going to the drug store for me to get some baby powder for my married daughter's child."

Mrs. Bosschieter said that the first news she had of the crime was when a man met her almost at her door just as she was going out in the morning and vaguely intimated that something might have happened to Jennie.

"When did you see her next?" Mrs. Bosschieter was asked.

"On Friday morning, when she was brought home dead."

Michael Duff of counsel for the prisoners elicited the information from Mrs. Bosschieter that Jennie had sometimes been out late at night, but not often. It was necessary for her to knock at the door to get into the house, she said, and it was her husband who would answer the summons.

MURDERED GIRL'S SISTER CALLED.

The next witness who was called was Susan Bosschieter, a fact which is of some importance, because it was noticed before she had gone very far that the Prosecutor proposed to prove his case step by step, in chronological order. Susan proved to be a slender, blonde girl, of prepossessing countenance. She testified that she worked with Jennie in the Paterson ribbon factory and occupied the same room, and, indeed, the same bed with her sister. She also spoke of her sister's steady habits, and said that she could not remember that she had lost any time during the last three years, only when slack work had compelled her to lay off.

Prosecutor Emley laid great stress upon the clothing worn by the murdered girl. He compelled Susan to go over every article she knew her sister had worn upon the fatal night, and compelled the witness to identify several articles of Jennie's apparel.

"When your sister went out, where did she say she was going?" queried the prosecutor.

"To Klatte's, where she had a lady friend."

"Did you render any service to her before she went out?"

"Yes; I tied up a finger which she had cut—I put a new rag around it."

Mr. Emley showed the rag to the witness, which she identified as the identical one she had put on her sister's finger.

She then went over her experience on the Friday morning when in response to a summons she went down to the Waganaw Road and found Jennie's body near the bridge.

Cornelius Garry, the driver for Alyea, who discovered the murdered girl, testified to the incidents which have already been so often told about the finding of the body.

The testimony of Leonard Kamerling, a neighbor of the Bosschieter family, gave some significant testimony intended to show the whereabouts of Jennie during the early hours of the evening, and apparently the beginning of the alleged plot against the girl. He said he saw her standing in front of Kent's drug store on Main Street, near Van Houten Street, on the evening of Oct. 18.

"What time was that?" the Prosecutor wanted to know.

"About half past 9 I saw Jennie talking to a young man in front of Kent's drug store."

The witness identified Campbell as the man, and said he heard Jennie say to him: "No, no!" in a snappy sort of way.

Nellie De Vriers and Bertha Dyson furnished the link which pictured the dead girl walking into Christopher Saul's saloon, and finally the saloon keeper himself was called upon to tell what he knew of the visit of the dead girl and her companions to his place.

He said he supplied them with a glass of absinthe, a glass of cider, a glass of seltzer, and a glass of whisky and water. Later, he said, they ordered champagne. When they had drunk that they suddenly disappeared. The saloonkeeper could only identify McAllister clearly. He said that he came to him in the company of another young man on the morning when the dead girl was found, and told him not to "squeal" if a reward for the perpetrators of the crime was offered to him.

Following Saul's testimony came that of the hackman, Sculthorpe. He said he received a telephone message to go to Saul's saloon, a quarter before 10 o'clock. He went to the saloon and waited outside without asking a question of any one. Finally the door of the saloon was opened, and four men carried a girl out and placed her in his victoria. They carried her out feet foremost, he said.

He then received orders to drive along the Goffle road, and stop at Lee's roadhouse. When it proved to be closed up, he was ordered to drive along the Rock Road, a part where he had never been in his life before. When they reached a wood he was ordered to halt, and the three men then pulled a blanket off from his vehicle, laid it on the ground, and took the girl out of the carriage. He moved his horses on about that time, he said.

On cross-examination by Ex-Judge Hoffman Sculthorpe said that he did not hear the girl utter a single word after she left the saloon, that she was carried to and from his victoria feet foremost always, but that he thought she was still alive when he got his order to drive back to Paterson as quickly as he could.

"When you found that the girl was dead, why didn't you drive directly to some officer and tell him about it?" ex-Judge Hoffman asked Sculthorpe.

"Well, them fellows had me so scared that I didn't know what to do," came the reply promptly.

Sculthorpe afterward testified to the sound of a bottle striking a stone and to his discovery of a bottle four days later. In replying to one of ex-Judge Hoffman's questions, Sculthorpe became witty, and said that he never carried a bottle, at which the audience laughed. Judge Dixon reproved them, he made the reproof the occasion of adjourning court.

Kerr, the other prisoner, was not in court. It has not been revealed yet whether he will turn State's evidence or not. It looked yesterday as though the State would not need his evidence.

MARK ON BOSSCHIETER GRAVE.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 14.—Since the body of Jennie Bosschieter was finally laid away in Fair Lawn Cemetery the grave has remained unmarked until to-day, when it was found that some one had dropped a bunch of white hyacinths and red carnations on the grave, and that at the head of the mound, in such a position as to face the drive, a large piece of white cardboard had been placed, on which is printed in red letters the words:

"VENGEANCE IS MINE, Saith the Lord."

The word "vengeance" is in large letters and can be read a considerable distance away, and the effect is somewhat startling. It is said that none of the dead girl's relatives placed the marker on the grave and that they know nothing of it.

FIRE IN DAWSON.

Business Houses Burn, Entailing a Lose of $50,000.

Special to The New York Times.

VICTORIA, B. C., Jan. 14.—Special despatches to Skagway papers state that the largest fire of the Winter in Dawson occurred last Monday night, in which three buildings were burned to the ground. The loss will exceed $50,000. Particulars of conflagration were received through arrival of the Ameer to-day. At 8 o'clock fire was discovered in the second story of the building occupied by Cribbs & Rogers. The flames spread rapidly, and by the time the Fire Department arrived the fire was beyond control.

Attention of firemen was then given to saving adjoining buildings from flames caught on the walls of the west building, and it was soon in flames. By that time Rainier Hotel, on the opposite side, was ablaze, and the department was taxed to its utmost.

Little was saved from the burned buildings.

The business firms involved in the fire are Ruday & Kalenborn, druggists; Bonanza Meat Market, Antler Restaurant, San Francisco Oyster House, and Cribbs & Rogers.

Besides these firms which suffered nearly total loss, there were several dressmakers, lawyers, and dentists, having offices up stairs, and these were able to save only a small portion of their belongings.

Goods were removed from the adjoining buildings and carried to the street, entailing additional loss. The origin of the fire is unknown.

KALTENBORN ROMANCE ENDS IN SEPARATION

The Musician Returns to His Father's House.

Wife Says that She Will Not Take Him Back—Quartet to be Reorganized.

Lovers of good music will find much cause for regret in the following letter, for it means that there will be no more Kaltenborn concerts, at least under the management which for the last two years has made them such an attractive feature of Summer life in New York:

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you kindly insert in your columns at the earliest date the following:

Owing to Mr. Kaltenborn's desertion of his wife, we, the undersigned, have decided to discontinue our work with him, and to reorganize our quartet.

Thanking you in advance, we are,

Sincerely yours,
CARL HUGO ENGEL,
ERWIN C. BANCK,
HERMANN BEYER-HENE.

New York, Jan. 13, 1901.

This is the unhappy ending of a romance begun nine years ago, when Miss Lulu Borman, daughter of Adolph H. Borman, a well-known stockbroker, with offices at 7 Wall Street, married Franz P. Kaltenborn, then a comparatively unknown violinist in theatre orchestras, against her parents' wishes.

Professional jealousy of her success as a manager, according to Mrs. Kaltenborn, is at the bottom of the trouble. When seen at her home, 78 West Eighty-fifth Street, yesterday afternoon she declared that there was no scandal in her husband's alleged desertion, but she added that under no circumstances would she take him back again and that after the quartet has finished its present engagements she will give up her ambition to succeed as a manager, resume her maiden name, and retire to the quiet life of her father's home.

This domestic catastrophe comes as no surprise to those acquainted with the couple and rumors of trouble between them have long been in persistent circulation. The public had an inkling of the state of affairs last Fall, when Mr. Kaltenborn announced a series of Sunday concerts at the Herald Square Theatre by his orchestra "under entirely different management." It was known that Mrs. Kaltenborn had been the active manager of the Summer concerts of the last two years at the St. Nicholas Garden, and that it was money furnished by her father and his friends, it is said, which had made the enterprise possible, and that it was at least to some extent due to her unceasing effort that they were as successful as they seemed to be.

She said yesterday that Mr. Kaltenborn had left Tuesday while she was out and without giving her any notice of his intention, and that he had since returned and broken the door chain in order to enter the flat and secure some of the effects which he claims as his personal property. She said that she was not at present contemplating a legal separation, although Mr. Borman had urged her to apply for a divorce, and that after her business responsibilities are over she will probably be guided by his advice.

"That he will only keep away from me is all I ask," she said.

Mr. Kaltenborn has taken up his abode with his father, who is a 'cello player living at 166 East Ninetieth Street. He was in Yonkers yesterday, where he taught his Monday afternoon class at the Women's Institute in Palisade Avenue, and in the evening gave a private lesson at the residence of Dr. Peter S. Callan, 156 Park Avenue, in that city. He curtly refused to discuss the matter when seen there last evening, but his sister in New York said that he had been so worried over the affair that he had not slept for four nights. She declared that when his side of the story was told it would put an entirely different light on the trouble.

She was greatly pleased that he had succeeded in bringing away a Stradivarius violin worth $4,000, to which Mr. Borman might lay claim.

"The violin was given to him outright," she said; "but some time ago, fearing debt, he asked Mr. Borman to alter the bill of sale so that it would stand in Mr. Borman's name."

Those who attended the concerts in St. Nicholas Garden remember Mrs. Kaltenborn's great activity. She seemed to be everywhere at once about the building during the performances, and attended to every detail, holding long conferences with the musicians, particularly with Mr. Engel, who acted as concert master. She it was who made out the programmes, and the first year she even made the contract with the brewer for the beer to be sold during the entertainments. She said yesterday that, so far from being a success, the concerts had only been profitable for four weeks during the entire two Summers, and that they had sunk in all more than $24,000 of the money of her family and friends. Disaster came near overtaking them during the last season, when her father refused to honor a check for $150 which she had drawn upon him, though he subsequently relented.

The quartet is now under contract for a series of twenty-one concerts before the Educational Alliance, which will carry it into March. Mr. Kaltenborn presided at the last of these Sunday night, but his wife said he will not again appear with the company, which is likely henceforth to have a different name.

Sooner than have the musicians thrown out of employment at this time of year she decided to continue the work, and will provide money to make up any deficiency. She said that it was through her influence that Mr. Kaltenborn first appeared as a soloist at three concerts of the late Anton Seidl, and that he first came out as a conductor at the Seidl memorial concert in Brooklyn. She said that she obtained for him the post of conductor at the last concerts of Mme. Lilli Lehmann in this city, when he won high encomiums from that great singer, whom she had known since childhood.

Mr. Kaltenborn was born in Homburg, Germany, April 6, 1865, and came to this country when six years old. He studied music under his father, Julius Bernstein, Edward Mollenhauer, and other masters.

SAYS THEY TRIED TO HUG HER.

Miss Glueck Has Two Young Men Arrested, but Fails to Prosecute.

Two young men were locked up in the Fifth Street Police Station early yesterday morning charged by Miss Bella Glueck, a young woman of 745 Sixth Street, with having tried to hug and kiss her on the street. The prisoners are Henry Kellar of 250 East Sixteenth Street and Charles Werner of 530 East Third Street. According to Miss Glueck's story, she was on her way home at about 1 o'clock yesterday morning with her sister and brother-in-law. At Seventh Street and Avenue A she met Kellar and Werner, and dropped behind her companions to let the two men pass. When they got abreast of her she says Kellar remarked:

"Nice little girl. She's mine."

"No," said his companion, "she's mine."

Each of the men seized her, and Kellar tried to kiss her. She struck him in the jaw, knocking him down. Undeterred by the fate of his companion, Werner, who had been holding the sleeve of her coat, tried to hug and kiss her. She boxed his ears vigorously, and called for help. Her relatives seemed to have been utterly oblivious of her predicament, as they were not in sight when Policeman Baxter appeared and put the two men under arrest.

The prisoners denied that they had tried to take liberties with Miss Glueck, and said the whole thing was a mistake. When arraigned in the Yorkville Police Court the prisoners were fined $5 each for drunkenness, Miss Glueck not being in court to press her charges.

THE MOLINEUX CASE.

Messrs. Weeks and Battle Examine Recorder Goff's Order.

Bartow S. Weeks and George Gordon Battle, counsel for Roland B. Molineux, under sentence of death for poisoning Mrs. Kate J. Adams, called at the office of the Chief Clerk of General Sessions yesterday and closely examined the order of Recorder Goff settling Molineux's case on appeal prepared by his counsel and amended by the District Attorney.

Mr. Weeks announced, after going over the order, that no decision would be arrived at by him and Mr. Battle regarding a motion for a resettlement of the case until the transcript is printed.

GOOD OUTLOOK FOR QUAY.

Indications that He Will Be Elected United States Senator.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Jan. 14.—There is every indication to-night that the bitter struggle for the United States Senatorship will terminate to-morrow with the election of Col. M. S. Quay, the nominee of the joint Republican caucus. The Democrats will vote for Col. James M. Guffey of Pittsburg, and the anti-Quay Republicans are expected to distribute their votes among several "favorite sons."

The House and Senate will vote separately at 3 o'clock to-morrow afternoon, and the probabilities are that Mr. Quay will secure a majority in each house. His friends say his combined vote will not fall short of 130. It requires 127 votes to elect, and it is pretty generally conceded that he will poll at least this number.

Should Mr. Quay or any other person receive the requisite number of votes to-morrow in the Senate and House the two houses will meet jointly at noon Wednesday to canvass the returns and formally declare an election. If, however, there should be no election to-morrow the two bodies will meet jointly on Wednesday and ballot every day thereafter until there is an election or the Legislature adjourns.

There is nothing to-night to indicate that there will not be an election on the first ballot or that there will be another deadlock similar to that of 1899, when the Legislature adjourned without making a choice.

Quay had 123 votes in the caucus held a week ago. To-night Representatives Thompson of Centre County and Reynolds of Lackawanna, who heretofore had been acting with the anti-Quay Republicans, announced their intention to vote for Quay to-morrow. The Quay leaders say others who have opposed the former Senator will be found to-morrow on the Quay side of the ballot.

A meeting of the Republican Senators and members pledged to oppose Mr. Quay's election was held this evening to discuss the situation. Senator Flinn of Allegheny said at the close of the meeting that all the members were present except Messrs. Thompson, Neeb, Reynolds, and Emery.

"The only news from any of these absentees was from Mr. Reynolds," he added; "it being announced that he had succumbed to the influence of the machine. All of the gentlemen present were as strong as ever in the determination to oppose the election of Mr. Quay."

Another meeting of the anti-Quay Republicans will be held to-morrow, previous to the meeting of the Legislature, to formulate a plan of action when the ballot is taken.

Senator Penrose, who is assisting Col. Quay in the direction of his campaign, said to-night:

"On the evening before the first and final balloting in the Senatorial contest the evidence is becoming stronger every hour that Senator Quay will be elected on the first ballot in the Senate and House by a much larger majority than was expected by even his most sanguine friends. The opposition has gone to pieces, as was expected in the beginning. Fusion on an insurgent Republican or on a Democrat has been found utterly impracticable."

Senator Quay expects to take his seat in the Senate Thursday if he should be elected before that time.

SENATOR HOAR RENOMINATED.

Massachusetts Republicans in Both Houses Unanimously Select Him to Succeed Himself.

BOSTON, Jan. 14.—The members of both parties in both branches of the Legislature, contrary to the usual custom, held separate caucuses this afternoon to nominate a United States Senator to succeed George Frisbie Hoar.

The Republicans of both House and Senate were unanimous in their choice of the venerable Massachusetts Senator to succeed himself, notwithstanding his antagonistic attitude on some party measures. But the House Democrats, although considerably in the minority, engaged in a spirited half hour's debate over the question of a candidate, and finally agreed on ex-Secretary of State Richard Olney. Four Democratic Senators and four members of the House voted in their respective caucuses for Senator Hoar.

Each branch will ballot to-morrow, and Senator Hoar will undoubtedly be elected. On Wednesday both houses will convene in joint session to compare notes, at which time the result will be formally announced by President Soule.

DEAD-LOCK IN DELAWARE.

Republican Split Over the Senatorship—Addicks Nominated by His Faction.

DOVER, Del., Jan. 14.—Two caucuses were held to-night over the contest for United States Senators from Delaware.

The Democrats met early in the evening and transacted their business with surprising dispatch. Willard Saulsbury was nominated for the Senatorial vacancy caused by the failure of the last Legislature to elect a successor to Senator George Gray. The nomination of Saulsbury was made unanimous. For the full term to succeed United States Senator Richard R. Kenney, Mr. Kenney was nominated and the Democrats resolved to stand together. It is believed, however, that on a deal with the regular Republicans to beat Addicks, the Democrats will go into caucus again for a Democratic nominee to run with the regular Republican nominee.

The twenty-nine Republicans did not come to any agreement to-night, and a long deadlock seems inevitable. The Addicks men issued a call and urged a conference of all Republicans, but only sixteen Assemblymen answered by meeting in the Senate chamber late to-night. The Addicks men had calculated on two others elected as independent Republicans and four regular Republicans answering their call, and this would have given them within five votes of the necessary twenty-seven. As they stand to-night, however, they are eleven votes short. Six of the Republicans who did not attend the meeting are said to be pledged rather than leave vacancies in the United States Senate. The sixteen who caucused unanimously nominated John Edward Addicks for Senator, and he will be voted for on both short and long term ballots.

NOMINATED BY GOV. VOORHEES.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 14.—Gov. Voorhees sent to the Senate to-night a number of nominations, among which were these:

For Chancellor—William J. Magie, reappointed.
For Chief Justice of the Supreme Court—Davis A. Depue, reappointed.
For County Judges—Essex County, Alfred L. Skinner, reappointed; Salem, Thomas H. Sinnickson, reappointed; Sussex, Henry Huston, reappointed.
For District Court Judges—William W. Watson, Passaic; Edward S. Atwater, Elizabeth; William R. Lewis, Paterson.
For Prosecutors—Lewis Starr, Gloucester; Eugene Emley, Passaic, both reappointed.
For State Factory Inspector—John C. Ward, Salem, reappointed.
For Manager State Hospital at Morris Plains—Richard A. McCurdy.
For Members of State Board of Education—James L. Hayes, Otto Crouse, Samuel St. John McCutcheon, Francis Scott.

Senator Stokes introduced in the Senate to-night a bill to reapportion the sixty Assemblymen of the State to the various counties on the basis of the new census. The bill gives to Hudson and Passaic an additional Assemblyman, and takes one each from Hunterdon and Warren.

Nassau County Democrats' Officers.

MINEOLA, L. I., Jan. 14.—The Democratic Central Committee of Nassau County has organized for the year by the election of Eugene V. Willis of North Hempstead, Chairman; John J. Miller of Hempstead, Secretary, and Dr. Oliver L. Jones of Oyster Bay, Treasurer. There was no contest.

A Nomination in Colorado.

DENVER, Jan. 14.—The caucus of the fusion members of the Legislature to-night nominated Thomas M. Patterson of Denver for the United States Senate to succeed Senator E. O. Wolcott. He received 73 out of 91 votes in the caucus.

CITY HOLDS TRAIN CAPTIVE.

Cars Chained to Tracks in Indiana for Unpaid Taxes.

Special to The New York Times.

BRAZIL, Ind., Jan. 14.—It is an unusual sight to see a train chained to the track, but the Chicago and Southeastern Railroad Company's running stock was attached here to-day by Constable Vance to satisfy a claim of about $400 delinquent taxes due the city.

After considerable parleying the engineer was allowed to depart with his engine and caboose, but the remainder of the train is pinioned to the track, and will be watched by officers until the delinquent taxes are settled. The attached train was the first one run into the city for a year.

CHARGES AGAINST A BANK.

Depositor Alleges There Has Been Jugglng with His Account in a New Jersey Concern.

Edward Farry, a brick manufacturer of Matawan, N. J., yesterday applied to Vice Chancellor Pitney at Jersey City for an order requiring the Farmers and Merchants' Bank of Middletown Point to produce its books and make an accounting. Farry, through Peter Bentley, his counsel, alleged that he opened an account with the bank in December, 1892. Up to 1900 he had no trouble, but in June of that year he found that the account given him by the bank showed that he had $15,000 less on deposit than his own account showed.

He first learned of the discrepancy on June 20, when Charles H. Wardell, cashier of the bank, told him he had not sufficient funds in the bank to meet a check he had given for $19 which had been presented for payment. The cashier further told him, he alleges, that the balance to his credit was exactly 19 cents. On June 22 he says he met Wardell while out driving, and Wardell then told him he had found an error in the bank's account, and his balance was $200, from which the check for $19 had been paid.

Farry further charges that "one of the employes of the bank had been using his money," and that "the officers and Directors of the bank were familiar with this fact prior to June 20, 1900."

He further alleges that $200 was added to his account on the day last named because the clerk confessed that he had used complainant's money. Farry alleges that he asked to have his account written up, and found various amounts charged to him for which he had given no checks and for which the bank could give him no vouchers. When he asked for these vouchers, he says, the bank officers told him they had been mislaid or lost, and refused to pay him the amount he claimed was due him.

A rule was granted to show cause, and the officers of the bank have thirty days in which to file their answer.

CHICAGO YACHTING SCHEDULE.

Dates for Important Races Fixed by the Columbia Club.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 14.—The Columbia Yacht Club is planning some excellent racing for next season, and has filled in its dates from May 30 to Sept. 14. It is by a long way the best yacht racing programme ever arranged for Chicago waters, and it includes some new features of importance.

Decoration Day is the first racing date on the list, and it calls for club races for all classes, with a dinner for members in the evening, when the day's prizes will be presented. The next big event is the ninth annual race to Michigan City, scheduled for June 8. This is for cabin yachts, as it always has been. Last year's number of starters, twenty-three, undoubtedly will be exceeded. The remaining four Saturdays in June are given up to the open boats, which will have two classes provided for them.

On July 4 the club will renew the big open regatta it inaugurated last year, and it is intended to eclipse that occasion. Three of the ten races for open boats will be sailed weekly in July, but for the last Saturday of the month a race for cabin yachts over the short eight-knot, outside course is scheduled. From July 27 to Aug. 17 the committee has not arranged any races, deferring to the Chicago Yacht Club's trial races and the international contest for the Canada's Cup.

Aug. 31 the annual race to Waukegan will be sailed. Aug. 24 and Sept. 7 will witness the last two races of the series for open yachts, and on Sept. 14 the club will wind up the season with its annual Fall regatta.

SMALLPOX DEATH IN BROOKLYN.

Authorities After a Doctor Who Failed to Report the Patient's Illness.

A death from smallpox occurred in Brooklyn last evening. The victim was Benjamin Trauaofski, a Russian Jew, fifty-four years old, who lived at 31 Boerum Street with his wife and two children. All that the officials of the Health Department could discover of the case was that Dr. James Huber of 113 East Broadway, Manhattan, was called to attend the man yesterday, and on his arrival found him dead. He immediately notified the authorities, who quarantined the premises and made arrangements to have the body removed to North Brother Island. The dead man had lived with his family at 135 Monroe Street, Manhattan, about a month ago.

The officers of the Health Department are now trying to find out who the physician was who it is understood first attended Trauaofski. As soon as they do he will be arrested. The Sanitary Code provides that every physician who attends a person suffering from a contagious disease shall make report of it to the Health Department within twenty-four hours. Neglect of this constitutes a misdemeanor, and the offender may be either fined or imprisoned, or both penalties may be inflicted.

When the officers arrived at the house they found three men, friends of the dead man, sitting beside the body. When an attempt was made to make them leave they resisted. They, with the rest of the tenants of the building, which is situated in a very populous district, were quarantined.

Bloodpoisoning from Vaccination.

Mrs. Mary Ferrand, who was forced to undergo vaccination, with a number of other employes in a large dry goods store on West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, is lying in a critical condition at her home, 1,011 East One Hundred and Sixty-ninth Street, suffering from bloodpoisoning. Mrs. Ferrand says she was vaccinated on the leg by a Board of Health physician on Dec. 15, and that on Dec. 22 her limb began to swell so that she was obliged to go to bed. Then blood poisoning set in, and Dr. McChristie, who was called in, contemplated amputation. There were signs of improvement yesterday, however, and the operation has been delayed.

New Smallpox Case in Manhattan.

But one new case of smallpox was reported yesterday to the Board of Health. It was that of Frank Keuhr, four years old, of 16 East One Hundred and Tenth Street. He was removed to North Brother Island.

Andover (N. H.) Academy Burned.

ANDOVER, N. H., Jan. 14.—Proctor Academy, an institution conducted by the Unitarian Educational Society, was burned at midnight. The main building was of wood, two stories high, with a belfry and two wings, also of two stories. The building contained the town and school libraries.

In the absence of a fire brigade, the flames had full sway. The origin of the fire has not been ascertained. The loss is about $8,000, partly covered by insurance. It is understood that a new building will be erected.

Mrs. Root Called to Mother's Bedside.

Mrs. Elihu Root, the wife of the Secretary of War, is at present in this city. She came here hurriedly on Sunday owing to the sickness of Mrs. Salem H. Wales, her mother. At the residence of Mr. Wales, at 25 East Fifty-fifth Street, it was said last night that Mrs. Wales was recovering. Mrs. Root, it was said, will probably remain with her mother for a few days longer.

BETH ISRAEL HOSPITAL.

Annual Entertainment Takes Place Tomorrow Night.

The annual entertainment and reception of the Beth Israel Hospital will take place to-morrow evening at Grand Central Palace, Forty-third Street and Lexington Avenue.

Owing to the erection of the new building on the corner of Cherry and Jefferson Streets, which is to cost about $250,000 and which is nearly up to the roof, the public has taken a deeper interest in the coming affair than ever before, and responses to appeals have been more numerous and substantial than to any of the other functions the hospital has held.

The Watson vaudeville company and other entertainers have been engaged. The principal part of the entertainment will be the representation in cinematograph of the entire workings of the hospital, in the shape of moving pictures showing the patient from the time he enters the hospital until he leaves it. The music will be rendered by an orchestra of twenty-five pieces, under the leadership of Prof. J. Wollenberg. Among the invited guests are Jacob H. Schiff, L. Lewinsohn, K. Mandel, the entire consulting staff of the institution, and the entire Board of Directors.

The journal, which will be very elaborate and which will net quite a sum of money, is in charge of the Ladies' Auxiliary Society and the Young Men's Auxiliary Society of the Beth Israel Hospital. The entire arrangements are in charge of a committee headed by B. L. Price, who is Chairman.

The Wanamaker Store The Wanamaker Store The Wanamaker Store

The SILVER SALE

It's a masterful movement. The sheen of silver covers the counters of practically all the aisles of the Broadway side of the store. And what beautiful silverware it is! There is dignity and refined character to every piece. The Wanamaker Silver Sale does not admit goods made for bargain sales. Not a piece is here that was not made in the regular way, in a factory of high reputation for worthy wares, and with the expectation that it would be sold at regular prices.

The silver shows it. You see here in this sale patterns that have been selling at full prices in the best stores, until now. You cannot find anywhere in the collection a piece that is not worthy of the best silver store in the land.

That is why the low prices are so fascinating. No careful housekeeper wishes to make display with the unworthy make-believes which most bargain sales offer. Here is no possible risk, for better goods cannot be bought at any price, either in plated wares or solid silver. There are later patterns; but that is a matter of taste between those of last year and this. Latest are not always best. We leave that judgment to you. In quality and refinement of style these are not excelled by any. Then the variety is almost as broad as the next best regular stock. Some hints of prices follow:

Paris ROBES Reduced

Not more than fifty of these remain, and they must go in a jiffy. They were handsome enough and moderate enough in price to have found their way to pleased wearers 'ere this. Half price and two-thirds price will doubtless bring eager searchers for them. The richest of the imported novelty dress goods are used in making these robes. They are handsomely embroidered and braided and appliqued in most effective designs. There were no patterns in our entire collection that were more elegant than those represented in this lot.

Some are here very briefly mentioned:

At $18, reduced from $40—Broadcloth Robes, in colors, with elaborate designs in cut jet and black silk round braid.
At $18, reduced from $35—Broadcloth Robes, in black; rich designs in colored satin applique, cut jet and silk embroidery.
At $22, reduced from $45—Broadcloth Robes, in colors; handsomely embroidered in chenille and silk in self contrasting colors and black.
At $25, reduced from $40—Venetian Cloth Robes; silk embroidered designs of self colors and white.
At $25, reduced from $42—Venetian Cloth Robes; elaborately embroidered with silk; also satin applique in lighter shades of self colors.
At $28, reduced from $58—Broadcloth and Whipcord Robes; designs in chenille and lace soutache.
At $30, reduced from $48—Venetian Cloth Robes, in colors; embroidered in silk of self colors and black soutache.

FURS Under-price

Such sweeping reductions in the prices of Wanamaker furs are fraught with deepest interest to all intending buyers. For these furs are most favorably priced in the first place; lower than customary for furs of such unimpeachable quality. So, since the winter still holds for you many opportunities of service and comfort from them, these sharp price-curtailments throughout the splendid stock carry their own argument.

$4—Alaska sable neck scarfs; trimmed with tails; were $5 and $6.50.
$7.50—Dyed opossum collarettes; 9 in. deep; high collar; were $12.50.
$12—Alaska sable neck scarfs, with 8 full tails; were $17.50.
$15—Sable fox double scarfs, with 2 large brush tails; were $20.
$25—Blue fox and natural lynx scarfs; were $35 and $50.
$25—Natural lynx collarettes; pointed front; high collar; were $50.
$25—Plain electric seal Eton jackets; were $35 and $45.
$30—Electric seal Eton jackets; blended mink collar and revers; were $45.
$35—Mink collarettes; trimmed with tails; were $50.
$45—Astrakhan jackets; rich, bright lustre; were $55 and $65.
Irkutz sable capes: $17.50, were $30; $25, were $40; $47.50, were $75.

A Study in Shoes

It is no small task each season to prepare alone for the most varied needs of the dwellers in New York. We do that part well. And then, with equal care and judgment, make ample preparation for those who come from or wish to visit places where climatic conditions are widely different. Hence this word of suggestion of women's Oxfords and other summer-time shoes.

Kidskin Oxfords, with patent leather tips, at $2.
Patent leather, kidskin and box-calf Oxfords, with welted soles, at $3.
Dull oxide kid, patent leather or chrome kid, stout sole, wide toe Oxfords, at $4.
French calfskin and patent leather, thick sole, full toe, square heel Oxfords, at $5.

Fourth avenue.

Handkerchiefs

These for women. Some at half price. They are new, unlaundered, neatly hemstitched, with drawn-work or revers. A 20c quality at 10c each.

Also plain hemstitched handkerchiefs, at 17c and 21c, and others neatly embroidered at 18c and 25c, that have sold at 25c and 35c.

Broadway.

FLANNELS

New, fine white embroidered flannels at a very low price. They're ours without profit to the maker from whom we procured them. And hence 50c a yard now, though they're 65c quality. The lot comprises both hemstitched and scalloped embroidered edges—about sixty attractive designs in all. An excellent grade, a very wide choice, an unusually little price.

Fourth avenue. 50c a yard for 65c quality

Children's PETTICOATS

These are mostly for the very little children of 6 months to 3 years. Some prettily made petticoats of very good cambric are 25c each. Others neatly trimmed with embroidery are 38c. And a particularly good quality, attractively trimmed, is 65c each. Some of excellent nainsook, with lawn ruffle edged with lace, and 2 clusters of plaits, are 85c each.

Petticoats of outing flannel, with deep embroidered scalloped ruffle, for 1 to 6-year sizes at 45c each.

Drawer waists of heavy muslin, bound around neck and arm-holes, are 12c for sizes 2 4 and 6 years, and 15c for 8 and 10-year sizes.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

CALENDARS

The prices are now 5c and 10c each. They were 15c and 40c. And there are thousands of the choicest specimens of lithography yet remaining. Take as many as you please at these prices. There's no limit. Some printers have been buying in 1,000 lots—to use as advertising cards.

Book Store, Ninth street.

Clean-up Sale of Linoleums and Mattings

There will be lively selling in the Carpet Store to-day. It's clean-up time for remnants of Linoleums, Oil Cloths and Straw Mattings. All the short lengths have been assembled and plainly marked with quantity and price. Thrifty housekeepers that know this store, know that prices will be wonderfully tempting; and every housekeeper has use for several pieces. None of the remnants will be cut; and we must also deny them the privilege of coming back. The prices mean that they must go for good.

All sorts and grades are included—the lengths running from 5 to 20 yards. This suggestion of prices:

Linoleum—15c to 50c a square yard; reduced from 60c to $1.
Oil Cloth—7½c to 20c a square yard; reduced from 25c to 50c.
Inlaid Linoleum—A small quantity, at 75c a square yard; reduced from $1.50.
Straw Mattings—About 3,000 yards, in lengths of from 10 to 35 yards, at one-half to three-quarters below usual prices. 7c to 25c a yard.

Also, some odd rolls of Matting, 40 yards each (not to be cut), at one-third off.

BLANKETS Under-price

Jack Frost is courting popular favor—perhaps has an ice project for the coming summer. Anyhow he has stayed away until bargain time came for cold weather needs. To-day it's Blankets.

Five kinds of excellent blankets are reduced from our regular stock; and they are of excellent character, and unmatched at their regular prices. These concessions to-day:

At $2.50, from $3.25—"The Raritan," white, wool filling on cotton warp; size, 72x84 inches; weight, 5½ pounds.
At $3.75, from $4.50—"The Bellevue," of fine white wool filling on cotton warp. Same size and weight as above.
At $4, from $5—"The Burlington," well made, of long staple wool on cotton warp. Same size and weight as above.
At $5, from $6—"Highland Falls," all-wool scarlet blankets; size, 74x84 inches; weight, 6 pounds.
At $6, from $7.50—"The Torrington," made of extra fine long wool on spool cotton warp; size 84x86 in.; weight, 7½ pounds.

Two Offerings of Men's SUITS to Order

The best bargain in clothes is the made-to-order offering. It must be new; it is in latest style, of course; and the making has to be good because our reputation goes with it. There can't be any possible sacrifice of quality or style for the money you save. These suits will be crisp and new, with a perfect fit guaranteed. These two offerings that should interest every well dressed man:

About forty patterns of fancy cheviots that were sold formerly at $25 and $30, that will be made into sack suits, at $20 a suit.

Also a very select line of fancy cheviots and neat worsted effects—about sixty patterns to select from—that were sold at $30 to $35, will be made into sack suits, at $25 a suit.

Important Additions to the "HURT BOOK" Sale

The weeding-out work continues. Thousands of volumes are involved in the plan. Many are absolutely perfect, and are only a part of this sale, owing to their being in small quantities. None is seriously affected—there's a scuff or a soil, here or there, nothing more—though the prices might seem to indicate much greater damage. There are books for all classes of readers and collectors. And additions are made every day. Half prices on the majority. Many are not more than third original prices. Here are a few of the good things for to-day:

The Life of Nelson. Captain A. T. Mahan. Publisher's price, $3. Our price, $1.25.
Historic Side Lights. Howard Payson Arnold. Publisher's price, $2.50. Our price, $1.25.
The Mississippi Valley in the Civil War. John Fiske. Publisher's price, $2. Our price, 90c.
A Beautiful Alien. Julia Magruder. Publisher's price, $1.25. Our price, 25c.
The Peaceful Hour. A collection of stories by the best writers. Publisher's price, $1.25. Our price, 60c.
Cyrano De Bergerac, translated by Gertrude Hall. Publisher's price, $1. Our price, 25c.
The Barrys. By Shan F. Bullock. Publisher's price, $1.25. Our price, 20c.
The Golf Girl. By Maud Humphrey. Publisher's price, $1.25. Our price, 25c.
The Pilgrim's Progress. Illustrated. Publisher's price, $5. Our price, $1.25.
Out-door Pictures. By T. De Thulstrup. Publisher's price, $5. Our price, $1.

Book Store, Ninth street.

Boys' Clothing

More incomplete lots, from which more rich choosing is offered. Here are some single and double-breasted suits for boys of 9 to 16 years, at $5 each. Values $7.50 to $10. And here are some fine 3-piece suits for boys of 9 to 16 years, at $4, though they were already a bargain at $5. Seventy-five high-grade Raglans and other top-coats of frieze and cheviot in Oxford and Cambridge grays, at $9 each—were $11 to $15.50. And durable, good-looking reefers, in 3 to 7-year sizes, at $3.50 instead of $6.

Second floor, Ninth street.

Dressing Sacques

Half prices for dainty and cozy home garments that were pretty enough and good enough to deserve their full prices. Their companions—almost identical—went, and these stayed. You may have them for half what the others brought.

Silk Dressing Sacques, in six different styles; some made entirely of lace and ribbon; some silk-lined, others lined with albatross—all dainty, and nicely made. Were $6 to $15; now $3 to $7.50.
Albatross or Flannel Dressing Sacques, in 8 styles; some trimmed with fancy braid, others trimmed with ribbon; some lined, others unlined. Were $8; now $4.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

The MUSLIN UNDERWEAR

We've found out quite emphatically how low were the prices for which we bought these muslin garments last summer. We ran short on certain styles and tried to get more made. The makers laughed at us. Said they were coining money getting much bigger prices for all the goods they could make; and couldn't think of doing work such as we demanded for such little prices.

Wonder who's paying the big prices?

Our goods were ordered last summer when makers couldn't get orders—when no other dealers would buy at any price. We got the best garments that could be made—got them just as we wanted them.

But we got too few. When these lots are gone, you'll pay a half more, for equal goods, even in a sale. These price-suggestions:

Night Gowns—
75c—Of muslin; yoke of 4 rows of insertion and cluster of plaits; V-neck trimmed with torchon lace.
$1—Of cambric; high neck; yoke of 2 rows of insertion and cluster of plaits and hemstitching; neck and sleeves trimmed with embroidery.
$1.25—Of cambric; square neck; yoke of cluster of fine plaits and insertion; neck and sleeves trimmed with embroidery.

Drawers—
30c—Of cambric, with cambric ruffle trimmed with torchon lace.
50c—Of cambric, with deep ruffle of lawn; hemstitched plaits.
75c—Of cambric; trimmed with neat embroidery and plaits above.
Other styles 15c to $4.25.

Petticoats—
50c—Of muslin, with cambric ruffle; trimmed with lace.
75c—Of muslin, with umbrella ruffle of cambric; hemstitched hem.
$1—Of muslin, with deep ruffle of cambric; trimmed with torchon lace and insertion.

Chemises—
25c—Of cambric, with round neck, trimmed with lace.
40c—Of cambric, with round neck, trimmed with torchon lace; cambric ruffle on skirt.

Short Petticoats—
30—Of cambric, with deep ruffle of cambric; hemstitched hem.
50c—Of cambric; trimmed with torchon lace and plaits above.
75c—Of cambric, with deep ruffle of lawn, trimmed with torchon lace and insertion.

LACE CURTAINS

Only Nottingham and Irish Point Curtains enter into this offering. But they're all fresh, perfect goods, all in desirable designs, and all reduced in price. The lots are extremely varied as to grade and styles, though there are no large quantities of any one kind.

For instance, there are 200 pairs of white Nottingham lace curtains, embracing 12 styles. These were priced at $1.65 to $6.75, and now $1.20 to $4.75 a pair.

Seventy-five pairs of ivory Irish point—9 styles—that were $6 to $12, and now $4.25 to $8.50.

About one hundred pairs of white Irish point—14 styles—that were $5.25 to $18, and now $3.65 to $13.

Third floor.

LINENS

You're not asked to pay anywhere near full regular prices for these. This is just an invitation for you who have linen needs, or who may think it wise to purchase supplies for the future, to share in a broad gathering of excellent linen goods, all of which are offered at 'way below the market.

Here is a quantity of bleached double damask table linen. The saving is 50c a yard on this. It is of the celebrated Courtrai flax, and is full 2 yards wide. Was $1.75—that was moderate—now $1.25 a yard.

Some Belgian table cloths, 2x2½ yards, sold at $3.25 each on Saturday. The price to-day is $2.50.

Bleached double damask napkins, at a dollar less a dozen. They're Scotch. Of gengrons size—24x24 in. Regularly $3.75 a dozen. Price, $2.75.

And Towels. Fringed huckaback, 18x36 in., imported to sell at 12½c, but now 10c. Bath towels at 15c, though 20c was very fair. Linen crash toweling, 18 in. wide, at 8c, instead of 10c.

Fourth avenue.

Men's Clothing

"What d'ye lack?" An overcoat, a suit, trousers? Look below. Various lots, small, but of high order, are greatly reduced in price. Satisfactory selection in any of the lines at very substantial savings.

Men's Overcoats. The heavier sorts of rough-faced cheviots, in Oxford gray and brown, and of Kerseys in blue and black. Some that were good values at $18, and others that were very reasonably priced up to $25. Choice at $15. Some stylish Raglans in the lot.

Cutaway Frock Suits. About 100 of these in black cheviot and Thibet. Qualities for which you'd willingly pay $12 to $20. The price now is but $10.

Cutaway Frock Coats and Vests of fine black Thibet and diagonal that sold at prices up to $22.50. Now $10.

500 men's pure Worsted Trousers, in neat stripes; regularly $7.50. Reduced to $5.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

All Around the Store

Girls' Skirts Greatly Reduced. They are walking skirts of double-faced cheviot, in popular shades of brown, blue and Oxford; well tailored and extremely stylish. Many of them have stitched flounce and bottom. They're easily worth $7.50 to $12, but now priced at $5.

Furs. Here's a timely hint of double scarfs of Sable Fox, with two large brush tails, at $15—they were reasonably marked $20 but a little while ago.

The Anti-Rattling Window Strips. Simple contrivances of waterproof paper and cotton batting, upon which the window shuts tightly. They prevent rattling, and exclude dust, draughts and cold air. A ten-cent package contains enough for four windows.

Vanilla Marshmallows. Tempting sweetmeats, regularly priced at 25c a pound, are reduced for a few days to 18c a pound.

Children's White Dresses. At 45c, of nainsook, 2 styles, one with yoke of fine plaits, back and front; another with yoke of hemstitched plaits; neck and sleeves trimmed with embroidery. Sizes 6 months to 2 years. At 70c, of nainsook, with yoke of hemstitched plaits, one embroidery insertion, finished with neat embroidery ruffle. Sizes 6 months to 2 years.

Black Kidskin Slippers, with straps and beaded toes, are offered at $2 a pair. At this price, they are the best value we have ever given in party slippers.

Ribbon Remnants. The Basement holds a rich assortment of ribbon remnants—all at a third below their regular prices. There is good picking there for many of your ribbon needs.

Black Cheviot Trousers. They're all wool, and belonged to suits of which the coats and vests have been sold. Hence their low price—$3.50 for $5 and $6 values.

Men's Winter Overcoats. Although the real winter weather is still all before us, down go prices on these winter overcoats. The $20 and $25 values, and splendid values, too, at those prices, are now $15 each.

Silk Blankets. About 150 of them, handsome Roman patterns and colored stripes, but somewhat mussed, are offered at $1.25 each, instead of $2. They make excellent couch covers and slumber robes.

Men's Pure Linen Handkerchiefs, unlaundered, with hand-embroidered initial, are 12½c each—a little price for such thoroughly reliable goods. Women's handkerchiefs, unlaundered, of pure linen, with initial, are $1 a dozen.

The "J. W. Special" Huckaback Towel, at 25c, is the best towel for the money that we know of. All white, with hemmed ends and damask borders. If we had to buy these towels at present market prices, we should have to sell them at 35c each.

The Angelus Piano-Player. Have you visited the Piano Store to hear it play? Whatever your musical tastes, the Angelus will satisfy them for you—it plays everything, and plays it musically, artistically.

Men's Pajamas. The product of a maker who has no superior. They are large and well-proportioned, don't bind anywhere, have the new, comfortable military collar, and open on one side. They are a combination of silk, fine wool, and mercerized cotton, in attractive plaids, stripes and checks. $3.50 a suit.

Silver Desk Furnishings. Many pretty trifles for the desk are here, at little prices for sterling silver articles. Flat silver-banded erasers and quill penholders are $1 each, pencil erasers, stamp moisteners, sealing-wax holders, book marks and letter openers, seals and roller-blotters, are 50c each. Silver pencils are 25c, 50c and 75c each.

Renaissance Center Pieces, 18 and 20 in., round or square, in numerous attractive designs, are priced at 75c for qualities that are usually sold at $1.50.

Japanese Draught Screens, four-fold, 5½ feet high, are offered at prices which should make them quickly disappear. Screens that were $9 to $25, are now $5 to $15. Also a lot of Fire Screens, which were moderately priced at $1.75 to $2.50, are now marked half—75c to $1.25. Some have slight defects.

SMALLER COMMISSION BILLS INTRODUCED

Measures Were Offered at Albany Last Night.

Prison Commission, State Board of Charities, and Commissioner of Jurors Are Affected.

ALBANY, Jan. 14.—Contrary to expectation the bills creating smaller commissions to take the place of the State Commission of Prisons, the State Board of Charities, and repealing the Commissioner of Jurors act, were introduced to-night. The bill for a smaller commission for the Charities Board provides:

"The State Board of Charities shall consist of three members, to be appointed by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Two of such members shall be appointed from the Commissioners of the Land Office and the other Constitutional State officers, except judicial and military, who are appointed by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and may be removed by the Governor at his pleasure. The third member of such board shall be appointed for a term to expire on the 31st day of December, 1903; a successor to such member thereafter appointed shall hold his office for a term of three years, beginning on the 1st day of January of the year in which he is appointed. Such member shall not at the time of entering upon the duties of his office, or while remaining therein, be a trustee, manager, director, or other administrative officer of an institution, subject to the visitation and inspection of the board."

Within twenty days after the amendment of this section takes effect the Governor shall apoint a State Board of Charities as herein provided, and upon the appointment and qualification of the members of such board, the terms of the members of such Board of Charities then in office shall expire. The third member of such board, appointed as prescribed, shall be the President of such board and shall devote his entire time to the performance of his official duties. He is to have a salary of $2,500 per annum.

The bill for a new State Prison Commission is drafted in a similar manner. There are to be three Commissioners in place of the present eight. They are to be appointed by the Governor, and two of them are to be present State officers and members of the Land Board or other Constitutional offices. The other member is to be an outsider appointed for three years, with a salary of $2,500 and expenses. There is to be a Secretary at a salary of $3,000, with other employes similar to the present commission.

The bills seek to extend the policy expressed in the bill for the abolition of the Forest, Fish, and Game Commission and the Forestry Preserve Board; to have State Commissions composed of one appointive officer and two Constitutional State officers.

The bill abolishing the Commissioner of Jurors in New York City is introduced because of the allegations that the Appellate Division of the First Department is responsible for the appointment of the officials charged with the administration of this law, and have placed in charge one Commissioner at a salary of $6,000, a Deputy at $3,000, three clerks at $1,500 per year each, three at $1,000 per year, and one at $750, a total of $17,250. In addition to these officials this division also maintains its staff of employes upon the same liberal basis. New York City pays the expenses of the Jury Commission, but this profligacy in no one case is an indication that no greater care is exercised where the expenses are borne by the State.

Gov. Odell suggested that in making appropriations for the judiciary a saving could be effected without a loss of dignity or power to the various branches resulting therefrom, because the Commissioner is seldom called upon to furnish a jury and is a hindrance rather than a benefit to the jury system.

THE ANNUAL APPROPRIATION.

Bill Introduced Carries $15,492,678.97, a Decrease of $521,791—Less Money for Lunacy Department.

ALBANY, Jan. 14.—Assemblyman J. P. Allds, at the head of the Ways and Means Committee, broke the record to-night by putting in the Appropriation bill for the year commencing Oct. 1, 1901. It carries a total fixed appropriation for the year of $15,492,678.97, which will enter into this year's tax rate as against the sum of $16,014,469.97 last year, or a reduction of $521,791.

The amounts appropriated to the respective departments are the amounts which in the candid judgment of the committee will properly care for each of the respective departments. The aggregate of all the increases in the various departments is about $100,000, made necessary by the increased number of inhabitants at the Soldiers' Home, at the epileptic colony, on the opening of the Women's Reformatory at Bedford, together with some other slight increases. But the item of maintenance at these public institutions, because of the increase in the number of inhabitants, accounts for over $90,000 of this increase.

The decreased appropriations amount to a little over $600,000, occurring chiefly in the executive department, the office of the Tax Commissioners, the support of the deaf and dumb, in the Excise Department, with minor decreases in other departments. The Superintendent of Public Works makes an exceptional decrease of over $70,000.

The chief decrease is in the amount appropriated for the running of the lunacy department. An inspection of the Controller's books shows that annually there has been carried under the provisions of the statute the net balance, after providing for the proper maintenance of the inmates each year, a sum of over $300,000 to the buildings account. It is, therefore, believed that ample provision can be made for the increased number of inmates, maintaining them in exactly the same manner as they are at present maintained, and yet permit of the reduction of $340,000 in the maintenance account.

An investigation by the Executive shows that the number of employes, exclusive of the regular officials of the department and of all the salaried positions, is one employe to each three patients. By law, in certain other public institutions only one employe, including the executive officers, can be employed to each sixteen inhabitants of the institution. It would, therefore, seem that if provision were made for one employe or attendant to each eight inmates of the institution, being double that which is allowed under the statute in certain other of the State institutions, ample attendants and servants would have been provided for in the appropriation bill based upon this basis, allowing for the required increase of insane patients. It would seem that the item for salaries and wages of employes in the State hospitals might reasonably be reduced by $250,000 and yet provide for ample and proper care.

The balance of the reduction made for the support of the Lunacy Commission are reductions in office expenses, which have been suggested by the commission itself.

It be committed believe that they have submitted to the Legislature a bill which duly and properly, and yet at the same time economically, provides for the regular fixed charges of the State, and so far as it is possible at this time. This print of the bill carries out the suggestions made by the Executive. It is the expectation that when the Legislature shall have acted upon the other suggestions of the Governor, it will be necessary to reform the bill with reference to some items with the hope of a further saving of over $50,000.

Wants 75-Cent Gas in New York.

ALBANY, Jan. 14.—In the Senate to-night Senator Trainor introduced a bill providing that in New York City no corporation or person shall demand or receive for illuminating gas a sum to exceed 75 cents per 1,000 cubic feet. The illuminating gas furnished must have an illuminating power to not less than twenty-four sperm candles, six to the pound. Any violation is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of $250.

Bill to Regulate Telephone Service.

ALBANY, Jan. 14.—A bill to regulate the price of telephone service in the cities of the State was introduced in the Senate to-night by Mr. Trainor. The bill provides that in cities of 1,000,000 population or over the price per annum shall not exceed $100. In cities of 500,000 or less than 1,000,000, $75; over 100,600, less than 500,000, $48; over 20,000, less than 100,000, $36; over 8,000, less than 20,000, $30; less than 8,000, $27. The bill also provides that not more than 10 cents be charged for using telephones for the first five minutes and not more than 5 cents for each succeeding five minutes. The measure further prohibits any additional charges whatsoever.

WILL OPPOSE THE POLICE BILL.

Senator McCarren Objects to the Power It Confers Upon the Governor.

Senator Patrick H. McCarren of Brooklyn, who had been confined to his home for ten days with the grip, was able yesterday to visit the auction room in Willoughby Street, where he talked with other local Democratic leaders. Mr. McCarren will today go to Atlantic City to spend two weeks. He expects to be in Albany when the Police bill comes up, and intends to oppose the measure, because of the arbitrary power given to the Governor to remove the Commissioner without the formality of charges being preferred. The Senator characterized this feature of the bill as outrageous.

"I am in favor of a single-headed Police Commission," he said. "To my mind, a bi-partisan or non-partisan board is ridiculous. Why, you might just as well have four Generals in command in the field or four Colonels at the head of a regiment. I believe in concentrating power so that you can fix responsibility, but I think it manifestly unfair to give the Governor any such power. You see how it can be abused as in the case of Col. Gardiner.

"The work of the Police Department, however, is enormous, and should be divided. The Commissioner, for instance, should not be required to leave his office. He could transact all business from there, and should appoint a board, that might comprise a Deputy Chief, an Inspector, and a Captain, to try the cases of delinquent policemen. The Commissioner should be authorized to delegate some of his powers to subordinates, but to hold them to a strict account for their actions."

TO CHANGE KIDNAPPING BILL.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 14.—Assemblyman James K. Apgar, who introduced the first bill in the House to punish kidnapping, has found that his bill has a serious defect, and he is now preparing an amendment to it. Mr. Apgar's bill made the punishment for kidnapping imprisonment for life. Since he introduced the bill it has been pointed out to Mr. Apgar that under his bill, if it became a law, a mother who kidnapped her own child from its father because of the father's cruelty could be sent to the penitentiary for life.

The amendment which Mr. Apgar is drawing up to his bill will provide that the punishment for kidnapping may be a life sentence in the penitentiary at the discretion of the Court when the kidnapping was for injury or for the purpose of ransom.

BILL FOR GOOD ROADS.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 14.—Assemblyman John L. Smith of Lewis County is preparing a Good Roads bill upon new lines. Mr. Smith's plan is to provide each county with a road improvement plant of its own, the State to stand half the expense. He figures that a complete plant could be purchased for $2,500 or less. Under Mr. Smith's plan any county ambitious to have better roads, upon putting up $1,250 can call upon the State for $1,250 more. Mr. Smith says stone for use in the improvement of roads can be found in nearly every county.

Site of Consumptive Hospital.

ALBANY, Jan. 14.—The fight over the location of the proposed consumptive hospital, which it was believed was settled last week by the selection of Raybrook, was opened in the Legislature to-night by the introduction of a bill compelling the location of the hospital at Dannemora, on State lands, the buildings to be erected by convict labor under direction of the State Superintendent of Prisons. There is promise of a lively contest over the measure.

MISCELLANEOUS BILLS.

ALBANY, Jan. 14.—Among the bills introduced in the Senate to-night were the following:

By Mr. FULLER—Extending to Queens, Suffolk, Kings, and Nassau the appointment of special attorneys to assist the County Treasurers in the collection of collateral inheritance tax. Each county is to have one attorney appointed by the State Controller at an annual salary of $7,500 each.

By Mr. MALBY—Generally amending the Penal Code relating to crimes against the elective franchise by providing that removal of ballots from polling places before the close of the polls, refusal to receive ballots intended for the electors, refusal to deliver ballots to electors, permitting electioneering within unlawful bounds, failure to preserve order, entering a booth with an elector unless authorized by law, shall be subject to the code punishment. The bill also defines false registration in detail, and also penalizes as a felony the concealment of a falsely registered person.

By Mr. AMBLER—Giving the City of Hudson power to raise $15,000 instead of $12,000 for municipal purposes. He asked that it be ordered to third reading, with reference, but Senator Grady objected.

By Mr. TRAINOR—Amending Chapter 24 of the general laws, entitled the tax law, and thereby placing all trust companies under exactly the same laws of the State as banking institutions, taxing them the same as banks. The bill simply inserts in those sections of the law relating to the taxing of banks "or trust company."

By Mr. STEWART—Changing the name of the State Reformatory at Elmira to New York State Reformatory; also amending law so that the Superintendent may appoint all other officers, with the advice and consent of the State Board of Managers.

By Mr. HENNESSY—Authorizing New York City's Controller to cancel taxes levied on Peabody Home for Aged and Indigent Women in New York.

By Mr. SLATER—Authorizing the City of New York to audit and allow Controller of the City of New York to pay for services rendered, G. W. Ryer, Philip Espenscheid, and W. J. Connolly in office of Commissioner of Jurors.

In the Assembly the following were introduced:

By Mr. BELL—A bill said to be aimed at faith cure and fetish doctors, amending the general health law by defining those persons as unlawful practitioners of medicine who shall prescribe remedies or perform surgical operations as regularly authorized physicians without having passed an examination as such.

By Mr. DAVIS—Amending the transfer tax law so as to provide that a legacy devised to a museum of art shall not be taxable.

By Mr. SCANLON—Providing for transfer tickets on the Manhattan Railway, the Third Avenue Railroad, and allied lines in the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx.

By Mr. HONECK—Providing for half-rate fares on elevated railway trains in New York City for school children.

By Mr. SCANLON—Appropriating $2,000,000 for the payment of New York State Volunteers in the late Spanish-American war.

By Mr. BROOKS—Permitting the sale of liquor day and night at Buffalo during the Pan-American Exposition, except between the hours of 12 o'clock midnight on Saturdays and 1 P. M. Sundays.

By Mr. COTTON—Exempting from taxation the property of medical societies in New York City and Buffalo.

By Mr. SCANLON—Providing that an Alderman shall be elected from the Thirty-fourth Assembly District, located north of the Harlem River, in the Bronx, and an Alderman from the Thirty-fourth Assembly District, located south of the Harlem River.

By Mr. O'CONNELL—Amending the registration law so that a naturalized elector, in giving his nativity, shall refer to the place of his birth as it existed at the time of his birth, regardless of present political boundaries. Mr. O'Connell says that the amendment is necessary because of the refusal of election officers in his district to write the birthplace of Bohemians as such, insisting on designating them as Austrians.

By Mr. COOK—To prohibit pound and trap net fishing on Lakes Erie and Ontario. The bill further amends the Fish and Game law by providing that sturgeon under three feet in length shall be returned to the water when caught.

LEGISLATIVE NOTES.

Assemblyman Cook to-day introduced a bill to prohibit pound and trap net fishing on Lakes Erie and Ontario. The bill further amends the Fish and Game law by providing that sturgeon under three feet in length shall be returned to the water when caught.

Assemblyman Morgan Bryan is expected to introduce a bill in the House amending the Constitution so as to provide for a two-year term instead of one for Assemblymen. A similar measure was introduced by Assemblyman Patton of Erie last Winter, but failed to pass.

The lawyers engaged to take the place of the Statutory Revision Commission have completed rough drafts of the bills, copies of which were transmitted to the Governor yesterday. The Governor will examine them carefully, but it will probably be several days before they are ready for introduction in the Legislature.

In the Senate Mr. Trainor introduced a bill which amends Chapter 24 of the general laws, entitled the tax law, and thereby places all trust companies under exactly the same laws of the State as banking institutions, taxing them the same as banks. The bill simply inserts in those sections of the law relating to the taxing of banks "or trust company."

A bill providing for the Sunday closing of meat markets has been drawn up in Syracuse, and will be introduced in the Assembly this week. At Utica a conference was held between representatives of the butchers and of market men, and both organizations agreed to use their best efforts to secure the enactment of the measure.

Assemblyman O'Connell introduced a bill amending the registration law so that a naturalized elector, in giving his nativity, shall refer to the place of his birth as it existed at the time of his birth, regardless of present political boundaries. Mr. O'Connell says that the amendment is necessary because of the refusal of election officers in his district to write the birthplace of Bohemians as such, insisting on designating them as Austrians.

M'LAUGHLIN CALLS RECORD OFFICE A FRAUD

Says Two Boys Could Do Work that Costs $100,000 a Year.

Brooklyn Democratic Leader Opposed to Bill Doing Away with the Fee System in Kings County.

Ex-Register Hugh McLaughlin, the Brooklyn Democratic leader, is opposed to the idea of making the offices of Sheriff, County Clerk, and Register of Kings County salaried positions. Yesterday afternoon Mr. McLaughlin, in discussing the matter, attacked the bills now in the Legislature, which aim to do away with the fee system in Kings County. He declared that the claim that the proposed change will save money to the county will not be realized, and that instead there will be a deficiency to be made up.

"That has been the experience in New York County and other places where the salary system has been tried," said Mr. McLaughlin. "You can't get as much work out of a man holding a salaried place under the city as you can when he is working for an individual. A man working for the city wants twice as large a salary, and will do about one-quarter as much work. A salaried officer, naturally, will not be so careful to collect fees for the city as for himself.

"It is safe to predict that if these bills become law, instead of $10,000 or $25,000 being turned over to the city there will be a deficiency of twice that amount. Some years ago, when I was Register, there was a young man working as a writer in the office. At first he was paid by the folio, and he not only did enough work to earn $3 or $4 a day, but also found time in the afternoon to play in baseball matches with a team he belonged to. After a time a salary was given to him for the same work. The change that came over that man was marvelous. The only quick move he made after that was to scramble for the head of the line on pay day.

"They talk about reform. Why, there is no bigger fraud anywhere than that office even in the Hall of Records. They call it the Records Office. I don't say that those people are guilty of defrauding the city, but they are certainly accessories before the fact. I think I know something about that work, and I can assure you that there is nothing about it that can't be done by two boys. Yet it costs the city $100,000 a year."

The Commissioner of Record's Office, which Mr. McLaughlin referred to, was created by the Legislature in 1899, George E. Waldo, a Republican, being the Commissioner. The duties of the office consist of recopying records, indexing, re-indexing, and collating. The Commissioner receives a salary of $5,000 a year and has a big staff of assistants.

Mr. McLaughlin will leave next Saturday on his annual trip to Florida. He will be accompanied by his wife and daughters and a party of friends. Mr. McLaughlin, as usual, will go to the Winter home of Thomas F. Nevins, on the Indian River, and will return about April 1.

W. A. CLARK FOR THE SENATE.

Receives the Nomination for the Long Term at Fusion Caucus in Montana.

Special to The New York Times.

HELENA, Mont., Jan. 14.—W. A. Clark, the Butte millionaire copper king and banker, was nominated for Senator by the Fusion caucus to-night to succeed Thomas H. Carter for the six-year term beginning March 4 next. There were thirty-seven members present, and not a dissenting vote was cast.

No action was taken on the four-year term. It takes forty-eight votes to elect, but, as there were several absentees of the Democratic faith, Clark's election tomorrow seems assured.

WOULD "DIVORCE" BROOKLYN.

Sentiment for Separate City Approved by Kings County Republicans.

At the meeting of the Republican Executive Committee of Kings County, held last night in Decoria Hall, in Gates Avenue, there was adopted a resolution recommending that the offices of Commissioner of Jurors and Special Commissioner of Jurors in Brooklyn be abolished by legislation and that the two departments be consolidated under one head. Another resolution declared that the educational chapter of the report of the Charter Revision Commission should be opposed in the Legislature. It was decided to appoint a committee to examine this report and make a report thereon at the next meeting.

These recommendations of the Executive Committee were adopted by the General Committee, when it met later in the evening. Capt. James made a speech before he General Committee. He said that Brooklyn had lost much through consolidation, both as regarded educational and other matters, and that the conditions now prevailing in regard to education in the borough were very unsatisfactory.

"A bit of legislation that Brooklyn needs is the enactment of a law making it a separate city again," he said. "The best thing that could happen to us would be the severance of our connection with the Borough of Manhattan through legislation—the obtaining of a divorce, as it were."

All those present at the meeting applauded this statement loudly, but there was no motion about the question, and no action was taken.

MATTHEW ALLEN, JR., FOUND.

Horse Trainer's Son Discovered in Dazed Condition in New Jersey.

Matthew Allen, Jr., the sixteen-year-old son of Matthew Allen, a wealthy horse trainer of Westchester, who disappeared from his home last Wednesday, was found Sunday afternoon by Detective Dillon wandering about Hudson Heights, N. J., in a dazed condition. Overstudy is believed to have been the cause of the boy's mind becoming impaired. He was at the head of his class in St. John's College at Fordham, and was constantly poring over his books. It was thought at first that he had been kidnapped for ransom, but as no communication making any demands were received by the family Mr. Allen on Saturday despaired of ever seeing his son alive again.

When search was begun Allen was traced to Fort Lee, N. J. On Thursday afternoon he was seen in West New York by a man named Griffen Allord, a lumber merchant, who had read of the boy's disappearance and thought he recognized him from the description given. The boy acted as though he was not in his right mind, and Allord decided to inform the police, but did not do so until Sunday, when he communicated with the Westchester Police Station.

Detective Dillon was at once put on the case, and he traced the boy from West New York to Hudson Heights. Here, after searching for several hours, he finally met Allen wandering aimlessly about the Streets. He had apparently been without food for some time. Fearing the boy would cause a scene in the street and that he would have trouble in getting him out of the State, Dillon engaged the youth in conversation and finally persuaded him to take the Weehawken ferry for New York. On reaching Westchester the boy's reason seemed to partly return to him, and he recognized his surroundings.

When Allen left home he wore a white shirt and the uniform of St. John's College, but when found he had on a blue jumper instead of the white shirt and an old derby instead of the military cap. A plain band gold ring set with a ruby which he wore had also disappeared. The boy could give no accurate account of his wanderings up to last night, when a specialist was called in, as his condition did not seem to improve.

The stories about Allen having been drugged and robbed were denied.

"GRIP" RECEIVES A CHECK.

Fewer Cases at Bellevue, Which Now Has More Room for General Patients.

There were indications at Bellevue Hospital yesterday morning that the grip had been checked. Cases were fewer there than usual, and the hospital had room for general patients for the first time in some days.

Bellevue had 835 patients in the institution yesterday morning, with nominally 116 vacant beds. There were forty patients in the contagious diseases or erysipelas wards, which left sixty-six beds vacant.

The dispensary was not as crowded as usual, which was taken as a good indication that grip had lessened.

RAILROAD FIGURES FOR 1900.

Steam Roads Earned $27,060,056 More Than in 1899—Great Increase in New York Street Car Traffic.

ALBANY, Jan. 14.—The State Board of Railroad Commissioners in their annual report show an exceedingly prosperous condition for the railroads operating in this State. The steam surface roads earned in the gross $27,060,056 more in 1900 than in 1899, and their net earnings were $10,242,410 more than in 1899. The companies paid in taxes $983,627.72 more than in 1899; in interest $538,653.02 more than in 1899, and in dividends $1,208,668.77 more than in 1899. Capital stock increased $22,144,400 over that of 1899; funded debt increased $3,584,498.50 over that for 1899.

The percentage of dividends to capital stock was 2.52, as compared with 2.43 in 1899. The average freight earnings per ton per mile increased .013 cents. The average freight expenses per ton per mile decreased .007 cents.

The total number of accidents on the lines of steam surface railroads was 671 killed and 1,374 injured, an increase from 1899 of 33 in killed and 48 injured. The number of passengers carried was 73,846,114, and one passenger was killed for every 9,230,764 carried. The physical conditions of all the steam roads in the State have been greatly bettered.

The percentage of dividends to capital stock of street surface railroad companies for the year ending June 30, 1900, was 3.77; in 1899 it was 4.67. The number of passengers carried on all the street surface railroads of the State, including the few remaining horse railroads and the elevated roads in Brooklyn, was 1,801,974,097, an increase over 1899 of 122,684,693. The number carried in the boroughs of the Bronx and Manhattan, including transfers, was 567,144,099, an increase over 1899 of 57,829,283. The number carried in the Borough of Brooklyn, including transfers, and including those carried by the elevated railroads in Brooklyn, was 323,229,639, an increase over 1899 of 45,584,744.

The total number of passengers carried by the Manhattan Railway was 184,164,110, an increase of 9,839,535 as compared with 1899. The earnings and operating statistics of the Brooklyn elevated railroads are included in the report to this Board made by the Brooklyn Heights Railroad Company.

Fifteen passengers were injured and four employes killed on the Manhattan Elevated Road, while 148 people were killed and 650 injured on the street surface roads.

The average number of persons employed on all of the street surface railroads of the State, including the elevated railroads in Brooklyn, was 29,075, and the aggregate amount of salaries and wages paid them was $16,968,907.05. The companies owned or operated 5,098 eleotric and cable box cars, 3,666 electric and cable open cars, 23 air motor box cars, 22 electric mail cars, 626 electric and cable freight, express, and service cars. There were 2,437 other cars in operation.

The board does not recommend any legislation. The report, generalizing, says: "The increased earnings are not alone due to increased business, but are also due to higher freight rates charged by the companies. This increase shows that prosperity has enabled the companies to obtain benefits from increased rates as well as from increased business. Whether in less prosperous times these increased rates can, will, or should be obtained, is a matter for the future.

"The tendency toward consolidation of interests in railroad properties continues. This tendency, extending as it does over the country, may render of little importance the legalization by Congress of 'pooling.' It is notable that for several years past complaints as to freight rates have been comparatively infrequent, and usually have involved very small matters."

NEWS OF THE RAILROADS.

New York Central's Position Regarding the Grade-Crossing Bill.

Samuel E. Williamson, General Counsel to the New York Central Railroad, explained yesterday the position of that road regarding the grade-crossing bill which was introduced in the Legislature at Albany last week by Assemblyman Scanlon, and which provides for a change of the railroad line between King's Bridge and Spuyten Duyvil.

"The bill was introduced," said Mr. Williamson, "entirely without our knowledge. The improvements toward which its efforts are directed have been suggested by the people of King's Bridge, and overtures in this direction do not come from us. The matter stands as follows: The people of that neighborhood over a year ago petitioned us for an abolition of the grade crossings on our line between King's Bridge and Spuyten Duyvil, of which there are eight, because of the danger to the residents of that section.

"It is true our grade crossings are all protected by gates and keepers, yet there is a loss of life occasioned by them each year. We informed the petitioners that we would consent to any fair arrangement for a change which they could propose, and they then introduced a bill last year, which, however, was vetoed by the Mayor. The proposal is for the city to give us a new right of way along the ship canal in exchange for the old one, which we are to abandon. The old right of way is more valuable than the new one will be, because it can be used for building lots and other purposes.

"The engineers of the city, I believe, have figured on the cost, and they say that it will cost the city less to acquire for the road the new right of way in exchange for the old one than its share would be in the elimination of the present grade crossings, which must be made some day. If, by the way, these changes should be made to-day, they would most materially interfere with the present plans of the Rapid Transit Commission, and also with the extensions of street railway lines.

"In consideration of the city's aid in acquiring the right of way, our road will undertake the very expensive task of building a new four-track roadway, which will be particularly expensive, on account of the marshy condition of the ground along the river."

Mr. Williamson said that the principal benefit accruing to the road will be a saving in time of between one and two minutes.

JERSEY CENTRAL IMPROVEMENTS.

Plans the Company Purposes to Carry Out This Year.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey has mapped out an extensive plan for improvements to be made along its lines during the year 1901. One of the most important of these, which has already been contracted for, is the establishment of an electric automatic block signal system on its entire line between Bound Brook and White Haven. This line is about 112 miles long, but as it has a double track, the real mileage of the new block system will be about 225. When this improvement is completed, the Jersey Central will operate the longest and most complete electric automatic block signal system in this country.

Another large undertaking will be the elimination of many grade crossings in Newark and in Bayonne. For the work in the latter town the contracts have been let, while the contracts for the improvements in Newark will be let shortly. The work on the new shops at Elizabethport is also to be pushed rapidly ahead.

Contracts have been let for large additions to the equipment and rolling stock of the road, which are to be delivered during the present year. These additions include 1,000 box cars, 1,000 steel coal cars, 200 gondola cars, 15 passenger coaches, 8 switching engines, 5 combination and 5 baggage cars, and 2 ferryboats.

THE JERSEY CENTRAL DEAL.

Terms by Which J. P. Morgan & Co. Secured a Controlling Interest.

J. R. Maxwell, President of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, yesterday announced the terms by which J. P. Morgan & Co. secured a controlling interest in the property for the benefit of the Reading Company. The announcement was made in the following circular, which was sent to all the minority stockholders:

The holders of more than a majority of the stock of this company have sold, through Mr. George F. Baker, to Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co., a controlling interest in the company at the price of $160 per share, deliverable and payable at the purchasers' option, within four months from Jan. 4, 1901, with interest from that date at 4 per cent. per annum, the dividends meanwhile accruing to the purchasers. The sellers desire to give opportunity to all owners of stock to participate in this sale on equal terms, and the privilege is accordingly extended you to contribute one-half of your holdings.

It appears from this circular that the Reading Company will not be in a position of actual control for some time as yet. Rumors of impending changes among the officials of the Jersey Central are all without foundation.

LINCOLN BIRTHDAY ADDRESS.

Henry Watterson to be Chief Speaker at Carnegie Hall Feb. 11.

Gen. O. O. Howard is sending out announcements of the Lincoln's Birthday celebration, to be held in Carnegie Hall on the evening of Feb. 11. Mark Twain is to introduce the speakers, and the chief address will be delivered by Henry Watterson of Louisville, his subject being the life of President Lincoln. The address has been pronounced by Robert T. Lincoln to be the best sketch of his father that he has ever read.

Lieut. Charles Roberts of the New York Commandery of the Loyal Legion will render a recitation on Gettysburg. There will be music in choruses, solos, and instrumental selections, and the proceeds of the celebration are to be used for the Lincoln Memorial University of Cumberland Gap, Tenn.

To meet the increased demand for seats, tickets have been placed on sale at the office of the Musical Art Society, 388 Fifth Avenue.

Montefiore Home Entertainment.

The Young Ladies' and Gentlemen's League of Montefiore Home entertained the patients at the home on Sunday with a society vaudeville under the direction of Dr. Levy of the Board of Directors of the league. Those who took part in the entertainment were Silas Musliner, Joseph Musliner, Dr. L. M. Sohn, Master Leo Schwarz, Master Morton Steinhardt, Sidney Samuels, Melville Regensberger, and Miss Dorothy E. Meyers. The children at the home concluded with songs and recitations, led by Charles Harris.

Firemen's Association Benefits.

The Firemen's Mutual Benevolent Association of Greater New York, of which Capt. James D. Clifford is President, has increased its death benefit from $300 to $500.

HAWAIIAN CASE IN THE SUPREME COURT

Islands Cannot Be Called Foreign, Counsel Contends.

Says Their Status Differs from that of Porto Rico — Senator Lindsay Closes His Argument.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—In the United States Supreme Court to-day, after Senator Lindsay closed his argument in the case of Huus vs. The New York and Porto Rico Steamship Company, involving the question of pilotage, W. Wickham Smith argued for the appellants in the case of George N. Crossman et al. vs. the United States. This is the only Hawaiian case on the list, and covers the entry of goods from Hawaii, consisting of whisky, brandy, and jam, at the Custom House at New York April 26, 1900. Duty was assessed under the provisions of the Dingley law.

The importers protested against collection of duty on the ground that the Hawaiian Islands were a part of the United States; that the provision of the annexation resolution which continued the customs laws of the Republic of Hawaii in force until Congress should legislate, was unconstitutional. Appeal was taken to the Board of General Appraisers, to the United States Circuit Court, and to the Supreme Court. Mr. Smith laid down the following propositions, upon which he said his clients rely:

1. At the time of the importation of these goods the Hawaiian Islands having been by the action of Congress approved by the President, annexed as part of the territory of the United States, were not a foreign country within any sense of that term, and certainly not within the sense of that term as used in the enacting clause of the Dingley Tariff act.

2. The action of Congress in providing in the joint resolution of annexation that the customs relations of the Hawaiian Islands with the United States and with other countries should remain unchanged until Congress should further legislate on the subject was in violation of the provision of the Constitution that "all duties, imposts, and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States."

3. As such joint resolution provided for the collection at the ports of the Hawaiian Islands of duties upon articles sent thither from other ports of the United States, this was, in effect, a violation of the provision of Section 9 of the Constitution that "no tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any State."

QUESTION INVOLVED.

Counsel argued that this case was not like others before the court recently, for the reason that there was no question involved as to the force or effect of a treaty, the Government of the Republic of Hawaii having ceded its sovereignty to the United States, which cession Congress ratified. There is no question of a military government. The language of the annexation act provides that the islands were annexed "as part of the territory of the United States."

Mr. Smith then argued that in the five places where the words United States were used in the Constitution, with one exception, the term includes the States and Territories as well. The exception is that clause providing for the election of Presidential Electors. After considering the application of the naturalization and bankruptcy laws in Territories and States alike, counsel said:

"It would be a strange view of language to hold that the words 'throughout the United States' in Article I, Section 8, were narrower or more limited in their scope than the words 'in the United States' in the Fourteenth Amendment. There is no principle of grammar, logic, law, or common sense on which the words 'throughout the United States' in the uniformity clause with regard to taxation can be restricted to the States, excluding the Territories.

LIMITATIONS UPON CONGRESS.

"A long line of decisions by this court that certain fundamental limitations upon the power of Congress contained in the Constitution are in force in various Territories of the United States are disposed of by those on the other side of this controversy by the statement that the Constitution operates in these Territories because Congress has seen fit to extend it to them by its own act. In other words, they advance the doctrine that the Constitution has no force or operation in any Territory until the United States puts it there, and, of course, this logically implies that it only extends there to the extent to which Congress puts it there, and can remain there only so long as Congress chooses to permit.

"In other words, those who hold that Congress puts the Constitution into the Territories, cannot escape from maintaining that Congress has power at any time to take the Constitution out of the Territories. If the Constitution operates to-day in Arizona, New Mexico, or Oklahoma only because Congress has chosen to extend it to those Territories, it must be within the power of Congress to-morrow to enact that the Constitution shall no longer be operative in any of its parts in these Territories. Indeed, it is a question whether Congress would need even to go through that form. A special subsequent statute repugnant to a prior general statute obviously repeals the latter, (the Cherokee tobacco case, 11 Wall. 616,) and therefore, according to those who are opposed to us in this case, Congress must have a right to-morrow to create an order of nobility in Oklahoma or to pass a bill of attainder in Arizona."

LEGISLATION AS TO HAWAII.

Counsel then said that cases had been cited wherein it was held that countries captured in war or ceded by treaty could be held as foreign until Congress had legislated to define their status. This, he said, would not help the Government in this case, as the islands were not conquered or annexed by treaty, but by legislative action. He said further:

"Upon what authority can they be held, after Congress has by joint resolution annexed them as a part of the territory of the United States, to be a country foreign to the United States? It is true Congress had not so fully and completely legislated with reference to the islands as it might and did do thereafter, but it had certainly legislated enough to make them cease to be foreign. It had not only annexed them as a part of the territory of the United States, but it had provided that the revenue from or proceeds of the public lands thereof might be used for the civil, military, or naval purposes of the United States. It had authorized the President to vest the civil and judicial powers in such persons, to be exercised in such manner as he might direct.

"It had, in effect, repealed so much of the municipal legislation of said islands as was contrary to the Constitution of the United States. It had prohibited Chinese from coming from the islands to the United States, and it had appropriated out of the Treasury of the United States $100,000 to carry out the provisions of the joint resolution. Is it to be said for one minute that all these things were done with reference to a foreign country?

"Let those who maintain the other side of this controversy point out a single instance in the history of the United States, either before the Hawaiian annexation or since, in which Congress has annexed a place as a part of the territory of the United States and yet treated it as a foreign country?"

UNIFORMITY OF TAXES.

Mr. Smith then cited a Treasury decision of April 17, 1900, holding that Porto Rico was not a foreign country within the meaning of the drawback clause of the Dingley law, and asked why Hawaii should have been considered a foreign country at that time. He followed with arguments tending to show that the uniformity clause of the Constitution with reference to indirect taxes is one of the fundamental limitations upon the powers of Congress, and that in consequence the provision of the annexation act, which continued in force the customs regulations of the republic, was a clear violation of the uniformity clause.

From this he went on to argue that in case the islands were considered foreign, any tax collected there upon goods coming from this country would be in effect an export tax, as there would be no differences whether a tax on goods going from a State to the islands were taxed at the point of shipment or at the destination, as the charge would lie from the time the goods were shipped. The decision of the Supreme Court of Hawaii to the effect that the Constitution of the United States had been in force in the islands since Aug. 12, 1898, was cited, and the argument closed thus:

"May Congress in legislating for territory which it has annexed as a part of the territory of the United States disregard the fundamental limitations upon its power written in the organic law to which Congress owes its existence? If it may, the judgment below is correct. If it may not, that judgment cannot stand."

CLOSE OF PORTO RICAN CASE.

Senator Lindsay, in the course of his argument, which he began Friday, said:

"Should it be decided that Porto Rican ports are not foreign ports in the ordinary sense of the word, it would be a violent construction to interpret the language of the statute of the State of New York, passed in 1884, so as to exempt from pilotage vessels from a land then foreign, but since brought under the dominion of the United States. It is a fundamental rule of construction that laws are to be construed as of the time of their enactment.

"And it would not be reasonable to assume that the Legislature of the State proposed to exempt from pilotage vessels belonging to after-acquired and far-distant territory of the United States, even supposing human foresight could have foreseen the subjection of such territory. It is doubtless within the power of Congress to exempt from pilotage vessels bound to or from England or Australia or the Philippine Islands. Likewise the State of New York could exempt such vessels from pilotage or could entirely abrogate compulsory pilotage.

"This, however, is not to be implied from the general language in an act of Congress relating to a subject of an entirely different nature which cannot be reasonably construed to affect the statutes of New York regulating pilotage."

INTENTION OF CONGRESS.

Senator Lindsay then quoted from decisions of the Court to establish his contention that the term "foreign port" could be used in its broadest sense, and that in early acts the trade between the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts was so considered as between foreign ports. Also that the Treasury Department did consider a port foreign unless the clearance of the vessel coming to this country was given by an officer in a customs collection district established by Congress, and exercising his functions under the laws of the United States. San Juan, he argued, was never made a domestic port of the United States, and must be considered a foreign port until Congress includes it in one of the collection districts of the United States. Following this line, he argued that vessels trading between New York and Porto Rican ports were not in the coasting trade.

It was further argued that Congress did not intend to make the trade coasting trade, for trade was discussed as between Porto Rico and the United States, which would not have been the case had it been considered that Porto Rico ports were domestic ports. None of the provisions of the act to govern Porto Rico, Mr. Lindsay argued, controlled or mentioned pilotage, and could be interpreted as affecting the point at issue.

In the course of his argument Senator Lindsay referred to the decision just rendered by the court in the Neely case. He argued that that decision establishes two propositions in support of the Government's contention, which apply to the pilotage case. The first of these was that the Government of the United States may occupy and exercise control over a country over which its sovereignty extends in time of peace without necessarily extending the Constitution of the United States to that country or its people, and the second that the grant of legislative power to Congress includes the power to legislate for any people over which sovereignty is extended.

Senator Lindsay was followed by F. Kingsbury Curtis for the steamship company, who contended that the vessel upon which pilotage was demanded was exempt on the ground that Porto Rican ports had ceased to be foreign, and that by the act of April 12, 1900, the trade between Porto Rico and the United States has been made coastwise.

The court authorized Charles A. Gardiner to file a brief in the pending Porto Rico and Philippine cases in behalf of the Tobacco Growers' Association of New England. The brief sustains the Government's contention that it is entirely competent for the United States to lay a tariff on commerce between the United States and their insular possessions.

THE OLEOMARGARINE BILL.

Secretary Gage Tells Senate Committee the Measure Would Be Useless as a Revenue Producer.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Secretary Gage was before the Senate Committee on Agriculture to-day to answer inquiries concerning the Oleomargarine bill. He said the bill as a revenue producer was useless and was not needed. If it was not a revenue bill it was a misnomer and objectionable on that ground. He said the revenue under the present law was well collected, although there were some losses.

Mr. Gage answered a number of questions about the details of "oleo" collections, prosecutions, &c. He explained that many of the Inspectors were not experts and could not detect oleomargarine without analysis. He also said that there was not adequate force to see that the oleomargarine law was carried out in every particular. He pointed out that there were 4,000 dealers in Chicago, and that it would be impossible to watch them all. The collection of the revenue was the main object of the department. Mr. Gage spoke of the Wadsworth bill in the House as offering an almost effective method of stopping the sale of oleomargarine fraudulently. He said that evasion under the present law is much easier than it would be if the package were stamped with the word "Oleomargarine."

POSTAL COMMISSION'S REPORT.

Unanimously In Favor of Excluding Various Classes of Matter from Second-Class Rate.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—The Postal Commission of the House and Senate, which has been investigating postal matters for the last two years, made its report to-day. The commission unanimously reports in favor of excluding from the second-class mail rate, first, books, whether bound or unbound; second, newspapers and periodicals unsold, sent by a news agent to another news agent or returned to the publisher, and, third, sample copies of newspapers above a certain small fixed proportion of the circulation. The commission also unanimously reports against the continuance of the system of transmitting mails in the pneumatic tubes under present conditions. It unanimously reports that neither a change in letter postage nor the establishment of a system of parcels post is practicable under existing conditions of revenue and expenditure, even if otherwise desirable, upon which no opinion is expressed.

Upon the question of railway mail pay there are five reports, as follows:

First—A report signed by Senators Wolcott (Rep., Col.,) and Allison, (Rep., Iowa,) which declares that the present rate of railway mail pay is not excessive and ought not to be changed except by the discontinuance of the appropriations for special facilities which, it declares, should be discontinued.

Second—A report signed by Mr. Loud (Rep., Cal.,) concurring with the last-named report, except that it recommends the adoption of railway mail payments in accordance with space occupied, instead of by the methods now prescribed by law.

Third—A report signed by Mr. Moody, (Dem., Mass.,) which declares that upon the evidence the railway mail pay is not excessive, but recommends further investigation as to the prevailing methods of loading postal cars and inquiry into the question whether the methods may not be corrected so as to result in a saving without injury to the service. In this report Mr. Catchings (Dem., Miss.,) concurs.

Fourth—A report signed by Senator Martin (Dem., Va.,) and Mr. Catchings dissenting from the views of the other members of the commission with regard to the discontinuance of appropriations for special facilities.

Fifth—A report signed by Mr. Fleming, (Dem., Ga.,) in which he states that he thinks there should be some reduction in the present rate of railway mail pay, either by a 5 per cent. reduction generally, and a still further reduction on the routes where the volume of traffic is greatest, or, in case these suggestions are not adopted, by a change in the special payment for postal cars. Mr. Fleming also holds that the Government should pay for the transportation of Post Office officials when traveling as passengers in passenger cars. Free transportation for mail men should, he holds, be confined to mail cars.

Senator Chandler (Rep., N. H.,) does not join in any report, owing to his absence from Washington.

To Entertain Gov. Odell.

Three hundred members of the society will greet the Governor. The toast list includes Justices Harlan and Brewer of the United States Supreme Court, Senator Penrose, ex-Senator Matthew S. Quay, J. R. Burton, Republican caucus nominee for Senator from Kansas; Senator Rawling, John S. Wise, Congressman Townsend Scudder, Rush Taggart, the Rev. W. A. P. Martin, President of the Imperial University of China, and J. Lindsay Gordon, Assistant District Attorney.

NEELY MUST GO TO CUBA

Supreme Court Decides the Postal Frauds Extradition Case.

Holds that the Prisoner Now in Ludlow Street Jail Be Taken Back for Trial.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—The United States Supreme Court to-day announced its decision in the case of C. F. W. Neely, charged with embezzlement of the public funds of Cuba while acting as financial agent of the Department of Posts of that island, holding that Neely is subject to extradition. Justice Harlan handed down the Court's opinion, which was unanimous, and immediately after the opinion was concluded an order was issued requiring that the mandate in the case be issued at once.

The opinion embraced a complete review of the case, explaining Neely's crime and arrest, and his effort to prevent extradition to Cuba. The opinion also detailed the laws relating to ex[illegible] the act of June [illegible] sed visions of Sec[illegible] Statutes to [illegible], which are "occupied or under the control of the United States," so as to make the law cover, among other crimes, embezzlement in such countries.

Entering upon his reasoning on the case, Justice Harlan said that there was no dispute that on the 6th of June, 1900, when the act under which this proceeding is brought became a law, Cuba was "under the control of the United States" and "occupied by this Government." "This court," he said, "will take judicial notice that such were, at the date named and are now, the relations between this country and Cuba. So that the applicability of the above act to the present case—and this is the first question to be examined—depends upon the inquiry whether, within its meaning, Cuba is to be deemed a foreign country or territory."

Continuing, he said: "We do not think this question at all difficult of solution if regard be had to the avowed object intended to be accomplished by the war with Spain, and by the military occupation of that island."

Justice Harlan then reviewed the legislation preceding the war with Spain, quoting the joint resolution of April 20, 1898, and the declaration of war, which followed on the 25th of the same month. The protocol between the United States and Spain and the Paris treaty were reviewed for the purpose of showing not only the relation of the United States to Cuba, but Spain's relinquishment of sovereignty over the island. Notice was taken of the establishment of a military government over Cuba and Gov. Brooke's proclamation of Jan. 1, 1899, was quoted. The Justice then referred to the Governor's establishment of various departments in order to promote the civil government of the island. He also called attention to the promulgation of the Postal Code superseding all other Cuban laws relating to postal affairs, and related that on the 13th of June last Gov. Wood had made his requisition upon the President for Neely.

THE COURT'S CONCLUSIONS.

Announcing the court's conclusions on the status of Cuba, Justice Harlan said: "The facts above detailed make it clear that Cuba is foreign territory within the meaning of the act of June 6, 1900. It cannot be regarded in any Constitutional, legal, or international sense a part of the territory of the United States. While by the act of April 25, 1898, declaring war between this country and Spain, the President was directed and empowered to use our entire land and naval forces as well as the militia of the several States to such extent as was necessary to carry the act into effect, that authorization was not for the purpose of making Cuba an integral part of the United States, but for the purpose only of compelling the relinquishment by Spain of its authority and government in that island and the withdrawal of its forces from Cuba and Cuban waters.

"The legislative and executive branches of the Government, by the joint resolution of April 20, 1898, expressly disclaimed any purpose of exercising sovereignty, jurisdiction, or control over Cuba, 'except for the pacification thereof,' and asserted the determination of the United States, that object being accomplished, to leave the government and control of Cuba to its own people. All that has been done in relation to Cuba has had that end in view, and so far as the Court is informed by the public history of the relations of this country with that island, nothing has been done inconsistent with the declared object of the war with Spain.

"Cuba is none the less foreign territory within the meaning of the act of Congress because it is under a Military Governor appointed by and representing the President in the work of assisting the inhabitants of that island to establish a Government of their own, under which, as a free and independent people, they may control their own affairs without interference by other nations. The occupancy of the island by troops of the United States was the necessary result of the war. That result could not have been avoided by the United States consistently with the principles of international law or with its obligations to the people of Cuba.

"It is true that as between Spain and the United States, indeed, as between the United States and all foreign nations, Cuba, upon the cessation of hostilities with Spain, and after the treaty of Paris, was to be treated as if it were conquered territory. But as between the United States and Cuba that island is territory held in trust for the inhabitants of Cuba, to whom it rightfully belongs and to whose exclusive control it will be surrendered when a stable Government shall have been established by their voluntary action."

POWER TO LEGISLATE.

The court also outlined the power of Congress to legislate in the premises, saying: "It cannot be doubted that when the United States required and enforced the relinquishment by Spain of her sovereignty in Cuba and determined to occupy and control the island until there was complete tranquillity in all its borders, and until the people of Cuba had created for themselves a stable Government, it succeeded to the authority of the displaced Government, so far, at least that it became its duty under international law and pending the pacification of the island to protect in all appropriate legal modes the lives, the liberty, and the property of all those who submitted to the authority of this country.

"The power of Congress to make all laws necessary and proper for carrying into execution as well as the powers enumerated in Section 8 of Article I. of the Constitution, as all others vested in the Government of the United States, or in any department or the officers thereof, includes the power to enact such legislation as is appropriate to give efficacy to any stipulation which it is competent for the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to insert in a treaty with a foreign power.

"What legislation by Congress could be more appropriate for the protection of life and property in Cuba, while occupied and controlled by the United States, than legislation securing the return to that island, to be tried by its constituted authorities, of those who, having committed crimes there, flee to this country to escape arrest, trial, and punishment? No crime is mentioned in the Extradition act of June 6, 1900, that does not have some relation to the safety of life and property. And the provisions of that act, requiring the surrender of any public officer, employe, or depositary fleeing to the United States after having committed, in a foreign country or territory occupied by or under the control of the United States, the crime of embezzlement or criminal malversation of the public funds, have special application to Cuba in its present relation to this country."

STATUS OF CUBANS.

It also was argued on behalf of Neely that as peace now exists in Cuba, and has existed there since the Spanish forces evacuated the island, the occupation and control of that island under the military authority of the United States is without warrant in the Constitution and is an unauthorized interference with the internal affairs of a friendly power, and that consequently the appellant should not be extradited for trial in the courts established under the order issued by the Military Governor of the island. Replying to this point, Justice Harlan said:

"Apart from the view that it is not competent for the judiciary to make any declaration upon the question of the length of time during which Cuba may be rightfully occupied and controlled by the United States in order to effect its pacification—it being the function of the political branch of the Government to determine when such occupation shall cease, and therefore when the troops of the United States shall be withdrawn from Cuba—the contention that the United States recognized the existence of an established Government known as the Republic of Cuba, but is now using its military or executive power to displace or overthrow it, is without merit.

"The declaration of Congress that the people were and of right ought to be free and independent was not intended as a recognition of the existence of an organized Government instituted by the people of that island in hostility to the Government maintained by Spain. Nothing more was intended than to express the thought that the Cubans were entitled to enjoy—to use the language of the President in his message of Dec. 5, 1897—that 'measure of self-control which is the inalienable right of man, protected in their right to reap the benefit of the exhaustless treasure of their country. * * * Both the legislative and executive branches of the Government concurred in not recognizing the existence of any such Government as the Republic of Cuba.

"It is true that the co-operation of troops commanded by Cuban officers was accepted by the military authorities of the United States in its efforts to overthrow Spanish authority in Cuba. Yet from the beginning to the end of the war the supreme authority in all military operations in Cuba and in Cuban waters against Spain was with the United States, and those operations were not in any sense under the control or direction of the troops commanded by Cuban officers."

The final conclusion of the court was announced as follows:

"We are of opinion, for the reasons stated, that the act of June 6, 1900, is not in violation of the Constitution of the United States, and that this case comes within the provisions of that act. The court below having found that there was probable cause to believe the appellant guilty of the offense charged, the order for his extradition was proper and no ground existed for his discharge on habeas corpus. The judgment of the Circuit Court is therefore affirmed."

COMMENT ON THE DECISION.

Action in the Neely Case Pleases Secretary Root and Assistant Attorney General Beck.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—When Secretary Root was informed of the decision in the Neely case, he said:

"I am very glad to hear it. It would have given the administration of civil law in Cuba by Americans a very black eye if we had failed to get Neely back there. We have been trying to introduce reforms in procedure in Cuba for the purpose of expediting the trial of offenders, and have done so, and have been insisting upon their being brought to trial. If the Government of the United States had permitted this man, charged with the embezzlement of the postal funds of Cuba, to come here, and refused to send him back to be tried for it, we should have presented a very sorry spectacle."

Assistant Attorney General James M. Beck, who argued the Neely case for the Government in the Supreme Court, said of the decision:

"The Government regards the decision as important, not merely because it definitely decides its rights to extradite Neely, but because it defines the nature and validity of its occupancy in Cuba. The chief contention of Neely's able counsel was that with the ratification of the treaty of Paris all right of occupancy by the Government under the war power ceased, and that the present occupancy of Cuba by the President as Commander in Chief was unconstitutional and a usurpation. The court squarely negatives this contention, and broadly affirms the right of the Government to occupy Cuba until a responsible Government is created by the Cuban people.

"It is especially gratifying to the Department of Justice that this right can be exercised, as the court decided, free from any embarrassment which the existence of a Cuban Republic would occasion. Neely's counsel earnestly contended that Congress, by the joint resolution which preceded the Spanish-American war, had recognized the existence of the Cuban Republic, and if the court had sustained this contention the Government would have been embarrassed by a divided authority.

"The court further decides that the President may exercise his rights as Commander in Chief, free from the embarrassments of the Constitutional provisions requiring trial by jury, which the court held to be inapplicable to Cuba.

"The case is unique, partly because the status of Cuba is anomalous and partly because of the absence of an extradition treaty. As to the first, the court affirmed the authority of the United States in Cuba, pending its pacification, although it is foreign territory. As to the latter point, it has long been a vexed question as to whether there could be an extradition in the absence of an extradition treaty. The effect of the decision is to extradite Neely under the authority conferred by the act of Congress, rather than in accordance with any express extradition treaty. It insures the trial of a fugitive from justice, and it gives the Administration the power to protect life and property in Cuba during the period of our occupancy."

GOVERNMENT WANTS EARLY TRIAL.

Neely Will Be Taken to Cuba on a United States Transport.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—As soon as the War Department is officially informed of the decision of the United States Supreme Court, sustaining its contention in the Neely case, steps will be taken to secure the prisoner's removal to Havana for trial. Neeley is now in custody in the Ludlow Street Jail, New York, pending the hearing of civil proceedings against him on the charge of having brought stolen goods into the State of New York. Judicial steps will be instituted to vacate the civil proceedings and secure the transfer of the prisoner to the custody of United States Marshal Henkel of New York who has been appointed the agent of the Military Governor of Cuba for the purpose of receiving the prisoner when surrendered by the United States Government under the application for extradition.

When all the neecssary preliminaries have been arranged, Neely will be surrendered to Agent Henkel and placed on a United States transport and taken to Havana. The application for extradition was made in May last, and Neely's counsel resorted to every legal resource to resist action upon it by the United States Government. It is said that the United States authorities desire to have the trial of Neely precede the hearing of the case of Rathbone, who is charged with complicity in the same transactions.

NICARAGUA CANAL PROSPECTS.

Senator Morgan Submits Statistics Compiled by Prof. E. R. Johnson.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Senator Morgan to-day submitted another report on the Nicaragua Canal. It contains a special statement by Prof. Emory R. Johnson, a member of the Isthmian Commission, of the traffic resources of the canal and its effects upon the commercial industrials of the United States. Mr. Morgan says the statement "proves conclusively that as an investment the Nicaragua Canal will earn a highly remunerative profit on a cost even of $200,000,000, which is the extreme estimate of cost presented by the Isthmian Canal Commission."

Prof. Johnson in his statement makes several statistical estimates. For the year ended June 30, 1899, he says that 3,426,752 cargo tons of United States commerce could have used the canal, and 3,346,377 tons for South, Central, and British America; and He said he had not unduly obstructed the 5,736,456 European tonnage. The commission estimates that 7,500,000 tons of traffic would be available for the canal in 1914 after the canal has been opened; the traffic will increase to 11,250,000 tons in 1924.

A dollar-ton toll is estimated as most feasible. The report says the effect of the canal on transcontinental railways will compel a reduction in rates, which will be offset by the larger local traffic.

CATHOLIC CHURCH BURNED.

Indebtedness on the Structure at Point Pleasant Had Just Been Paid.

POINT PLEASANT, N. J., Jan. 14.—Fire this afternoon destroyed the Catholic church here, known as the Holy Comfort. The stained-glass windows, the statues, and a few benches were saved.

The church was almost new. It was built about three years ago at a cost of over $5,000. Only last week the last of the indebtedness of the church was paid off, which left but $8.34 in the treasury. The Rev. Father Daniel was in charge of the congregation and lived in the parsonage, which was also burned to the ground with the church.

There was a small insurance on the building and church.

TELLER ATTACKS EAGAN AND THE PRESIDENT

Senator Denounces the Reinstatement of the General.

In Debate on the Army Bill Says It Was as a Reward for Eagan's Attack on Miles.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Just at the close of a day of dreary discussion of technical details of the Army Reorganization bill, Mr. Teller, (Silver Rep., Col.,) speaking to an amendment he had offered, delivered a sensational denunciation of Gen. Eagan, ex-Commissary General of the United States Army. His statement included also the Administration, because Gen. Eagan had been reinstated, according to the Senator's charge, as a "decoration and a reward" for his attack upon the commanding General of the army.

To an appeal for the early passage of the pending bill made by Mr. Carter, (Rep., Mon.,) who declared that delay now would mean an additional expense of $500,000 a day, Mr. Teller objected. He would not consent, he said, that a time be set for a vote on the bill.

No material progress was made, not a single amendment being disposed of. When the bill was taken up this morning, the pending question was an amendment offered by Mr. Bacon, (Dem., Ga.,) striking out that provision of the bill authorizing the President to increase the number of non-commissioned officers and privates in any troop of cavalry.

After some desultory discussion, Mr. Bacon withdrew his amendment and offered another, introducing the words "during the present exigency of the service," so that the clause would read "provided, that the President, during the present exigency of the service, in his discretion may increase the number of Corporals in any troop of cavalry to eight and the number of privates to seventy-six."

Speaking to the amendment last offered by Mr. Bacon, Mr. Foraker (Rep., Ohio,) maintained that the army of 58,000, the minimum size of the army fixed by the pending measure, was not a large force in all the circumstances. In view of the necessity for caring for coast fortifications, and in view, too, of the probable early construction of the Nicaragua Canal, every soldier provided for in the present bill would be needed. With reference to the conference of authority upon the President to increase the size of the army within a maximum limit, Mr. Foraker declared: "It is not only not a departure from principle, but it is distinctly in line with precedents."

The Ohio Senator then pointed out instances in the history of the country of the power conferred by Congress upon the President to increase at his discretion the size of the army within a maximum limit. He asserted that the adoption of the amendment of Mr. Bacon would destroy the flexibility of the army and do away with what to him was the most attractive feature of the bill.

In the course of an extended reply Mr. Bacon asserted that the pending measure, in which Congress abdicated a part of its power, when enacted would be permanent law. Mr. Hawley (Rep., Conn.,) interrupted Mr. Bacon to say that the act would not be permanent law, and the Senator (Bacon) knew it. "There is no such thing as permanent law," declared Mr. Hawley.

Mr. Allison (Rep., Iowa,) declared there was no purpose in the pending bill to pass the authority of Congress to the President. Congress always would have the situation in hand. It would be able at any time to increase or decrease the size of the army. The power conferred by the bill upon the President could be exercised only with the consent of Congress. "If Congress agrees with the President," said Mr. Allison, "it will appropriate for such an army as he may deem expedient, but if it should not agree with him it will determine for itself how large an army it will make appropriations for. These matters are constantly within the control of Congress, and no President can or will go contrary to Congress."

Mr. Hawley then made an appeal to the Senate to cease discussion and pass the bill. "Twenty thousand men," said he, "will have to cross the Pacific before the first of July and yet Senators are here discussing matters that were settled long ago."

"Fellow-Senators," concluded Mr. Hawley, earnestly, "I beg you to let this bill go through and to start the work of raising troops to relieve the boys in the Philippines. I want the money and the order to raise troops to supply the deficiency and put down our enemies, keep our flag floating in the Philippines, and maintain our honor."

At the request of Mr. Bacon further discussion of his amendment was postponed until to-morrow.

Mr. Teller at this point offered an amendment to that section of the bill which authorizes the President to retire any officer who has been suspended from duty either by sentence of court-martial or by Executive order in mitigation of such sentence, striking out the words "has been" and substituting therefor "shall be hereafter."

After saying that the section had been incorporated in the bill for the purpose of enabling the President to retire Gen. Eagan, Mr. Teller declared it was retained in the bill in order that an officer of the army, Major Joseph W. Wham, might be got rid of.

"He cannot be gotten rid of in any other way," said Mr. Teller, "and he ought not to be gotten rid of in any circumstances."

In the course of his remarks Mr. Teller adverted to the case of Gen. Eagan at some length. Of the beef furnished the army, he said it was "boiled and canned, and of very ancient lineage, some of which had made a trip to Europe and back, being fed to our soldiers after it had been condemned by European Governments." Mr. Teller denounced Gen. Eagan in sensational language. "As an officer of the United States Army," said the Senator, "he made an exhibition of himself, and showed himself to be a miserable blackguard."

Referring to Gen. Eagan's denial of Gen. Miles's charges as to "embalmed beef," Mr. Teller declared, "his language was brutal and low, and so bad it could not be overlooked, although there was a very evident desire to overlook it." Mr. Teller then made a stinging attack upon the President for having retired Gen. Eagan, asserting that the retirement, in the circumstances, was a decoration, not a punishment, and many people believe it was a decoration and a reward for his attack upon the General commanding the army."

At the conclusion of Mr. Teller's statement Mr. Carter, one of the members of the Military Affairs Committee, addressed the Senate in an appeal for the passage of the pending measure at an early date. He said that on the Pacific there were only eight transports at the disposal of the Government for the transportation of troops to and from the Philippines. By beginning the work of transporting the troops at once they might be able to complete it by July 1, the date of the expiration of the present law. Otherwise it might be necessary to employ special vessels, the chartering and fitting up of which would greatly increase the expense.

"I think the Senate ought to know," said Mr. Carter, "that each day's delay in the passage of this bill will involve an additional expenditure of at least $500,000."

"I suggest," said Mr. Cockrell, (Dem., Mo.,) "that the Senator ought to have made this statement earlier in the session and not have waited until a majority had left the chamber."

Mr. Carter said to-morrow he would ask the Senate to fix a day for the final vote upon the measure. Mr. Teller declared immediately that he would object at this time to any date being fixed for a final vote. business unduly by the propositions contained in it were of such a character as to demand full debate.

"I do not care if this delay does cost $500,000 a day," said Mr. Teller. "It involves the creation of a great standing army that will cost this Government millions upon millions of dollars after we are dead and gone."

When the Senate adjourned it had accomplished nothing.

Progress on River and Harbor Bill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—The House postponed District of Columbia business, which was the regular order for to-day, until next Monday, and proceeded with the River and Harbor bill. General debate closed at 2 o'clock, and the bill was read under the five-minute rule for amendment. Good progress was made, fifty-nine of the ninety-seven pages being completed. Many amendments were offered, but, without exception, all of them failed.

President Signs the Boutelle Bill.

Embroideries 12 1-2c. Yd.

In Sunday's papers there appeared a rather small announcement concerning an extraordinary purchase of about 7,000 yards of excellent embroideries. We thought we had more than enough for Monday's sale; you can imagine how astonished we were to find our counters clear of them by 11 o'clock—every yard gone! We are sorry this happened, that is, sorry that we didn't have about 30,000 yards instead of 7,000. Luckily for us, however, through a trade manipulation consummated yesterday afternoon, we are able to place on sale this morning a lot of about 10,000 yards, and qualities even better than those we sold yesterday. If you missed the opportunity then, you will have another chance to-day. But be sure to come early. We can't tell how long these will last either. The goods are all fine new spring patterns. The sample pieces of one of St. Gall's largest manufacturers. All in sets; one width of insertions, three and four widths of edgings. There's not a piece in the entire lot that is worth less than 20c. per yard, and most of them are worth up around 50c. and 75c. per yard; all to-day at the round price of 12 1-2c. per yard.

LAWYER'S HOUSE ROBBED.

Burglars Enter Burton N. Harrison's Residence in Broad Daylight and Get Away with Jewelry.

The residence of Burton N. Harrison, a lawyer, with offices at 120 Broadway, was robbed yesterday afternoon of a considerable quantity of jewelry and other things which the members of the family, on the advice of the police, refuse to enumerate.

Mr. Burton lives at 43 East Twenty-ninth Street, a three-story house situated next to a tenement on the corner of Madison Avenue, the ground floor of which is occupied as a saloon. The burglars, it is believed, either passed through the saloon to a rear stairway, or else went up the front stairs from the main entrance to the roof, climbing over this to the Burton residence and gaining entrance by prying open the door of the scuttle hole. They undoubtedly had been on the top floor, which is occupied by the servants, for some time, for the floors of the several rooms were littered with stuff tossed out of bureau drawers and boxes, and every piece of jewelry of any value was taken.

The thieves were still at work when the butler returned after a half hour's absence and went up stairs to change his clothes. From the foot of the stairs he saw a strange man standing on the landing, and shouted "Thieves!" The stranger darted for the ladder leading to the roof, and was nowhere to be seen when the butler reached the scuttle hole.

The butler says he found evidences of burglary in the rear parlor, which contained many pieces of rare bric-a-brac and costly trinkets, but just what, if anything, was missing, he could not say.

When the robbery was reported to the police, Detective Byers of the West Thirteth Street Station was detailed to make an investigation. He reported that Mr. Harrison had told him that only the servants' rooms had been robbed, and that the burglars got no further than the top floor. Among the articles of jewelry stolen are two gold watches, a jeweled scarfpin, a gold neck chain, three pairs of cuff buttons, three plain gold rings, and several others, with settings, a set of gold shirt studs, and various trinkets of minor value.

Brooklyn Man Missing.

Christian Zahn, forty-one years old, of 16 Ditmars Street, Williamsburg, has been missing since New Year's Day, and all efforts to find him have failed. Yesterday the police of the Hamburg Avenue Station were notified, and a general alarm was sent out. Zahn lived with his wife and sixteen-year-old son. For twenty years he was a foreman in his brother's sign factory, on Myrtle Avenue. His wife fears foul play, as she knows no reason otherwise why he should remain away.

FRENCH CHAMBER ACTS ON POPE LEO'S LETTER

Interpellation Results in Vote of Confidence in the Ministry.

VICTORY EXPECTED FOR BILL

Proposed Law Against the Religious Orders Will Interdict All Societies, Including Salvation Army.

PARIS, Jan. 14.—In the Chamber of Deputies to-day the Government was interpellated by Marcel Sembat, Radical Socialist, representing one of the divisions of the Seine, on the "interference of the Pope in the domestic affairs of France," as shown in the recent letter of the Pope to Cardinal Richard, the Archbishop of Paris, dealing with the proposed bill of the Premier, M. Waldeck-Rousseau, known as the Law of Associations, and aiming at the suppression of religious communities, in which the Pontiff defended the religious orders. M. Sembat asked the Government to protest against this letter.

M. Ribot, the ex-Premier, defended the Pope, who, he said, was entitled to raise his voice when he thought religious interests were in peril. This statement called forth cheers from the Rightists and Centrists.

M. Waldeck-Rousseau said the Government saw no threat in the Pope's letter as to missions in the East.

"The letter of his Holiness," continued the Premier, "simply said that, if the French missionaries disappeared, they would be replaced by foreign missionaries.

"The Government will not tolerate the organization of resistance against the laws of the country. No interference on the part of the Pope will be allowed in the law of associations when it is voted upon. The Pope has rights as the spiritual head of Catholics. But the State also has rights written in the Concordat, which it will see respected."

This declaration rallied around the Government all the Leftists and Centrists, who voted approval of the Premier's declarations and confidence in his firmness to assure the defense of the rights of the State.

The Chamber then adopted a resolution expressing confidence in the Government by a vote of 310 to 110.

Other Extremist motions, one proposing the separation of Church and State and another proposing to denounce the Concordat, were rejected by overwhelming majorities.

The Chamber was crowded with Deputies and notable visitors in the expectation that the debate on the law of associations would be begun. To-day's result has greatly elated the Ministerialists, who declare that it presages victory for the law of associations.

Henri des Houx recently had an interview with Leo XIII., which was published in Le Matin of Paris on Dec. 29, 1900. It contained a serious warning to the French Government not to persevere in the measures it proposes to adopt against the religious orders in France. The Pope was quoted as saying:

"My apostolic duty commands me to speak. The French Catholics shall know that their father does not abandon them; that he suffers with them in their trials, and that he encourages their generous efforts in the cause of right and liberty. The Pope cannot consent to the French Government distorting the spirit of the Concordat and transforming an instrument of peace and justice into an instrument of war and oppression. The Concordat established and regulated in France the exercise of the Catholic religion, defining the respective rights and duties of the Church and State. Now, the religious orders form an integral part of the Apostolic Church, with the same right as the secular clergy. They exist in virtue of constitutions granted them by the Holy See. They exercise a special mission, different, but not the less sacred, than that of the clergy recognized by the State. To strike at their existence is to strike the Church, mutilate it, and restrict the benefits it confers.

"That was not the object the Concordat had in view. To declare illegal and to interdict all that it could not foresee and regulate is to distort that treaty. The Concordat is silent concerning the religious orders. That means that the regular clergy do not participate in the special rights and relative privileges conferred upon the members of the secular ecclesiastical heirarchy by the Concordat, but it does not imply that the religious orders are to be excluded from the enjoyment of rights common to all. What is the project of the Government, aggravated by M. Trouillot, the parliamentary reporter, if it is not a series of measures destined to dissolve and despoil the religious orders, a code of exceptions and exclusions destined to be applied to a certain class of citizens on account of their religious character?"

The Pontiff then insisted on the fact that he had never encouraged the congregations to concern themselves in politics or party strife. He had, on the contrary, intervened to repress such conduct, but now it was proposed to make a law which would be the negation of all the laws of liberty. That measure would exclude the religious orders not only from the right of possessing property, but from the right of existence. The Pope inquired whether the French Government had weighed the consequences of such an act, which could not fail to be fatal to France and injurious to her greatest interests.

The publication of this interview was followed by an official letter addressed by the Pope to Mgr. Richard, Archbishop of Paris. After insisting at great length on the services rendered the Church and civilization by the monastic orders, especially by those of France, Leo XIII. refuted the accusations brought against them. To strike the religious orders, he said, would deprive the Catholic Church in France of devoted servants, where they are the necessary auxiliaries of the episcopate and clergy. Moreover, abroad, in the East and Far East, the French congregations constituted the chief force of the apostolate. The Holy See would, therefore, in the fulfillment of its Divine mandate, find itself obliged not to oppose the filling up of the posts of honor, vacated by French missionaries, by missionaries of other nationalities. To strike at the congregations would be a departure from those democratic principles of liberty and equality which form the base of the constitutional laws of France.

In France there are three kinds of associations—commercial or financial associations, regulated by the law of 1807; associations admitted and sanctioned by the State as being of public utility, and associations which are not recognized by legislation. Associations consisting of less than twenty persons are legal, while associations which consist of more than twenty persons are illegal. But the laws which proscribe these associations have been a dead letter up to the present, because they were inapplicable. The new law of associations is intended to assimilate all associations to the position of the commercial and financial companies, so that these associations may be susceptible of being driven into liquidation. In addition, the law of associations will—interdict every society formed by Frenchmen and foreigners, and every association directed by foreigners and having adherents in France. This will render impossible in France the existence of the great orders whose Superiors reside in Rome, as well as such organizations as the Salvation Army. It is estimated that the religious orders of France own property valued at $200,000,000.

It is said that the Papal Nuncio will leave Paris if the bill passes. This, it is added, will be followed by the recall from Rome of the French representative at the Vatican.

As most of the religious orders have already obtained legal recognition from the Government since the laws enacted under President Grévy, in March, 1880, an amendment was introduced by the Waldeck-Rousseau Ministry decreeing that all persons who have not been educated in the public schools of the State shall be deemed unfit to occupy any military, naval, or civic position drawing a Government salary. This will be the most fatal blow to the educational institutions of the religious orders, because French parents will hereafter send their children to the State schools instead of having them sent to colleges kept by priests and sisters to the danger of their careers in life.

King Oscar Well Again.

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 14.—King Oscar has recovered his health, and will resume the reins of Government on Jan. 21.

TO DRY THE PONTINE MARSHES.

Italian Government Accepts a Project for Rendering Them Habitable.

BERLIN, Jan. 14.—Private advices from Rome assert that the King and Government of Italy have accepted a great project by Count Czapski and Baron Douglas, Germans, for drying out the Pontine Marshes and rendering them habitable and fertile. Negotiations with opposing owners along the marshes have taken a favorable turn.

NIHILIST PRINCE ARRESTED.

Prince Nakadchidze Said to Have Plotted to Assassinate the Czar.

NICE, Jan. 14.—The police have arrested Prince Victor Nakadchidze, a Russian, on the charge of plotting to take the life of the Czar on the latter's supposed approaching visit here.

Prince Nakadchidze, who is a Nihilist, was condemned to death in Russia as an accomplice in the conspiracy of 1886 against the life of the late Czar Alexander III. He was also convicted in Paris of being illegally in the possession of explosive machines.

DUKE OF MANCHESTER'S DEBTS.

Creditor Claims that Jewelry Was a Necessity to His Grace.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The bankruptcy of the Duke of Manchester was again aired this morning in the courts. An appeal was lodged against the plea of "infancy" in respect to a claim of £859 for jewelry.

The appellants submitted that, in view of the Duke's position, jewelry was necessary, even though he was an "infant" when he bought it. The hearing was adjourned, to see if the Duke, on his return from America, desires to maintain the plea of "infancy."

ITALIAN STEAMER LOST.

Bodies from the Leone Wash Ashore in Corsica.

LA CHIAPPA, Corsica, Jan. 14.—The Italian steamer Leone has been lost. Many bodies from the wreck have been washed ashore.

The vessel is probably the steamer Leone of 361 tons net register, owned by G. Denaro of Catania. She was 201 feet 2 inches long, her beam was 25 feet 1 inch, and she was 15 feet 3 inches deep. She was built at Greenock in 1864. No information as to the movements of the Leone can be obtained from any of the shipping books.

AMERICANS RIOT IN ECUADOR.

Conflict with Jamaican Laborers on Railroad at Bocay Junction.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Jan. 14.—News was received here to-day of serious fighting Dec. 24 and Dec. 29 between parties of American foremen and Jamaican laborers working on railway construction in Ecuador at Bocay Junction.

The fighting there developed Dec. 24 into a riot, revolvers being freely used on both sides, and many persons being wounded.

The Ecuadorian troops had to be called to restore order. Hundreds of the laborers decamped, and the work is now progressing slowly.

An American named Reynolds is now on trial at Guayaquil, charged with shooting Jamaicans.

COQUARD STILL BESIEGED.

French Criminal's House Is Cordoned by Troops Who Will Enter To-day.

TROYES, France, Jan. 14.—To-day an enormous crowd gathered at St. Sabine, near the house of the man Coquard, who last Friday, when pursued by the police, shut himself in the garret with a quantity of arms and ammunition and threatened to kill any one who approached.

The house is now cordoned by troops and gendarmes at a distance of 500 yards. The killing by Coquard yesterday afternoon of a citizen who, on his own responsibility, attempted to make terms with the fugitive, has terrorized the spectators, and no one dared to enter the building to-day, although nothing has been seen or heard of Coquard.

The gendarmes fired shots into the building in the hope of inducing him to appear, but there was no response, and it is believed that he escaped last night or hanged himself. The house will be entered to-morrow.

Peeress Presides Over School Board.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—Lady O'Hagan has been elected to preside over the Burnley School Board as a Progressive, by a majority of one, against the Church Party. A Socialist gave the deciding vote. She immediately took the chair, though a lively legal controversy has been going on as to whether a woman is eligible.

Two Berlin Artists Drowned.

BERLIN, Jan. 14.—Two talented Berlin artists, Herr Guido Frohberg and Herr von der Wonde, were drowned to-day while skating on Lake Schwielow.

PENN TAKES UP TRACK WORK.

College Athletes Meet and Prepare for Training Season.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 14.—Track work at the University of Pennsylvania began to-day by a meeting of all candidates in the trophy room at the Houston Club. Over fifty men answered the call, and there was considerable enthusiasm manifested. Speeches were made by President Geyelin of the Athletic Association, Frank B. Ellis the relay manager, Capt. McClain, and ex-Capt. McCracken of the track team; Trainer George D. Turner and W. B. Petterman, the intercollegiate walking champion.

The fact was emphasized that this year Pennsylvania must stretch every sinew to win the intercollegiate. Whoever wins the Intercollegiate Cup five times becomes its permanent possessor. For four years Pennsylvania has held the silver trophy against all comers, and should she triumph this year the cup is hers. But the name of Yale is also found inscribed four times on the sides of the trophy, and as Yale is Pennsylvania's most dangerous competitor, it is simply a question of which college becomes the permanent owner of the cup.

Only one cup was ever won this way, and Harvard is its proud possessor. Pennsylvania will have to develop a lot of new material to win this year's intercollegiates. She has lost Kraenzlein, McCracken, Grant, and Remington, and it is not yet certain that Tewksbury and Baxter will compete this year. This is tremendous loss, but there are many who believe that with Hare, McClain, Bushnell, Anderson, Drumpheller, Ludes, and Bowen that Pennsylvania will still be a strong factor in college athletics.

JAMES D. SARVEN'S WILL.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Jan. 14.—C. S. Davison of Tarrytown to-day filed his report as the transfer tax appraiser in the estate of James D. Sarven, who died April last, leaving an estate of $364,389. Upon the report Surrogate Silkman signed the order and decree assessing the State collateral tax, which was $6,335.

The testator left the residuary estate in equal shares to the Presbyterian Hospital, St Luke's Hospital, the American Bible Society, and the American Tract Society of New York City. The appraiser finds that, after paying out legacies, the residue is $236,563, of which each institution mentioned receives $30,140.91, and the Tarrytown Hospital $5,000.

THE UNITED SERVICE.

Army.

Announcement is made of the retirement from active service, Jan. 12, of Capt. Charles D. A. Loeffler, Military Storekeeper, Quartermaster's Department, by operation of law.

The following-named officers will report to Col. William A. Rafferty, Fifth Cavalry, President of the examining board appointed to meet at Fort Myer, Virginia, at such time as he may designate for examination as to their fitness for promotion: Capt. Fred Wheeler, Fourth Cavalry, and Capt. George L. Scott, Sixth Cavalry.

Movements of Naval Vessels.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—The Essex left Norfolk for Tompkinsville Saturday.

The battleship Kentucky has arrived at Colombo.

The Alexander left Colombo to-day for Port Said.

The Ajax, formerly the Scindia, has sailed from Suez for Port Said.

The Monadnock has left Hongkong for Amoy.

The Zafiro sailed yesterday from Hongkong for Manila.

The Cushing has left the New York Yard for Newport.

LOSSES BY FIRE.

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio, Jan. 14.—Fire to-day at the E. W. Ross Company plant at Lagonda caused a loss of between $75,000 and $100,000; insurance, $65,000. The main structure, a four-story building, was burned to the ground. The foundry and warehouse were partly destroyed.

POWERS OF CITY MARSHALS.

They Have No Right to Act Outside the County They Are Appointed To.

A decision handed down by the Appellate Term of the Supreme Court yesterday will serve to limit the powers of City Marshals. It appears from the decision that up to now the Marshals have been accustomed to serve legal papers in any borough of the city, and that they were exercising more authority in that respect than the Sheriff of the county.

The decision given yesterday was by Justices Giegerich and O'Gorman in the case of Felix Tausend against James Handlaar. It appears that a writ of attachment was issued from a municipal court of Manhattan and directed "to any Marshal of the City of New York to whom the annexed summons is delivered." The Marshal went to Brooklyn, and there attached the property of the defendant. The defendant appealed to the Appellate Term, and among other points raised the one that a Marshal had no right to go outside of the county to which he was originally appointed. In their opinion the Justices say:

"The process of the County Court can be sent into any county of the State, just as the process of the Municipal Court of the City of New York can be sent into any part of the city. But, just as the process of the County Court has to be executed by the Sheriff of the county into which it is sent, so the process of the Municipal Court of the City of New York must be executed by a Marshal residing in the county to which the process is sent. It is evident, therefore, then, that the new charter, in enlarging the sphere within which the municipal Court would run, would not thereby enlarge the sphere within which the Marshals are authorized to execute their functions."

LEGAL NOTES.

HUSBAND AND WIFE.—Devine N. Munger, in 1882, when solvent, paid out of his own funds $12,500 as the consideration for a house and lot in Brooklyn, conveyed to his wife, Laura Munger, as a family residence. In 1889 Mr. Munger became insolvent, and John Connelly recovered a judgment against him for $2,086 upon a contract bearing date in 1880. Frank Brundage, to whom Connelly's judgment was assigned in October, 1898, began a suit in November, 1899, to set aside the deed to Mrs. Munger, as being fraudulent and void. A judgment rendered in favor of the plaintiff has been unanimously reversed by the Appellate Division in Brooklyn, the Court holding, in an opinion by Presiding Justice Goodrich, that the judgment creditor of the husband was not entitled to a lien upon the premises for moneys voluntarily paid by the husband in lieu of rent, without an express agreement with his wife, for interest on mortgages, insurance, taxes, and repairs, amounting to one-half the rental value.

LIABILITY OF BANK IN COLLECTING DRAFT ON DEPOSITOR.—The Bank of America undertook in October, 1890, with Henry P. Kirkham, a depositor, to collect for him a sight draft for $3,120, drawn by the Inter-State Investment Company, upon the Bank of South Hutchinson, Kan., and upon receipt of notice from its sub-agent, the First National Bank of Hutchinson, Kan., that the latter had received the drawee's check for the amount, drawn upon the Merchants' Exchange National Bank of New York City, entered in the depositor's pass-book the amount as a credit in his favor. When the check was thereafter presented to the Merchants' Exchange National Bank, payment was refused because of insufficient funds. In Mr. Kirkham's suit, brought in the Supreme Court in this city, against the Bank of America, to recover the amount of the draft, judgment was given at Special Term in favor of the defendant. The Appellate Division ordered a reversal, and that decision had been affirmed by the Court of Appeals, which held, in an opinion by Judge Gray, that the bank must be deemed by such entry in the pass-book to treat the draft as paid, and it might not afterward, upon failure of its agent to collect the check upon presentment, cancel the credit already given to its depositor.

STREETS CROSSING RAILROADS.—In 1871 the then village of Yonkers, twenty years after the Hudson River Railroad had been constructed, along and near the easterly bank of the river, opened Vark Street, forty feet wide, across the railroad tracks, at a grade twenty feet above that of the railroad. The New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company refused or omitted to comply with the requirements of a notice at that time served upon it, to take the street across its roadway in accordance with the street grade, and to cause the necessary embankments and excavations to be done for that purpose. In 1874 the City of Yonkers had the stret constructed across the tracks by a bridge having one clear span twenty feet high. After the passage of the railroad law, in 1897, providing, in Section 84, that "when a highway crosses a railroad by an overhead bridge, the framework of the bridge and its abutments shall be maintained and kept in repair by the railroad company, and the roadway thereover and the approaches thereto shall be maintained and kept in repair by the municipality in which the same are situated," the city brought an action against the railroad company to enforce this provision. The Appellate Division, in Brooklyn, gave judgment for the plaintiff upon an agreed statement of facts, and that decision has been affirmed by the Court of Appeals. Judge O'Brien, giving the opinion, holds that the provision referred to is not limited in its application, as waa claimed by the railroad company, to railroads constructed subsequent to its enactment, or to approaches over crossings thereafter constructed, but applies to all approaches consisting a highway at railroad crossings, whether constructed before or after the law went into effect.

THE WEATHER.

LOCAL FORECAST.—Generally fair, fresh southwesterly winds.

Rain or snow has fallen in the lake regions, Upper Ohio Valley, Northern Pacific Coast region, and Northern plateau. The temperature has fallen in Northeastern New England, the Dakotas, Eastern Montana, Northern and Western Wyoming, Northwestern Texas, the Middle and Southern plateau regions, and the Pacific Coast regions generally; elsewhere it has risen, with marked changes in the Ohio Valley, Tennessee, Lower Missouri and Central Mississippi Valleys, Western Upper Michigan, Southeastern Minnesota, and Northeastern Iowa. The temperature is much above the seasonable average, except in the Atlantic and Pacific States and along the Gulf Coast. Occasional rains or snows are indicated for to-day in Northern New England, the lake regions, and the extreme Northwest, with higher temperatures in New England, and lower temperatures in the northern portion of the lake regions and the Northern slope; elsewhere the temperatures will continue considerably above the seasonal average.

Fresh to brisk south to southwest winds are indicated for the New England Coast, fresh to brisk southwest to west on the North Atlantic Coast, and fresh southwesterly on the South Atlantic Coast, except Florida, where northerly winds are indicated.

The record of temperature for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from THE NEW YORK TIMES's thermometer and from the thermometer of the Weather Bureau, is as follows:

BILLIARD EXPERTS MEET

Keeney Wins First Game for Amateur Players' Championship.

VICTOR SHOWS GREAT SKILL

Many Enthusiasts Gather at the Hanover Club to Witness Opening of the Tournament.

Frank A. Keeney of the Oxford Club, Brooklyn, scored the first victory in the billiard tournament for the championship of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players, begun last night in the Hanover Club, Brooklyn. He defeated Arthur Townsend of the Hanover Club by 300 points to 252, in fifty-six innings, the game being at 14-inch balkline.

The competition is the first National championship ever held by the Amateur Billiard Players' Association, and the games will continue for the next two weeks. Six contestants have entered, all well known as experts in the domain of amateur billiards. Besides the players last night, the others are Ferdinand Poggenburg of the Liederkranz Club, J. Byron Stark of Wilkesbarre, Penn.; Frank Gardner of the Crescent Athletic Club, and Edward Gardner of Passaic, N. J. They were all present, and occupied seats of honor in the large dining room, which had been cleared for the tournament. Two rows of raised seats were placed adjoining the wall, and at least 500 clubmen and billiard enthusiasts gathered in the room and kept their eyes riveted upon the game until the contest ended, close upon midnight. Former Mayor Frederick W. Wurster of Brooklyn was among the interested spectators, and acted as a member of the special billiard committee.

The game was a fair exhibition of high-class amateur billiards, but only at intervals did it rise to the point of brilliancy that was eagerly awaited. To the disappointment of the crowd neither man scored in the first inning. In the next inning each made 1. The play was tame until the nineteenth inning was reached, when Townsend added the first snap of the evening by a run of 25 points, and in the next inning rolled up 39 points, then missing a long follow shot. These runs gave a decided stimulus to the game. Townsend made another good run of 26 in the twenty-seventh inning. That gave him the total of 140 points, 12 ahead of Keeney.

The game continued evenly for ten more innings, when Townsend led by ten points. At the fortieth inning he was only seven points in the lead, and at the forty-second inning Keeney passed him by a neat run of seventeen, giving the latter the advantage by ten points. This proved to be the critical stage of the match, for Townsend never caught up to his rival after that. Keeney was playing more brilliantly and steadily all the time. In the next inning he made a very difficult cushion masse shot, the prettiest one of the evening.

In the forty-fifth inning he made the high run of 40 points, just beating Townsend's 39, and lost the forty-first point from an easy cushion carrom that called forth groans from the crowd. In this inning his ninth shot was a masse, and it came so near missing that Townsend had stepped forward to play. Keeney was then 41 in the lead, and he held his advantage gamely.

Townsend disappointed his friends by missing many excellent opportunities, and in steadiness and judgment Keeney clearly outclassed him. Edward McLaughlin made an efficient referee.

The scores are:

Frank A. Keeney—0 1 7 7 1 10 0 7 15 2 0 13 0 0 1 0 0 13 0 11 5 20 1 1 1 12 2 0 0 1 1 2 13 0 4 8 10 0 17 6 0 40 0 0 10 5 1 1 8 15 5 4 8. Total, 300; average, 5 20-56; high runs, 40, 20, 17, 15, 15, 13, 13, 13.

Arthur Townsend—0 1 2 2 5 7 0 2 0 8 7 0 1 2 0 0 3 0 0 25 39 1 0 1 3 4 8 26 1 0 16 0 3 0 10 0 0 1 0 5 7 5 0 0 3 5 7 7 3 0 2 13 1 2 7 0 1 1. Total, 252; average, 4 28-56; high runs, 39, 26, 25, 15.

The game this evening will be between Ferdinand Poggenburg and Frank Gardner.

The tournament was handled by the Billiard Committee of the club, consisting of Charles B. Andrews, Chairman; Charles S. Gaubert, Gilbert J. Kitching, and H. F. Mollenhauer. As aids to the present event, a special auxiliary committee was appointed to take charge of the various details, and the members composing this committee are J. Henry Dick, J. Adolph Mollenhauer, R. P. Lethbridge, J. D. Donald, Frank Sperry, F. W. Wurster, Charles Stoppani, George W. Piper, N. H. Evans, Otto F. Struse, Wilson B. Smith, F. M. Price, and Charles F. Nahmmacher. These were all present.

Among other prominent billiard players and clubmen were Orville Oddie, Jr., ex-amateur champion of the Billiard Players' Association; Dr. Jennings, Maurice Daly, Judge Kramer, A. H. Topping, Clinton Starkey, Charles W. Hubbell, John M. Fuchs, George Moulton, Dr. Underwood, Jacob Cromwell, Dr. Ezra Wilson, Millard Smith, P. J. Lauritzen, W. P. Sturgis, E. G. Lattimer, E. Parke Coly, John H. Drescher, Edward Lent, Edward Cauldwell, William Galoger, Max Strauss, Charles Seiler, Henry Seibert, George W. Hawkins, Jr., Frank Taylor, J. H. Bissell, Arthur Gritman, F. D. Mollenhauer, Henry Offerman, James H. Sperry, John McKee, Edward Ehlers, W. P. Cook, Charles H. Wilson, Benjamin W. Wilson, Jr., and Daniel T. Wilson.

SHOOTING ON ARMORY RANGES.

Seventh Regiment Riflemen Begin Their Annual Contest for Prized Trophies for Company Teams.

Company D of the Seventh Regiment made an excellent showing in the annual rifle contest for the Kemp and the Emmons Clark trophies, which began yesterday evening on the regimental rifle ranges. For the former trophy the Fourth Company's team of twenty-five picked marksmen made 499 out of a possible 625 at 200 yards, and 542 out of the same possible maximum score at 500 yards, a total of 1,041, out of a possible 1,250. The record for this trophy is 1,124, made by Company B in 1899. The event was won last year by Company B with a score of 1,089.

The totals for the Kemp Trophy were also counted for the Col. Emmons Clark trophy, together with the scores of another team of twenty-five more men, as the conditions of this match require a team of fifty men. This second team scored 469 at 200 yards and 493 at 500 yards, making a total for the Clark trophy of 2,003. This is within 33 points of Company B's winning score of 2,036 last year. The record for this trophy is 2,144, made by Company F in 1897.

The contest, which is the most important event of the year on the armory ranges, will be continued daily until finished. Yesterday's scores follow:

FIGHT PROMOTERS CONFIDENT.

Cincinnati Business Men Now Favor Jeffries-Ruhlin Bout.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Jan. 14.—The promoters of the Jeffries-Ruhlin contest here Feb. 15 had their inning to-day. Rhlin appeared at a matinée and again to-night, and was not molested. The opposition to the fight, for the first time in more than a week, was not heard from. The Saengerfest Athletic Association is going on with its work at the hall and has let additional contracts. The most important development in favor of the association was the signing of a petition by more than 100 members of the Chamber of Commerce, at the noon session, in favor of having the fight here as scheduled. Unless the political leaders now give an ultimatum against the athletic club the fight will be held here.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 14.—A letter has been received from "Eddie" Cooke, Brady's representative at Cincinnati, in which Cooke states that he has forwarded the Kansas City request for a proposition to Brady at New York, and that an official communication from Brady might be expected within a day or two. Cooke says:

"In the event of the match falling through here, I think Kansas City's convention hall an ideal place for the contest."

The ministers of the Christian Church in Kansas City, at their regular weekly meeting to-day, adopted a resolution protesting against holding the Jeffries-Ruhlin fight in this city. The protest was addressed to the directors of Convention Hall.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 14.—President Kinnane and Matchmaker Sullivan of the Phoenix Athletic Club of this city announced to-day that negotiations are on with William A. Brady and William Madden with a view to securing the Jeffries-Ruhlin fight in the event of the contest being declared off at Cincinnati.

FRANCHISE TAX LAW AMENDMENTS.

The franchise tax law will continue to be an unjust and inequitable measure until the special franchise corporations join with the Legislature in the attempt to devise a rational and fair method of assessment in place of the present secret guesswork system followed by the State Board of Tax Commissioners. It is for the interest of the corporations that enjoy special public franchises, desisting from their hopeless efforts permanently to escape this tax by proving the present law to be unconstitutional, to come forward frankly and candidly with such information, arguments, and statements of principles as may contribute to a sound determination of a question that is now vexatious and very much in the air. If the officers and legal advisers of these corporations will review the situation with open minds we think they must come to this conclusion.

Even though the present crude law be declared unconstitutional the principle of the franchise tax will not be abandoned, first, because it is entirely sound, and second, because the representatives of the people in the Legislature will never be persuaded to exempt from the burden of taxation a class of property of immense value, yielding large revenues, easily reached, and as to which it is the general sense of the community that in the past it has been too lightly burdened and too little subject to wholesome public regulation and control. It was this conviction that produced the present franchise tax law, authorizing the State Tax Commissioners to assess as "real estate" the value of the special franchises of gas and electric lighting companies, railways, including elevated and surface street railways, and other corporations that in addition to the franchise to exist and do business have received special grants and privileges in streets and public places, by virtue of which they enjoy in a greater or less degree a monopoly of the business they carry on. It is too late to argue the principle of the law. The holders of these special franchises, applying their capital and ability to the grants and privileges conferred, have developed large properties that are able to pay and ought to pay their just proportion of the taxes levied by the Government of which they share the benefits and protection. The main question now is to make the method of assessing the value of the franchises uniform and just.

The corporations themselves must have more information on this subject than any one else. We do not ask that they shall put this information at the service of the Legislature from a sense of public duty. It is a little hard to impress a corporation with that feeling. But we hope they will be moved by a prudent and businesslike regard for their own interests to assist in reaching a permanent adjustment as between them and the State that shall leave neither party wronged. They cannot have failed to observe that the tendency of recent tax law revision is to defray the entire cost of the State Government out of special taxes, like the inheritance tax, the Raines law tax, and the franchise tax, the intention being within a short time to discontinue the levying of any direct general tax for State purposes. This policy has been adopted because the State has power to select sources of revenue that are sure, easily reached, productive, and of such a nature that if extravagance at Albany should make the tax burden oppressive, the resulting clamor would be private, not public. When extravagance leads to a high tax rate in the general levy, the people may record their protest at the polls, with consequences most inconvenient to those who have squandered their money. But who cares how much money the State Controller deducts from the estate of a deceased multi-millionaire, or from the annual receipts of a gas company?

Increasing extravagance and the easy concealments of a system of indirect taxation are the leading features of public policy at Albany. The franchise corporations are the natural prey of the authors and beneficiaries of such a policy. As waste and extravagance compel constant additions to the State's income, the State Assessors will be successfully appealed to for higher assessments on the special franchise corporations, just as in this city the inordinate cost of Tammany government is defrayed and in a measure hidden by the expedient of increasing the assessed valuations.

Against these depredations the franchise corporations must defend themselves. The public will be quite indifferent to their sufferings. Their grievances are of a nature not easily redressed by mass meetings. The wise course is to provide in advance against injustice and extortion in the assessment by procuring the amendment of the law. There are about twenty ways of determining franchise valuations now in use in the different States. It is generally conceded that the fairest basis would be net earnings, including interest earned and paid, since that is the real test of the earning power of the corporation. But everybody knows, too, that if the corporations were assessed on this basis they might yield to the sinful temptation to make their net earnings look small to the eye of the assessor. If the corporations can devise a way of making net earnings a satisfactory basis of assessment, as Mr. LAUTERBACH said the other day they would be glad to do, let them show the State some safeguard by which the assessors would be protected against devices of evasion, and urge such an amendment. If, on the other hand, the basis of gross earnings can be made equitable for both interests, let an attempt be made to work out the problem in that way. The factors of original cost, of natural advantages, of varying degrees of skill and economy in management, of fluctuations in business income, and of probable or actual competition all enter into the problem. They make it exceedingly complex and difficult of just solution. The corporations and their advisers know all about these things. The average legislator knows next to nothing about them, and even the best men sent to Albany are scarcely competent to draw a bill that would not violate some of the fundamental natural principles of taxation. The corporations are almost invariably destructive critics of the work of the Legislature, save in those cases where they have been somewhat instrumental in shaping the decisions of that body. They have now a pretty loud call to undertake constructive work by helping to make the franchise tax law equitable and just. There is a Governor in the Executive Chamber who is open to reason and has profited by business experience. The opportunity for sound legislation ought not to be lost.

THE ILL AND GOOD OF A SECOND TERM.

It is announced that a movement of considerable extent is on foot to press in the next session of Congress the Constitutional amendment making the term of the President six years and forbidding a re-election. The movement is said to have some strength in the West and still more in the South. There is little prospect that it will have the slightest success, but there is enough to be said in its favor to influence public opinion as to the ills to which this movement is directed.

The chief objection to the present method is the general belief that the independence of the President is sacrificed and his judgment warped during his first term by his natural desire to obtain a second. For this there is solid foundation in fact. But it is not merely the desire for the election itself that produces the mischief; it is the need of the nomination that makes the election possible. It is to secure the nomination that the President is tempted to make a bad use of the great control he has over the civil service. So far as the important questions of policy are concerned, no President departs very far from what he considers the demands of public opinion, unless he is convinced that the public opinion of the time is mistaken. In that case it is not independence that he sacrifices. Indeed, there is little temptation to ignore or oppose genuine and strong public opinion, because party leaders are always ready to respect it, and the President does not often err in the direction of parting with the leaders of his party. The insidious force that really twists his judgment and blinds him to his duty is the desire to win the support of the men who, he thinks, can bestow or withhold the nomination, and these men care more for patronage than for anything else. They "need it in their business."

It is on this side that President McKINLEY has erred, and his errors have been marked, serious, and inexcusable. He has not only used the powers of his office in direct appointment to conciliate by many unworthy selections the patronage-mongers of his party, but he has allowed the civil service rules which protect the service from the politicians first to be violated with impunity and then to be relaxed with his consent so as actually to throw to the politicians some ten thousand places previously protected by the merit system. We do not mean to say that the desire for a renomination has been the sole motive of this policy, but it is plain that a renomination is the only tangible result he has obtained, since the service has been injured and his own reputation with fair-minded men acquainted with the facts has suffered. So far as this is involved in the question of an obligatory single term, we think that the case of President McKINLEY shows some of the advantages that such an amendment would afford.

There is, however, another side to the question. A President elected for a second term, with the knowledge that a third is forbidden to him by the unwritten law, is situated to be even more independent of the politicians, if he chooses to be, than a President elected for a longer single term. He has no renomination to seek. He has his experience in the office. He knows the real effect of what he has done for the politicians and he cannot be misled by plausible talk. In the case of Mr. McKINLEY, for instance, the consequences of the looseness in enforcing the law of 1883 and the changes in the rules to cover this looseness are undoubtedly clear. If he shall make up his mind to retrace his course and to fulfil the pledge of his party honestly to enforce the law and to extend it wherever practicable, he could place the service on a higher plane than it is now and even higher than he found it four years ago. His hold on the people is such that he could not seriously be opposed by the party politicians, and he could gain by the close of his term a very lofty reputation. If he will determine to do his full and plain duty in this matter and rest on the sense and honesty of the American people to sustain him the very gates of Hannaism cannot prevail against him.

BUYING INTO THE POLICE.

Our correspondent "Doulos," on Sunday, who was told by a Republican Party leader that the payment of money was necessary to obtain an appointment to or a promotion in the police force, would probably find that the same opinion prevails among most of the politicians on both sides. Many of them will say that it is the same, no matter which party is in power, and some of them will say that the corruption prevails at every stage of the process. We are inclined to think that the first of these assertions is grossly exaggerated and that the second is erroneous.

During the time that Mr. ROOSEVELT was at the head of the Police Commission a representative of THE TIMES made a careful investigation of the system of appointment, and he was convinced that if money was paid it was needlessly paid, and was utterly without influence on the results. He followed a number of cases from the appearance of the applicant before the examination board to the actual entrance on the service, and he was clearly of the opinion that at each step in the process the action taken was fair and open. It was not practicable to trace the system of promotion in such detail, and the conclusion was not so imperative, but he found not the slightest evidence of the influence of money. The same man has made himself thoroughly familiar with the system of examinations for police appointment under the present administration, and he is equally convinced that there is no payment and no chance of payment of money to change the action of the examiners under the Civil Service Commissioners. In the matter of promotion there is a chance of favoritism in the making up of the record which must be considered in the marking, but this is done practically entirely in the police offices and the examiners are obliged to accept it in substance as it comes to them.

It is well to keep clearly in mind the distinction between the methods of the Civil Service Commission and the Police Commission, because the apologists of Tammany Hall lose no opportunity to try to shift the responsibility for the corruption in the Police Department from the leader of Tammany to as many shoulders as can be made to bear it. None of it, we are convinced, belongs to the Civil Service Commission or their Board of Examiners.

RUSSIA IN ASIA.

If our State Department were to reply to the singular manifesto of M. DE WITTE it would have to have recourse to more diplomatic language than an American newspaper has any need to employ. It would be disabled, by its traditions and its proprieties, from calling things by their right names. Particularly it would have been disabled from describing M. DE WITTE'S remarks about the situation in China as a series of impudent untruths.

And yet that is what they evidently are, to use the ordinary language of mankind, to anybody who has kept track of the subject to which they relate. Every such person is aware of the perfidy which has attended the transcontinental progress of Russia across Asia, until it has reached, and at last penetrated, the secular barrier of Chinese isolation.

Upon that we might consent to score one for Russia, if she had not shown that she had, nationally, no conception, or at least no willingness to admit any conception, that any other Power than herself had been privy to the coercion of China. Upon this point there is "nothing mean" about the conception of M. DE WITTE. He says that Russia, among her other achievements in China, has "rescued the legations." This is one of the points that mark his whole statement as being intended for home consumption, and entirely irrelevant to any international discussion. Because, not to speak at all of the American or other contingents which, by common consent, have "done their share" of the fighting in China, there was also there a Japanese contingent, which was numerically equal to the Russian contingent, and in every other respect but the numerical, also according to the agreement of all, much more efficient. It was not only indecent for M. DE WITTE to assert that Russia had "rescued the legations." The fact that M. DE WITTE put forward that exclusive and impudent claim was in itself sufficient evidence that the claim was intended exclusively "for home consumption."

Of equal force, in the same direction, is the Minister's equally unqualified statement that Russia will "reduce" her forces in Manchuria as soon as the time arrives when such reduction shall seem to her good. That is but her assurance that when enough Chinamen have been massacred in Manchuria there will come a time when Russia will see her way to reducing her garrisons. But what civilized mankind will wish to know is what excuse Russia has for maintaining garrisons in Manchuria at all. Upon this interesting point the manifesto of the Russian Finance Minister sheds no light. Russia has repeatedly pledged herself to take no territorial advantage by the disturbances. She has equally pledged herself, and to us, to take no commercial advantage, as against us, from any of her movements in Chinese territory. Why, then, these remarks of the Russian Chief Minister of Finance? Does the good man not see any contradiction between the professions of Russia and her acts? Or does he not suppose that we can see the contradiction which must be so evident to him? Seeing that we are the Power that has the greatest interest in the openness of the port of Niu-Chwang, the chief port of Manchuria, and our principal port in China, and seeing also the perfidy which is the most chronic characteristic of Russian diplomacy, it seems that the President of the United States would be well advised, whenever he was warned that that very wily man, Count CASSINI, was coming to see him, to call upon the Secretary of State to fill his ears with wax, and lash him to the mast, as was, in like circumstances, done by the many-counseled and much-enduring Ulysses.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—Nothing could more clearly reveal the intellectual status of the people who oppose vaccination than a letter which we have just received from a resident of Morris Heights, this city, who is offended because we called attention to the fact that, of all the inmates of a lodging house in which a case of smallpox appeared, only two men who refused to be vaccinated contracted the disease. We cannot reproduce the characteristic handwriting of our amiable correspondent, or the pale brown ink which seems always to go with spelling like his, but we can present enough to tell the story. Observe:

> Judging from that article condeming the anti-vaccinationists (in Topics of the Times yesterday You seem to be trying to cause a permanent injury to the Human Race. Anyone who cares for the welfare of their children would never permit this vile practise. And as for compulsary vaccination, we would a thousand times prefer death than permit our bodies violated this way. I would advise that fearful writer in yesterdays times to get rid of his filth and sleep in a properly ventilated room, and try and live as God intended men should live, and he will never fear smallpox. As to our noble health board blaming this outbreak to the virius running out. How about the coal strike and the high price of coal compelling the poor to huddle together, a dozen in a small unventilated room, to keep warm? smallpox germs being hatched by the thousands. I think the Health Board had better confine their attension to the cause of this troubls. But tell them remember that those who havs the welfare of the Human race at heart, will stand no more of this nonsense.

Of course, we do not contend that a man is necessarily wrong on any given question simply because he uses pale brown ink, and is on bad terms with his dictionary, but still, when the contention is about a matter on which only educated men have a right to speak, peculiarities like those here illustrated do have a direct bearing on the discussion.

—There is some excuse for the suspicion which one of our readers has put in picturesque form by declaring that the Tammany Committee of Five "is adroitly endeavoring to 'change colors' in our crusade against vice." He explained his meaning by the statement that "it is not the red lanterns on the lower east side, but the green lanterns all over the city, where the real dangers are brooding." The green lantern, as not quite all New Yorkers will remember at first thought, is the sign of the police station, and it is entirely correct to say that when the light from that source has once been rendered pure and clear no eyes will be seriously offended by rays of the more violent hue. It is an unquestionable fact that the originator of the present movement made the green lamps, and not the red ones, the object of his attack, and in so far as the Committee of Five have distracted attention from one to the other class of illuminants they have "changed colors" and the purpose of the crusade. Whether this was their purpose or not—and it is not absolutely necessary to believe that it was—we doubt if the public mind has been confused to any great extent. Whatever else the metropolitan population may lack, it is fairly well equipped with intelligence, and it is not easily deceived either as to the nature or the cause of its troubles. Nobody here is unaware that the police force is in the exact centre of the present storm. The policemen, big and little, know it particularly well, and all their actions prove their consciousness that any devastation worked elsewhere is merely incidental. The banner first raised is still at the head of the attacking column, and for a while at least it is not going to be displaced, however many may be those raised in its vicinity.

—In commenting on some expressions of weariness with the length of the Philippine war which appeared in this paper, The Montreal Star, speaking as an expert in matters colonial, asserts that American impatience with the situation in the Far East is due in part to a misconception of the size and difficulty of the task we undertook to perform, and in part to our failure to credit the Spaniards with the full measure of their past successes. "Admit," says The Star, "that the Spanish troops knew what they were about; that their intimate knowledge of the people they were fighting with, and acquaintance with the country in which the operations were being carried on, gave them exceptional advantages over any strangers who had just arrived in the islands. Admit that the mere fact of troops made up of all nationalities being enlisted in an Anglo-Saxon country does not make them demi-gods. With these admissions—and they might as well be made, because they are truths—the people of the United States have no cause to be disappointed nor to expect as successful work as the Spanish did, until the United States troops are as well acclimated, as familiar with the natives they are fighting, and as much at home in the country as the Spaniards were." This presentation of the case is not without its merits, but it ignores several important considerations. In the first place, no American ever questioned the courage of the Spaniards, or even denied them a certain efficiency in doing the things they wanted to do. What we worry about is not that we have not done as well as our predecessors, for we think we have already done very much better than they had even an inclination to do, but that the ends which we have set before us do not seem to be in process of speedy attainment. And possibly we did not trust quite so confidently to our Anglo-Saxonism as The Star thinks. We use that word, to be sure, in talking of our capacities, but not so often as do, for instance, the Canadians, or in the sense they give it. Our trust, really, is in Americanism, a vastly different quality, and it has served us so well in the past that we have a good right to be not less surprised than grieved that the effects anticipated have not yet been achieved in the Philippines. And, though America is impatient, it is not in the slightest degree despairing, nor has it even thought of admitting that the obstacles with which we are contending are in the nature of things insuperable. We are only eager to find a new and better line of attack.

—It is much to be regretted that Mr. FAYE finds it inexpedient to explain why he resigned the Superintendency of the Cuban public schools. He hints plainly enough at some mysterious misunderstanding or incompatibility between himself and Gen. WOOD; but he does not tell the exact nature of the trouble, and the consequence is that our minds are filled with uneasy questionings. It was the impression in the United States was eminently well fitted to fill the position intrusted to him, just as it is the general conviction here that the present Governor of Cuba has been and is the right man in the right place. Why, then, could the two not work together in harmony to the credit of their country and to the inestimable advantage of the island? A mere confusing of school rooms and school houses ought not to have been difficult of amicable settlement, and since no settlement was effected the deduction is inevitable that something was seriously wrong on one side or the other. What the something was is sure to come out sooner or later, and no possible profit from delaying the elucidation is obvious. Was public money diverted from proper objects? Was a faithful official the victim of political machinations? The alternative explanation has been presented in a whisper, but it will be discussed aloud, and only a frank statement of grievances will reveal, if there is one, an escape from a choice that is in itself a National calamity. We all want to believe thoroughly in both Gen. WOOD and Mr. FRYE, but we want even more to know the facts and to accord praise and blame in accordance with them. Scandals in the Cuban administration are bad enough, but a half-suppressed scandal is worse by far than one the free ventilation of which has been followed by justice and reform.

Bills of the Play.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

An acquaintance takes pride in the fact that he has retained the programmes of theatre, opera, concert, &c., performances that he has attended during many past years. A collection of programmes of this sort, and where one has attended the performances represented, especially if the period covered is fifteen or twenty years, cannot but be of rare value and interest to the possessor. A programme should be a souvenir, and I know I should, and I believe many others would, have made a collection of programmes on the same lines as my acquaintance if from a tasteful or artistic point of view the average programme of to-day or yesterday was worth the preserving.

The old-time bill of the play stands in dignified contrast, with the smutchy inked advertising sheet in which the programme is an incident, to which the theatre or operagoer must at present submit. I believe this is hitting pretty hard at a certain field of advertising which has been developed largely of late years, but really I don't think the average theatregoer wants the subjects of hair dye, pickles, and corn remedy obtruded upon his notice when he is comfortably ensconced in an expensive seat ready to indulge in an artistic feast.

I respectfully beg to suggest a reform, and the two-dollar theatres can afford it. Let the programme be a souvenir—no advertising. If necessary, a nominal charge of 3 or 5 cents can be made. If advertising there must be, make it so the advertising matter can be detached and the programme preserved in its integrity as a true

His Parish Opposes Canteen.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am a daily reader of your paper. Permit me to say that your editorial on the army canteen outrages the sentiments of the sensible, Christian people of this parish. We are 3,000 souls. This is the largest Methodist parish on Manhattan Island. Representing this people, I have sent a petition to both our United States Senators requesting them to take the same action that the House of Representatives did in opposing the canteen. The Methodist people of this city are solid against the canteen. Many of our boys are in the army, and they tell the same story about the curse of this thing.

In your editorial you antagonize the distinctly and repeatedly expressed conviction of tens of thousands of Methodists in New York. Speaking for this parish of 3,000 souls, I desire to say to you that we are doing our utmost by petition and letters to secure the abolition of the drink feature of the canteen.

Suggestion to the Fire Department.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your editorial of this date I notice your comments upon the bad management at car stable fire in West Fifty-third Street as regards to interruption of street-car traffic, and your suggestion that the tripods to carry the hose over cars be carried upon the fire trucks instead of being kept at car stables, as at present. I would ask if the writer ever examined the loads the fire trucks already carry. Ladders, nets, tools &c., which they need for saving life. If he did I think he would wonder how the horses ever drew them to fires in snowy weather. I would suggest that the tripods be carried upon the roof of every tenth car, and the employes of street car companies put them up, as firemen are pretty busy at such a fire as the car stables referred to, and which eyewitnesses competent to judge say was one of the best-managed fires in the history of the Fire Department.

A Saving Suggestion.

Somebody gave the boy a dachshund. The boy's father doesn't like dogs.

"How did that cur get in the house?" he shouted, when he caught sight of the long, low, rakish canine.

The boy hesitated. He didn't want to lose the dog.

"He looks as if he might have come in through the water pipe, daddy," he said, with an anxious grin.

He still has the dog.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THE POOR HEATHEN.

Josh Wink in Baltimore American.

Let us go and find the heathen; let us take him by the hand;
Let us take his evil from him; let us also take his land;
Let us break it to him gently that it's wrong to be so nude,
And inculcate proper notions of the style, as it's pursued.
Let us show him all the glories of the white man's kingdom come,
And, by way of introduction, sell him lots of white man's rum.

Let us seek our heathen brother in benighted lands afar,
And impress him with the wrongness of his habits as they are;
Let us guide him slowly, surely, till he's nobly civilized,
And has banished all his foibles, all his fancies, so despised;
Let us show him how he's destined to go forward with a jump,
Lest our grand, resistless progress takes him 'midship with a bump.

Let us teach him that the bolo and the dagger are not right,
When the seven-shooter follows up its barking with a bite;
Let us bring to him the gospel of the shirt, and full-dress suit,
And the glad and glorious tidings of the proper shoe or boot.
Let us lift the poor old heathen from the bog wherein he sticks,
And explain to him the beauties of the game of politics.

Thus we'll labor with the pagan till he understands our ways
And will ponder with a shudder on his old unhappy days.
We will stock his land with clothing, we will dot it with golf links,
And he'll hail the architecture of the home of fancy drinks;
And we'll get the glory for it—for the good that we will do—
All the grand, impressive glory—and we'll get his money, too.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL

Julia Marlowe as the Self-Willed Sister of Bluff King Hal.

"When Knighthood Was in Flower" at the Criterion Theatre—Other Changes of Bill.

Julia Marlowe, with all her accustomed buoyancy and her unfailing youthful charm, acted the heroine's part in a new play at the Criterion Theatre last evening. She was greeted with affectionate enthusiasm by an exceedingly large audience.

Miss Marlowe's popularity here has largely increased of late, and while her acting at its best, in this hour of her golden prime, still falls short of the multitudinous excellence proclaimed for it by her noisy followers in her novitiate, she is at least an actress of exceptional talent with a considerable range of expression, while her personal charm is rare and ever potent. Of her new play, too, it may be fairly said that in the single desirable quality of vitality it excels any of the other recent dramatizations of romantic novels.

"When Knighthood was in Flower" is a stage version by Paul Kester of a novel by Charles Major, which is believed to be as well known throughout the country as the most favored tooth powder and brand of pills. It is in four acts and five tableaus, and its incidents occur in England and France in the early years of the sixteenth century. Its heroine is Mary Tudor, sister of Henry VIII., by him wedded against her will to weak old Louis XII. of France.

Mary is a composite of many personages of fiction and, generally speaking, an interesting young person. She is Beatrice and Rosalind and Juliet all in one, with a hint of merry Constance in "The Love Chase" and much more than a hint of Katharine the Shrew. But she is even more than that.

In her broadly comical antics and the spirit of mischief that sometimes controls her, she reminds one of Nan the Goodfor-nothing and of Peggy Thrift in "The Country Girl." She betroths herself to a humble gentleman of her brother's Court and plagues him shamefully, and when there seems to be no other way out of marrying old Louis she compels her English lover to elope with her. She wears boy's clothes and tries to swagger.

They are pursued and captured and, to save her lover's life, she then consents to wed the French King; but, after his early death, though the new King, Francis, plagues her with dishonoroble attentions, she manages to escape to England and marries her English gentleman, who is created Duke of Suffolk.

The demands of the rôle upon the powers of the actress may fairly be called enormous. She has to express a wide range of passion and emotion. The scene in which Mary declares her love to Charles Brandon and the other purely sentimental passages are written with a good knowledge of theatric effect, (better than is revealed in some of the more ambitious episodes,) and are capable of being invested with much fervor and passionate expression. Miss Marlowe treats them with delightful tact, but they are a small part of her task.

She has one scene in which she tries to play the man in the presence of a crowd of half drunken roysterers; another, in which she goes into a fury of rage, like Katharine in "The Taming of the Shrew," and drives the whole Court from her bedchamber; another, in which she is locked in a room and attacked by a melodramatic monster, when she is like Sardou's Tosca at bay. Also, she is frequently comic, not to say utterly preposterous, and plays Columbine and Clown combined in a merry harlequinade to the Pantaloon of her old-young brother.

For Henry VIII., who was in his early twenties in these days, is portrayed by an elderly actor, while his Queen, beautiful Katharine of Aragon, is represented by the first old lady of Miss Marlowe's company, though she was then not yet thirty. Other historical personages introduced are Wolsey, then Bishop of Lincoln; the Duke of Buckingham, whom Shakespeare makes a gallant gentleman, but here depicted as a mean cur; great Francis, in his youth; Will Somers, the historic jester, and pert Anne Boleyn, already, it seems, anxious to be a Queen.

In the circumstances, the play lacks dignity and any sort of historical atmosphere, and it is not to be taken very seriously. But it is often entertaining, especially in the earlier scenes, (the second and third acts, with all their extravagance, are capably put together and effective,) and with Miss Marlowe's pleasing, vigorous, and generally satisfying acting, "When Knighthood Was in Flower" ought to draw well for a long time.

The setting is handsome, and the costumes of the principal personages are rich and sufficiently true to the early Tudor modes. The solidity of the old English interiors is especially notable and commendable. The incidental music, of a sentimental or sacerdotal character, is also satisfactory and the ensemble is effective.

Bruce McRae carries the hero's rôle in the manner of Forbes Robertson, whom he somewhat resembles. He scarcely represents any ideal cherished hereabout of a hero of romance, yet his acting is not deficient in vigor, has appreciable, if not irresistible, fervor, and is admirable in the encounter with sword and dagger in Act I. A better fencing scene has not been put on the stage in all this revival of romance.

Charles Harbury denotes the follies of Henry (they are almost his only traits in this play) with good understanding, and is fairly capable in indicating his choler. Wilfrid North is rather overworked as two several rascals, an adventurer and a French Dauphin made King. Nora Lamison is graceful and pretty as the confidant, while a lady named on the bill Claire Kulp is a rather attractive figure as pert and malicious Anne Boleyn.

THE OPERA SEASON.

Boito's "Mefistofele" Performed Before a Large Audience.

It was four years ago that the lovers of opera last heard Boito's "Mefistofele" at the Metropolitan Opera House. It was brought forward again last night, and much to the astonishment of those who do not regard it as a popular opera, there were a large audience and several remarkable outbursts of enthusiasm. Nevertheless it is safe to predict that the opera will not be heard very many times in the course of the season. When it was last brought forward it was given four times, but it is necessary to bear in mind that at that time there was a general public interest in the Marguerite of Mme. Calvé, then a novelty here. The assumption of a new rôle by this gifted and erratic singer has invariably been the cause of some disturbance of public equanimity. But Boito's "Mefistofele" is not made on the popular last. There is very little saccharine sentiment in it, and the love-making episode is reduced to a minimum. On the other hand, the scenes are disjointed, and the story is so incompletely told that only those who are acquainted with Goethe's poem can understand the tale. Subtlety in treatment and suggestiveness of detail are found throughout the score, but the whole work is episodic, fragmentary, and unsatisfying.

There was a time when this was regarded as a great opera, but we are growing wiser. We have learned from Verdi's "Aida" how tragic force can be expressed, from his "Otello" how psychologic subtleties can be translated into wondrous tone poems, and from his "Falstaff" how an infinite variety of explanatory detail can be given to the orchestra without detracting from the puissant beauty of the vocal parts. We have had no need to go outside the domain of Italian opera to find modern standards by which the measure of Boito's importance were reduced. If perchance the long-awaited "Nerone" is ever brought to light, we may find that Boito has advanced along the path of recent Italian opera progress; but we more than half suspect that the continued postponement of "Nerone" is due to its composer's inability to catch up with the march.

The performance last night served to bring to the acquaintance of the New York public Miss Marguerite Macintyre, an English soprano, who has long been known to London, and who made her bow last night as Marguerite. If Miss Macintyre had not been known so long to London, her debut here would have been happier. Time was when she had a glorious voice, the envy of some singers who now may do what is not for her. But she has worn the velvet off all her tones and undermined the power of her middle register by singing parts with continued high passagea. As heard last night, she conveyed the impression of a singer whose best days had gone. She showed skill as an actress, though not inspiration, and her work betrayed more temperament than we usually note in singers of her nationality. Her conception of the part was a good one and well developed. The audience received her with extraordinary cordiality, and dismissed her with evidences of approval quite incomprehensible to cool observers.

Mr. Cremonini was the Faust, and was by no means happy. His voice had a distressingly pallid quality last night, more so than usual, and this affords ground for suspicion that he was not physically at his best. And candor compels the admission that his impersonation was not distinguished by much poetic warmth or mimetic grace. Mr. Plançon was once again the Mefistofele. This is without question one of his most felicitous impersonations. The character is excellently suited to his methods, and he delivers the music with admirable skill. His "So lo spirito che nega" was excellently done, and indeed much of the merit of the performance was due to him. Mme. Homer was the Martha and Mr. Masiero the Wagner—a very bad one. In the classic scene the soprano and contralto had the usual parts.

The opera was very well put on the stage. The chorus sang fairly, and the prologue, thanks to Mr. Mancinelli's enthusiastic conducting and the good work of the orchestra, went with fine effect. The Brocken scene was well managed, and the terpsichorean deviltry was picturesque.

THEATRES AND MUSIC HALLS.

EDEN MUSEE.—The new wax groups attracted considerable attention yesterday. The daily concerts continue.

HARLEM OPERA HOUSE.—John Hare and his English company began their tour last night with "The Gay Lord Quex."

HUBER'S MUSEUM.—Many of the features of last week's bill have been retained for the current week. In the theatre there is a vaudeville company of much merit.

DEWEY THEATRE.—The Utopian Burlesquers gave for their first part "In Grand Utopia," followed by an olio, which was considerably above the average performance.

AMERICAN THEATRE.—The revival of the popular melodramatic play called "The Ensign" yesterday by the stock company of this theatre was witnessed by a large audience last evening. The play was presented in a very creditable manner, and apparently pleased every one.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Ward and Vokes, in their musical farce "The Floor Walkers," opened auspiciously their annual engagement of a week at this house. A large and obviously appreciative audience shook with laughter over the innumerable "funnyisms" and grotesque comicalities of these two comedians.

KOSTER & BIAL'S MUSIC HALL.—The three principal features of a many hours' continuous show that was in every way up to the customary Hashim standard were the Tavary Opera Company, Harvey Le Clair, and the combination Annie Hart, Lavendar, and Tomson. The remaining part of the entertainment consisted of the Hiatts, Fox and Foxie, Morrell and Evans, and Scott and Wilson.

MURRAY HILL THEATRE.—The Donnelly Stock Company's revival of "The Man from Mexico" proved to be immensely popular with the patrons of this playhouse, which all of the recent farces have demonstrated. The same enthusiasm as seen in the other farces was created in the leading scenes of this piece, and it was evident that several members of the company fully improved the opportunities given by the characters in this play.

PROCTOR PALACE.—Thomas Nawn, the Irish comedian, presented his new character sketch called "Pat and the Gent." Its humorous features were thoroughly appreciated. Other interesting features in the bill were Carroll Johnson, Ralph Johnstone, the stair-climbing bicyclist; Three Mascagnos, European acrobats; Ida Van Siclen and company in "A Sporty Education," the Hawaiian Queens in their operetta "The Queen's Fan," Adele Purvis Onri on the revolving globes, Gaspard brothers, Mexican axe jugglers, and others.

HURTIG & SEAMON'S MUSIC HALL.—The entertainment offered this week is interesting from beginning to end. Daniel E. Bandman presented a one-act comedy entitled "David Garrick." He was followed by Milton and Dolly Nobles in their comedy, "Why Walker Reformed." Ameta was seen in a number of French illusions and illuminated dances. The four Collinses, Florence Bindley, Alf Grant, Baker and Lynn, and Howard's ponies, dogs, and monkeys made up the remaining part of the programme.

PROCTOR'S TWENTY-THIRD STREET THEATRE.—Clayton White and Marie Stuart made a laughing success yesterday in their farce, "Diokey." Mlle. Delbosq, in a slack-wire act, proved picturesque and novel. Others were Cushman, Holcombe and Curtis in "The New Teacher," Jane Whitbeck, singing comedienne; Johnnie Carroll, dialect-singing comedian; Winona and Banks Winter in a lively singing specialty; Press Eldridge, the black-faced monologist; Jess Vernon, unique ventriloquist; Fine and Dandy, acrobats, and the kalatechnoscope moving pictures.

PROCTOR'S HARLEM THEATRE.—George W. Monroe, whose "My Aunt Bridget" is familiar to nearly all theatregoers, was the leading comedy star at this house yesterday. Charles R. Sweet, the burglar musician, also proved interesting. Other pleasing numbers included Al Leech and the Three Rosebuds in the singing and dancing skit "Examination Day at School"; Lew Hawkins, styled "The Thespherfield of Minstrelsy"; Maxwell and Simpson, song illustrators; Montague and West, instrumental artists; Three Juggling Barretts, club jugglers; May Evans, vocalist; Carl Reinhold, sand painter, and a score of others.

KEITH'S UNION SQUARE THEATRE.—Della Fox returned to this city yesterday after an absence of some weeks. The act presented was a repetition of the one seen in other continuous houses this season, which included two songs, one a "coon" ditty and the other the familiar song called "Pretty Girl," from "Wang." The rest of the long bill is of much excellence, and includes the Quaker City Quartet, Techow's performing cats and dogs, Lew Sully with his monologue, Stanley and Wilson, and Max Cincinnati and his clever juggling act. Louise Gunning sang several Scotch ballads, and Mrs. Katherine Bloodgood sang several charming songs.

PROCTOR'S FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE.—Papinta will complete her final week at this house, who, with Jean Marcel's reproductions of famous paintings and basreliefs, were the features. The new specialties seen were Harry Watson's Comedy Company in the farce "The Two Flats," the Newsky Troupe of Russian dancers and singers, Mr. and Mrs. Perkins D. Fisher in the rural playlet "The Half-Way House," John T. Thorne and Grace Carleton, farcical duo; Sager Midgley and Gertie Carlisle, juvenile skit; Alf Grant; Linton and McIntyre, comedy singing sketch; Charles B. Ward, vocalist, and Martine brothers, grotesque acrobats.

ADA REHAN HAS THE GRIP.

Did Not Appear in "Sweet Nell of Old Drury" Last Night.

For the first time in twelve years Miss Ada Rehan was compelled to disappoint her audience last night. An attack of the grip was the cause. On the advice of her physician she decided to abandon her performance of "Sweet Nell of Old Drury" at the Knickerbocker Theatre, and in consequence of this many had their money refunded, while others exchanged their tickets.

During the last few days Miss Rehan has been suffering from a slight attack of the grip, to which she gave little attention. It became worse, but not until yesterday afternoon were her symptoms so alarming that her doctor informed her that she must not play.

It is confidently expected that Miss Rehan will be sufficiently recovered to give a performance this evening.

TAX BOOKS FOR 1901 OPEN FOR INSPECTION

Total Assessed Valuation of New York City, $3,033,715,654.

MR. FEITNER'S STATEMENT

Tables Showing Assessed Valuations in Particular Instances as Compared with Last Year—Franchise Tax Law.

The tax books for 1901, showing the assessed valuations on real estate, were opened for public inspection and correction yesterday. President Feitner gave out a statement showing the assessed valuation of real property in the five boroughs of the city in 1901 as compared with 1900.

The total assessed valuation of all real estate in the City of New York—five boroughs included—for 1901 is $3,033,715,654. The assessments last year amounted to $2,948,853,849, which makes the increase for this year $84,861,805.

In Manhattan valuations have been increased $53,101,540—which is only a normal increase on account of improvements made on property, but in a few sections valuations have been raised slightly on each plot of property. This is so of Upper Broadway property, which the experts found to be assessed at what they consider too low a figure last year.

Lower Broadway realty has not been burdened with any increase in assessments, and in several instances decreases have been made in the valuations. The question as to the tax rate becomes an important one now that the real estate assessments have been made public. The tax officials have many muddles to straighten out before the public can be informed as to the probable tax rate for 1901.

One of the most important matters is the franchise tax law. If this law is declared unconstitutional, then, the Legislature will be called upon by the officials of the Tax Department to make up this deficit in order to save the people from a twenty-point raise in the tax rate as compared with 1900.

Tenement house property has not been forced to bear any additional burden this year over last year. An examination of block after block of tenement house property on the east and west sides disclosed the fact that the assessments for 1900 and 1901 were identical. The residences of the wealthy on Fifth Avenue have also been assessed at the same amounts as last year, with the exception of a few large residences which have been completed, and the increase in the assessments is for improvements.

The homes of the politicians have not been overburdened. The residences of Richard Croker, John Whalen, John F. Carroll, Mayor Van Wyck, and John J. Scannell have not increased in value according to the books of the Tax Department. The only exception is the residence of President Feitner of the Department of Taxes and Assessments. His house, 10 East Ninety-second Street, was assessed for $18,500 in 1900, and in 1901 Mr. Feitner will have to pay taxes on $20,500.

The buildings occupied by the prominent clubs have not been assessed at the same values as in 1900.

The increase of $5,497,795 in the valuation of real estate in the Borough of the Bronx is, according to the tax officials, caused by the erection of new buildings. The increase of $13,999,460 in the Borough of Brooklyn has been made for the same causes.

The tax rate problem is one which the city officials will have to contemplate. If the franchise tax law is upheld by the courts and the corporations pay into the city Treasury the sum of about $6,000,000 in taxes, then the problem will be simplified.

There would be then no increase in the tax rate—or at the most a very slight one—because of the additional taxes to be collected on the sum of $84,861,805, the increase made in real estate valuations in the five boroughs in 1901 as compared with 1900. The Tax Department has also the assessments on personal property to fall back on to prevent an increase in the tax rate. From statements made by President Feitner and other tax officials yesterday, it was apparent that a more vigorous effort would be made this year to make the possessors of millions of personal property of every kind pay a larger amount in taxes, so as to relieve real estate.

FIXING RESPONSIBILITY.

The one point which became apparent yesterday was that the Department of Taxes and Assessments would shoulder on the Republican Legislature any responsibility for the higher tax rate caused by the possible declaration by the courts of the unconstitutionality of the franchise tax law. Tax Commissioner Salmon said:

"If the franchise tax law brings into the city treasury the amount of taxes due on account of the franchises held by the different corporations it will have an appreciable effect to lower the tax rate. If the law is declared to be unconstitutional, then the City of New York should call on the Legislature to make up the deficit by the passage of another act. I think the franthise tax law has come to stay. At the present time the system is very much muddled. The law gave to several Republican lawyers the responsibility of assessing as real estate the franchise values held by the street railroads and other corporations in the streets of New York. This could have been done much better by the experts in the Department of Taxes and Assessments. The Legislature took this power away from the local department and placed the power in the hands of a State Commission on the legal fiction that the streets of New York are public highways, although the City of New York has the power to grant the franchises, and should receive all the return in the shape of taxes."

"What effect does the present system have on your department?" was asked.

"In the first place, the books showing the assessments on real estate in all the five boroughs by the charter have to be opened for public inspection on the second Monday in January. Now the question of the franchise taxes is all in a muddle because the State Board is not required to file with the local Department of Taxes and Assessments the assessments under the special act declaring franchises to be assessable as real estate until late in April. We have to hurry these entries on our books, and we do not know how much in assessments is levied under the franchise tax law until it is near time to close the books."

Commissioner Salmon declined to make any statement as to whether the failure to collect the franchise taxes would increase the tax rate except to say that the budget had been increased $7,000,000 in 1901 over 1900, and the sum of money would have to be made up some way.

The following official statement was given out by President Feitner of the Department of Taxes yesterday:

"This department organized, as stated in our July report of 1899, a Bureau of Information and Records, where we could, systematically keep accurate and reliable record, not only of matters affecting real estate, from the official records in the Register's and other offices, but also information obtainable in relation to estates and corporations, and, to some extent, of individuals. The results of the organization of this bureau will be apparent in the equalized values, both of realty and personalty, for this year, but particularly personalty.

"I was quoted in some of the papers a few days ago as saying that the rate would be twenty points higher this year than the rate for 1900. Such a statement was not given to the press by me, but the fact was stated to reporters, which was known some three months ago, that the budget had been increased some $7,000,000, and, as a matter of necessity, would be increased unless valuations were found which would maintain the present rate. Valuations affect the rate, it is true, but this department at no time has permitted the rate to affect valuations. We assess property, and when we are complete in our assessments, the valuation of the property so found, constitutes the basis of the amount upon which calculation is made for the necessary expenses of the government, and from these deductions the rate is determined, and as we have no part in fixing the rate, we disclaim any intention to affect it in any respect.

"We can say, however, without regard to its effect upon the rate, that the department has made a strenuous effort to get a larger amount of personal property than heretofore, and that our hope and expectation is to show a considerable increase over the valuations of personality held of last year, an expectation in which we are justified by information obtained for us through our Bureau of Information and Records.

"We also desire to say that for the convenience of those taxpayers whom it concerns, applications for the correction of personal assessments only of residents of the Bronx, Brooklyn, Queens, and Richmond will be heard at the main office in Manhattan."

Following is a summary of assessed valuation of real property for the year 1901:

Borough.	1900.	Increase.	1901.
Manhattan	$2,064,738,086	$53,101,540	$2,127,840,526
The Bronx	131,222,600	5,497,795	136,720,395
Brooklyn	612,133,348	13,999,460	626,132,808

Richmond	40,367,860	582,270	40,950,130
Total	$2,948,853,849	$84,861,805	$3,033,715,654

The following tables show the assessed valuations in particular instances, as compared with last year. The object is to show the different classes of property and the comparative valuations placed in 1901, as compared with 1900:

President Feitner declined yesterday to make public the personal assessments levied for 1901. He said about personal tax matters:

"There are about 10,000 new names added to the personal tax rolls in Manhattan. In Brooklyn the increase is still larger, there being about 15,000 names added. Altogether there has been added to the levy made on personal property $2,000,000,000. This large increase in names may cause some comment. The assessments on corporation and personal property are made arbitrarily and are purely tentative. The method of taxing corporations is to take the capital stock book given in the book of Directors and tax accordingly. Much of this capital may be in other States. This will necessarily reduce the assessments in many cases to a minimum, and it would be certainly unfair to make public these figures, as it would be ridiculous in many instances."

Printed announcements of the opening of the tax books will be sent to all the corporations and those assessed for personal taxes. The tax payers will have until May 1 to appear and swear off their personal taxes if they so desired.

The books will then be closed, to be reopened on July 1, when they will show the final assessments.

It was learned late yesterday afternoon that President Feitner of the Board of Taxes and Assessments was served with a formal order for the lists of millionaires personally taxed during the day. The order was secured by the Press Publishing Company. The Tax Commissioners will conelder the matter at their meeting on next Wednesday morning.

S. O. PELL AS GOOD SAMARITAN.

Took Pity on Cab Horse and Made Complaint but Withdrew It Later.

Attired in evening dress, and breaking an appointment to dine with friends, S. Osgood Pell rode up and down between Park and Third Avenues last evening in Thirty-fifth Street, for the purpose of judging as to the fitness of a broken-down cab horse to continue its journey. He was seated on the box between Henry Meyer, the driver, and Policeman Tomney of the East Thirty-fifth Street Station, and took the ride at the request of Sergt. Daly of that station, to whom he had complained against Meyer, declaring that the animal was unfit to be driven a foot further, and in whose behalf he was breaking his engagement.

Mr. Pell resides at 542 Fifth Avenue. Last evening, while he was on his way to dine with his friends, walking down Fifth Avenue, he saw Meyer driving a thin and emaciated horse to a cab, coming through Thirty-fifth Street. The horse jogged along with drooping head, limping and wheezing, and appeared to be almost on the verge of exhaustion.

Every step or two the driver would snap his whip under the animal's sides and urge it forward. Mr. Pell stood for a minute and watched the horse and driver. Then he called to Meyer as he brought the thong of his whip down with more than usual severity over the horse's sides and commanded him to stop. The driver told him to mind his business.

Mr. Pell continued his remonstrances. He even offered Meyer the sum he would reasonably expect to make in his night's work, but this Meyer refused. Meyer refused to promise to take the animal back to the stables of Robert Hall, at 52 East Sixty-first Street, from whom he said he had engaged him for the night, and then Mr. Pell summoned Policeman Tomney.

To the policeman Mr. Pell made a complaint to the effect that Meyer was guilty of cruelty to animals, and that he wanted him arrested. Tomney declined to take an initiative step in the matter, and suggested that all go to the station house and place the case before Sergt. Daly.

Daly explained to Mr. Pell that Meyer was not really the responsible party, and insisted that Hall was the man who should be brought to account.

"But," remonstrated Mr. Pell, "the horse is almost ready to drop from exhaustion. He can't last all night. I do not want to prosecute this man. I merely desire to save the horse."

"Go out and ride up and down the block a bit," said the Sergeant, "and when you come back, if you still think this man should be arrested and prosecuted, I'll take your complaint."

"All right, Sergeant," said Mr. Pell, after he had walked the horse up and down; "I guess you are right about this. The horse is used to it, I guess. Anyway, Meyer seems to be honest about it all, so I'll withdraw my complaint."

STRUGGLED FOR A CHILD.

Mother and Grandmother Create a Scene on Eighth Avenue.

A crowd quickly gathered at Twenty-first Street and Eighth Avenue yesterday morning to witness a struggle between two well-dressed women for possession of a young boy. The elder, a white-haired woman, was calling loudly for help, and the boy was crying. A policeman rushed to the scene after a time and placed all the parties under arrest. The younger woman said she was Mrs. Grace R. Franklin and that the boy was her son. The older woman said she was the boy's grandmother and that she was the mother of Dr. Spencer Franklin of 336 West Thirty-fifth Street.

The party was taken to the station, and thence to the Jefferson Market Police Court, where the younger woman was arraigned. She said she had been separated from her husband for five months, and in all that time he had refused to allow her to see her child. She had caught sight of her boy yesterday in company with his grandmother, and she could not resist the temptation to go over and kiss him. The boy wanted to go with her, and she had tried to take him, when the struggle ensued.

The Magistrate told her that this was no way to go about getting possession of her child and advised her to go to the Supreme Court and get a writ of habeas corpus. He said he could do nothing else than order the child given back into the custody of the grandmother.

Then ensued a scene. The little boy refused to go to his grandmother and wept and clung to his mother, crying, "I want to go with mamma." The mother held the child to her bosom and covered him with kisses, while her tears dropped and sparkled on his coat and sailor cap. The boy absolutely refused to be dragged away from his mother, and the Magistrate ordered the latter to come up on the bridge and ordered a policeman to lead the child toward the door. Then the grandmother attempted to take him, but the boy hung back and called to his mother to come to him. A policeman was ordered to accompany the grandmother and boy to their home. Then the mother was discharged.

Dr. Franklin instituted a suit for divorce from his wife in the Brooklyn Supreme Court last week. The Franklins were married in 1892, when the bride was only sixteen years old. It was a runaway match, the girl having left school to get married. The acts complained of by the husband in his suit for divorce are alleged to have taken place in Honduras, where the Franklins were staying during the latter part of 1899.

BENJAMIN B. H. WHARTON DEAD.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., Jan. 14.—Benjamin B. H. Wharton, a retired Chief Engineer of the United States Navy, died at his home, 69 Christopher Street, Montclair, yesterday of heart trouble.

Mr. Wharton was born in Stevensburg, Va., sixty-eight years ago to-day. In 1863 he enlisted in the navy as an engineer, and during the blockade at Charleston was on the old monitor Patapsco. His last cruise before retirement six years ago was on the warship Lancaster. He was a member of the Philadelphia Commandery, Loyal Legion, and of the Naval Order of the United States. After his retirement he came to Montclair. One son survives him.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday morning at 10:45 from his late residence. The remains will be taken to Philadelphia for interment.

WOMAN'S LAW CLASS ALUMNAE.

The alumnae of the woman's law class of New York University held their annual meeting at the University Building, Washington Square, at noon yesterday. Miss Isabella Mary Pettus of the New York bar presided. The report of the Treasurer, Mrs. Isaac Franklin Russell, showed an active membership of 182 and a balance of cash on hand of $80.

The annual election resulted as follows: President—Miss Isabella Mary Pettus; Vice Presidents—Miss Blanche H. Arnold, Mrs. Frederick E. Stockwell, Miss Jessie Ashley, and Mrs. William B. Millar; Secretary—Miss Edith P. Thomson; Treasurer—Mrs. Isaac Franklin Russell.

The alumnae have endowed a scholarship in the law class with the sum of $500.

A prize of $30 will be awarded at the closing exercises to the member of the graduating class who writes the best essay on "The Monroe Doctrine and Its Modern Applications."

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

Yesterday was rather an off day in society, locally, owing to the Vanderbilt-French wedding, which took away quite a number of people from town. It was even expected that more would have gone to Newport, and in consequence but few entertainments were planned for the date. The influenza which prevails, and which has played much havoc in the social ranks, prevented several of the expected guests from attending the wedding at Newport. Among these were Miss Fredericka Webb and Mr. and Mrs. Elbridge T. Gerry. The opera last evening, however, notwithstanding the Vanderbilt-French wedding and the influenza, presented quite a brilliant appearance, and nearly all the parterre boxes were occupied.

⁂

Mr. William V. B. Kip gave his farewell bachelor dinner last evening at the Metropolitan Club. It was quite a jolly affair. Among his guests were his brother-in-law, Philip Rhinelander, his best man, Matthew Astor Wilks; Cecil Landale, and several others.

⁂

The engagement of Miss Clarisse Coudert, the daughter of Frederic R. Coudert, and Dr. Paul T. Kimball has been announced. Dr. Kimball is a Princeton graduate, and now resident physician at the Laurel-in-the-Pines. Miss Coudert is the only unmarried daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic R. Coudert. She has been at Lakewood this Autumn, stopping with her sister, Mrs. Frederick Benedict.

⁂

Mrs. Henry Lewis Morris, who had cards out for a dance for her débutante daughter, Miss Eleanor Russell Morris, on Thursday evening at the Metropolitan Club Annex, has recalled the invitations owing to the death of Arthur J. Peabody. Mr. Peabody succumbed to an attack of pneumonia on Sunday last. He was an uncle by marriage of Miss Morris, having married Miss Eleanor E. Russell, a sister of Mrs. Henry Lewis Morris. Mrs. Morris and her daughter will not go out in society for the present.

⁂

Mrs. Robert McAllister Lloyd, who also had cards out for a dance in honor of Miss Morris to-night, has also recalled her invitations, so that two of the dances announced for this week are off the books.

⁂

The wedding of William V. B. Kip, son of Dr. Isaac Kip and Mrs. Kip, and Miss Elsa Strong will take place this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. Samuel Penniman, the bride's cousin, 8 East Seventy-seventh Street. Miss Strong's maid of honor will be her cousin, Miss Constance Knower, and the bridesmaids will be the Misses Marie Ceballos Hewitt and Cornelia Brady Harris. Mr. Kip's best man will be Matthew Astor Wilks, and the ushers are to be Philip Rhinelander, Philip Livingston, Gerald H. Gray, and Cecil Landale. The Rev. Dr. William H. Vibbert, rector of Trinity Chapel, will officiate, and Col. John M. Strong of Syracuse, father of the bride, will give her away. After the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Kip will go South, where they will spend the Winter. Much of their time will be passed at Palm Beach, Fla.

⁂

Mrs. J. Langdon Schroeder of 50 West Eleventh Street, will give a dinner for Miss Marie de Neufville to-night, from which some of her guests will go the ball to be given by Mrs. J. J. Astor. Other dinners scheduled are those to be given by Mrs. Morgan Dix for Miss Frederica V. Webb, by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parrish for Capt. Cowles and Mrs. Cowles, by Dr. Everett M. Culver and Mrs. Culver for Mrs. Lewis Rutherfurd Morris, and by Mr. and Mrs. Pembroke Jones at their residence, 13 West Fifty-first Street. One of the largest dinners of the evening will be given at the Metropolitan Club Annex by Mr. and Mrs. Philip Livingston.

⁂

Mrs. Alfred Seaton, Jr., (Miss Mary Louise Barbey,) has cards out for a dinner for young people, which is to be given at her residence, 18 West Thirty-eighth Street, on Wednesday, Jan. 30.

⁂

Mrs. Frederic Nellson gave yesterday afternoon a luncheon at her residence, 100 Fifth Avenue, for a number of her women friends. Mrs. Nellson and her daughter, Miss Kathleen Nellson, gave an "at home" in the afternoon, at which a number of Miss Nellson's débutante girl friends assisted in pouring tea.

THE VANDERBILT CHRISTENING.

Will Take Place This Week at St. Patrick's Cathedral.

Active preparations are being made for the christening of the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., which, if Mrs. Vanderbilt's health permits, will take place this week at St. Patrick's Cathedral. The cefemony will be performed by the Rev. Father Murphy, who married Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt two years ago. It will be held in one of the small chapels of the Cathedral. There will be a christening party afterward at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., at which only the family and a few intimate friends will be present. It is understood that Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs will act as godmother. The selection of the sponsors has been a difficult matter, as the Roman Catholic Church insists that they shall be of that faith; although there may be more than one godfather or godmother, the Roman Catholic one alone is recognized.

It has been somewhat difficult to choose the sponsors, as Mrs. Vanderbilt has very few relatives, and all of the Vanderbilts are Protestants. The difficulty of this selection has been one of the reasons why the baptism has been delayed.

MOTOR VEHICLE LICENSE.

W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Examined by Messrs. Lynch and Beckingham.

Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., were not at the wedding of Alfred G. Vanderbilt and Miss Elsie French. Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt had arranged to go on Sunday, and they were to have been the guests of Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, but Mrs. Vanderbilt was taken ill with a very bad cold, and it was deemed prudent that she should not undertake such a journey. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., appeared at Police Headquarters yesterday in his "White Ghost" just about the hour that his cousin was married at Newport.

He went there to see Police Sergeant Mangin of the Boiler Inspection Department to secure a permit to run a motor vehicle in New York County. He asked Sergt. Mangin to transfer his license from Yonkers to New York, and he was given an application blank, which he filled out. He afterward went into the private office, where Examiners Lynch and Beckingham asked him a few questions.

Cornelius Vanderbilt was in town yesterday. In the morning he was down town, and in the afternoon he went to his office, in the mechanical department of the New York Central Railroad, where he remained until about 5, and returned to his residence, on Washington Square.

Society in Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Mr. and Mrs. Wayne MacVeagh, who recently have completed a house on Massachusetts Avenue, gave their first large dinner of the season this evening. The guests of honor were the Postmaster General and Mrs. Smith.

Prof. and Mrs. Alexander Graham Bell entertained at an evening reception at their Connecticut Avenue residence, the company of 300 being invited to meet Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, the latter formerly Miss Elsie Bell, whose marriage to Mr. Grosvenor took place in London last September.

Mr. Lehr Goes to Baltimore.

Harry Lehr, who has been paying a visit to Mrs. Astor at her residence on Fifth Avenue, left there on Saturday for his home, in Baltimore. It was rumored that Mr. Lehr had accepted the position of secretary to Mrs. Astor, who has been very kind to him since he came to New York, and it was even asserted that a suite of rooms had been fitted up for him at Mrs. Astor's. This, however, has been denied. He was only at the Astor residence on a short visit. Mrs. Astor will sail for Europe early in February.

His Legs Broken on His Wedding Day.

Miss Maria C. Moench of 47 Hicks Street, Jersey City, is prostrated by grief at her home. She was to have been married on Sunday last to Herman C. Gaetgen of 149 Garden Street, Hoboken. Mr. Gaetgen is a grocer, and while placing some Sunday morning orders in a wagon in front of his store the horse started suddenly, throwing Mr. Gaetgen out. Both his legs were broken. He was taken to the hospital, and his clerk at once notified Miss Moench. Although the wedding was only postponed, Miss Moench was prostrated by the shock and was still too ill yesterday to leave her home.

BISHOP OF LONDON DEAD.

Right Rev. Mandell Creighton Expires After a Long and Painful Illness.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The Bishop of London died this afternoon.

His illness was a long and painful one. He recently underwent two operations for abdominal trouble.

The Right Rev. and Right Hon. Mandell Creighton, D. D., was appointed Bishop of London in 1897, and since then the multifarious duties connected with the Bishopric, the most onerous in the United Kingdom, had prevented him from continuing much of his work as a historian. It is, however, as a historian that the Bishop will probably be best remembered, and his "History of the Papacy During the Period of the Reformation" is now one of the standard works of which the study is expected of every student.

Dr. Creighton was born at Carlisle in 1853. He was educated at the Durham Grammar School and at Oxford, where he won a post-mastership at Merton in 1862. His career at the university was a brilliant one, and, after taking two first classes, he was elected a Fellow of Merton. In 1870 he was ordained a deacon, and three years later a priest. After holding pastorates at Embleton and Alnwick, he went to Cambridge in 1883 to fill the newly founded Professorship of Ecclesiastical History, and in the following year he was appointed by the Crown a resident canon at Worcester.

In 1891 Dr. Creighton was appointed Bishop of Peterborough. In 1893 he was elected Hulsean Lecturer at Cambridge, and in 1898 the great distinction of the Professorship of Ancient Literature at the Royal Academy of Arts was conferred upon him. When he was translated to London he was made a Privy Councillor.

In 1886 Dr. Creighton visited this country to represent Cambridge at the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary at Harvard. Various honors were conferred upon him here, while the list of degrees and other distinctions he received in the United Kingdom is too long for recapitulation. He represented the English Church at the coronation of the Czar, and was a notable figure at all great functions which he attended on account of his majestic presence.

The list of Bishop Creighton's historical works is a lengthy one. Among the best-known of them, besides the "History of the Papacy," are "Cardinal Wolsey" and "The Early Renaissance in England." He was founder and first editor of The English Historical Review.

HIS MIND A BLANK FOR YEARS.

Blinn, Who Suddenly Recovered His Reason, Demands Return of Property He Says He Transferred Unwittingly.

Christian Blinn, at one time a wealthy contractor and builder of Harlem, is the plaintiff in a peculiar action now on trial before Justice Truax and a jury in the Supreme Court. Blinn for three years, from 1892 to 1895, was confined in a sanitarium at Flushing, L. I., and during that time he declares that he had no knowledge of what was happening, and after he was suddenly cured of his mental affliction and released from the sanitarium he discovered that he had transferred all of his property to other people and that he was then a poor man. His present action is directed against Julia Schwarz, a former tenant of his, and he is to recover property worth $120,000 of which she now holds the deed. This case is in the nature of a test suit, as on its disposition will depend actions involving some twenty other pieces of property of almost equal value.

On the witness stand yesterday Blinn said that prior to 1892 he was worth nearly a million dollars and was making money as a contractor and builder. He at that time ow

COLUMBIA OARSMEN AT WORK.

Candidates for Places on the 'Varsity Crew Start in Practice Under Coach Hanlan.

Work on the Columbia 'Varsity boat crew was begun yesterday afternoon by Head Coach Ed Hanlan and Capt. F. B. Irvine. Six of last year's 'Varsity eight reported, together with many new candidates, making a total of about fifty men. The number of candidates is always small at the beginning of the season. It is thought that the total will be increased to about seventy-five after the midyear examinations.

Coach Hanlan divided the men who were present into squads of eight and proceeded to coach the divisions separately. First, however, he gave an exhibition on the machine of his stroke for the benefit of the new men. The stroke as taught by Hanlan is about the smoothest known to oarsmen. It is a series of quick, harmonious movements from start to finish. There is no hitch, no jerk, no slow-up on the recover, as in the Peet stroke. The catch is made quickly, with vigorous leg work on the slide. The recover is made quickly and passes without hitch into the next stroke. There seems to be no place where the catch ends and the recover begins, so easily is the whole thing done.

After illustrating his stroke Hanlan set the men to rowing it, but their efforts fell far below the finished exhibition of their coach. Each of the four divisions received about twenty minutes fast work on the machines, after which they donned sweaters and took a long run up Broadway. Some of the candidates who were out were Capt. Irvine, Jackson, Bradley, Nash, Falconer, Bartholomew, Lefferts, Cornell, Austin, Duden, Smythe, Smithers, Heron, Harrison, Mount, Armstead, Huffaker, Burt, A. D. Weekes, H. H. Weekes, Earle, Berliner, Nelser, Hull, Clark, and Brinekerhoff. Of these H. H. Weekes, Smythe, Austin, Huffaker, Cornell, and Nelser were members of last Summer's football squad.

The outlook which faces this year's crew at Columbia is the brightest in the history of rowing at the university. The crew begins work entirely free from debt, which is very unusual at Columbia. Funds are assured from the undergraduates and alumni which will be amply sufficient for a successful season. In addition to this the work of construction on the new boathouse on the Harlem River, which is the gift of an alumnus of the college, soon will begin, and will make the early practice by the crew on the Harlem much more profitable and pleasant than formerly.

Hanlan's work as coach has met with the unqualified approval of the college oarsmen. Last June at Poughkeepsie such a marked improvement was noticed in the crew after he had been in charge for ten days that those who regulate rowing at the university believe that with the men permanently under his charge a winning crew can be developed. At any rate, his 'twenty years' experience on the water will go far toward turning out finished oarsmen.

The material at hand also is both plentiful and of good quality. Many of the new men seem so promising that it is likely that some of last year's 'Varsity eight will have to work hard to retain their seats in the first boat.

CHICAGO BASEBALL SCHEDULE.

'Varsity Club Will Play Half Its Games on Home Grounds.

CHICAGO, Jan. 14.—The University of Chicago baseball schedule which has just been announced includes about twenty-five games, as against thirty-six last year. About half of the games this year will be played on Marshall Field. Two of the Michigan games will be played at Ann Arbor and two of the Northwestern games at Evanston. Wisconsin, Illinois, and Purdue will be played upon their home grounds. Saturday, June 1, the team will leave for a week's trip in the East, playing Brown at Providence, Harvard at Cambridge, Holy Cross at Worcester, Mass., and a fourth game, which has not yet been definitely decided upon. It will probably be played with Columbia at New York, as the Columbia game last year was canceled.

Pennsylvania is left out of the schedule this season. Coach Stagg made an effort to arrange a date at Philadelphia during his Eastern trip, but found the Quaker team was planning a trip for the same week, so, for the first time in three years, Pennsylvania and Chicago will not meet in baseball. The schedule is as follows:

April 6—Physicians and Surgeons, at Marshall Field.
April 10—Wheaton College at Marshall Field.
April 16—Michigan at Marshall Field.
April 20—Northwestern at Evanston.
April 27—Northwestern at Marshall Field.
May 1—Illinois at Marshall Field.
May 4—Notre Dame at Marshall Field.
May 8—Illinois at Marshall Field.
May 11—Wisconsin at Madison.
May 15—Michigan at Ann Arbor.
May 17—Illinois at Champagne.
May 18—Purdue at Lafayette.
May 22—Illinois at Marshall Field.
May 25—Wisconsin at Marshall Field.
May 29—Iowa at Marshall Field.
June 1—Northwestern at Evanston.
June 3—Brown at Providence.
June 4—Harvard at Cambridge.
June 5—Holy Cross at Worcester.
June 8—Michigan at Ann Arbor.
June 15—Northwestern at Marshall Field.
June 17—Michigan at Marshall Field.

Yachts at City Island.

Special to The New York Times.

CITY ISLAND, Jan. 14.—The keel and frame have been set up on E. H. Weatherbee's centreboard knockabout, now under construction at the Jacob yard. The new boat will soon be planked and ready to be launched. The dimensions are 42 feet over all, 28 feet water line, 11 feet beam, and 4 feet draught, from designs of Carey, Smith & Barbey. This morning one of the deputies from the City Marshal's office tacked a libel notice for more than $1,300 on Archibald Watt's steam yacht Golden Rod. The claim is in favor of the Daltell Towing Company of New York. The Golden Rod is lying in the marine basin at the Jacob yard, where she recently was overhauled and repainted.

At the Woods yard, this place, the keel has been laid, and the frames are being bent for a new composite sloop for W. B. Foote, Jr., from designs of Gardiner & Cox. The dimensions are 58 feet 1 inch over all, 35 feet water line, 12 feet beam, and 8 feet draught, of the keel type. The keel and frame are all that will be constructed at the Woods yard. These will be set up, then taken apart and shipped to the northern part of the State for completion. The vessel is for use on Lake Champlain next season.

Winter Golf in Florida.

Special to The New York Times.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Jan. 14.—Although the amateurs have been playing over the new eighteen-hole course for ten days, trying its merits, there was no real match until to-day, when A. H. Fenn, the professional, played the best ball of Charles B. Corry and George Dutton, both members of the Oakley Club. Play started at 10 o'clock in the morning, and proved of great interest for the spectators, as the match was very close throughout. Mr. Corry went out in 40 and returned in 39. Mr. Dutton was out in 42 and turned home in 44, while Fenn went out in 35 and returned in 37. The best ball of the amateurs was 35 and 48. Up to the last hole in match play Fenn stood 1 up and 1 to play. Then Mr. Dutton holed from outside the green in 3, leaving Mr. Fenn 1 up on the match. The same players expect to try their skill again to-morrow morning. Mr. Dutton holds the amateur record of the new course, 76, and Fenn the professional record of 70.

The course is a trifle short, but in this climate a longer course would not be welcomed by the golfers. As it stands, the distance is about 4,400 yards. Among other players now here are Devereaux Emmet of Garden City, A. W. Black of Lakewood, E. A. Milliken of Boston, H. M. Stevenson of the Washington Park Club, Chicago, and Sidney Maddock of the Crescent Athletic Club.

Duffy to Race at K. A. C. Meeting.

The Games Committee of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club has added a 60-yard scratch race to the programme for Feb. 4 in the Madison Square Garden, and one of the first men to enter is Arthur F. Duffy of Georgetown University. Duffy is anxious to meet Maxwell Long, by whom he was defeated in the 100-yard run at the National Amateur Athletic Union championships last September. Not alone is the Georgetown flier confident he can show his heels to the fleet New Yorker but that he can lower the world's record of 6 2-5 seconds held jointly by himself, J. W. B. Tewkesbury, and the late L. E. Myers. It is expected that A. H. Kent, the speedy young sprinter of the Pastimo Athletic Club, will be a competitor, as many experts believe him to be equal to Duffy or Long for 60 yards. There is little doubt that Duffy can clip a fifth of a second off the existing record, as he is in better trim than at any former time in his career. He is much faster on a board track than on a clay path, and thinks if he should strike a favorable day he should run the distance in six seconds flat.

Eighth Regiment's Games.

The committee in charge of the athletic tournament, planned by the Eighth Regiment for Jan. 19 and 26, will not meet until this evening, and entries for all the cycling events will be received up to that time. They will not be held open after that time, as the handicapper must have sufficient time to place the men at their proper marks. Training privileges are allowed to all competitors four nights a week. The competitors have been familiarizing themselves with the track for several weeks. The following is a complete list of the events to be decided:

Jan. 19—Trials, two-mile bicycle race, handicap; trials, one-mile bicycle race, novice; trials, five-mile pursuit race; final, five-mile pursuit race.

Jan. 26—Final two-mile bicycle race, handicap; final one-mile bicycle race, handicap; final one-mile bicycle race, novice; trials and final 60-yard dash handicap; trials and final 300-yard run, handicap; 880-yard run, handicap, and one-mile run, handicap.

Entries for the cycle events will be received until this evening by Capt. George F. Jacoby, Eighth Regiment Armory, New York. Entries for the athletic events will close Jan. 21 with the same officer.

Columbia Athletes to Meet.

A mass meeting of the candidates for the 'Varsity and class track teams at Columbia University will be held in Havemeyer Hall to-morrow afternoon at 4:30. Ernest Hjertberg, the trainer; Capt. J. B. Smith, and several prominent alumni will address the meeting and discuss the plans for the season.

Equestrian Games in Brooklyn.

With a view to increasing interest in the Brooklyn Riding and Driving Club's weekly music ride the Executive Committee of the organization has prepared a novel programme for to-morrow evening. The riding rfing of the club, Park Circle, Brooklyn, will be the scene of the innovation, at which, under the leadership of Riding Master Harry Taylor, there will be some new formations and evolutions, to the music of a string orchestra. Then will follow two special competitions, one for the male members of the club, which promises to bring out all the best horsemen, and the other an egg and spoon race for the women of the organization. The latter event has one of the largest entry lists that any event of the kind has ever attracted. The married women of the club will preside. Tea will be served at the conclusion of the sports.

Rowing for New York University.

After two years of talk on the subject, plans for the organization of a boat crew for New York University have begun to take definite shape. The leading spirit in the matter is Commodore David Banks. If the students decide favorably upon a suggestion he has offered, a crew soon will be secured to represent the college. Commodore Banks visited the heights yesterday afternoon and talked with a number of the students regarding the matter and urged them to agitate the question.

The greatest difficulties to be met are those of expense and material. Commodore Banks stated that the cost of a crew will not exceed $1,600. Another objection then was brought up in the statement that a crew will greatly interfere with the athletic teams the university is supporting at present. Commodore Banks will visit the university again the latter part of the week, when the matter will be settled.

Imp Will Race Again.

That the most popular racehorse in America, the great old mare Imp, will race again is settled. There has been much comment on the fact that her name did not appear in the list of entries to the important Spring handicaps, but Imp's absence from these events does not mean that she is to be retired. In a letter to Ralph Bayard, Secretary of the Brighton Beach Racing Association, Daniel R. Harness, breeder and owner of the famous old black mare, writes of his plans for the season as follows:

My friends have prevailed upon me to let Imp go out again, and I have made arrangements with Peter Wimmer to handle her through the coming season. She will leave home about Feb. 1 for New York in company with the Wimmer horses, which are now wintering in Kentucky. I am sorry, very sorry, that she is not in the Brighton Handicap and Brighton Cup, now closed, of which you send me printed copies of the entries. Imp is, to all appearances, as good as she ever was, and if Mr. Wimmer gets her on edge, the horse that beats her will know that he has been to the races. Yours truly,

D. R. HARNESS.

Motor Vehicles at Moderate Cost Attract Much Attention.

Several new motor vehicles were added to the exhibits of the Bicycle Show in Madison Square Garden yesterday. One of these was sold within two hours of the time it was placed on exhibition to Miss Anna Cornell of this city, who has the honor of being the first purchaser of a horseless vehicle at this week's show. Her machine is an electric runabout, very neat in appearance. It is the output of a Western firm which has been very successful in bicycles, and was quick to enter the new market when the motor vehicle bid fair to act as a powerful rival to the bicycle.

Another novelty in the automobile line is the trimoto. Two of these vehicles came in yesterday. This vehicle furnishes another example of the many efforts recently made to supply a serviceable automobile at a low price. The trimoto is a low, open carriage, with but three wheels, as the name suggests. The odd wheel is directly in front of the vehicle, protected by the dashboard, and is slightly smaller than the two side wheels. Gasoline furnishes the power, the tank holding one and a half gallons. One charge is sufficient for forty-five miles, at the rate of twelve miles an hour. The vehicle is made for two persons and its cost has been brought to the low figure of $425. The trimotos are manufactured in Chicago and have been for sale barely two months. They possess about two horse power.

In the purely bicycle realm, of which a bewildering array of varieties, with the latest devices and other twentieth century improvements, are temptingly displayed on the floor of the Garden, the booths possessing motor cycles were constantly surrounded by interested spectators. The latest model of this clever combination of an automatic and pedaling contrivance for speed shows practically all of the machinery within the diamond frame, except the battery, which occupies the place where the bicycle toolbag is usually found. The little gasoline tank holds five pints, and it is claimed that it will carry the rider seventy-five miles, at the rate of twenty miles an hour. The horse power is one and a half, and the motor cycle weighs seventy-five pounds. It sells for $200. A clever device stops the motor cycle instantly by a twist on one of the handles. The vibration is not so great as in some of the speedy motor pacing machines, and this new model presents many novel features of interest to those who do not object to the bicycle style automobile. On the floor in the basement of the Garden, one of the motor cycles was in practical operation during the greater part of the day, and being the only bicycle under human propulsion in this show, it was inspected by many visitors from both a scientific and curious standpoint.

A large number of out-of-town bicycle dealers visited the Garden in the afternoon, and most of them made a critical examination of the new points for bicycle convenience which are being shown. The price tags on the bicycles are in significant contrast to the figures seen three years ago. Seventy-five dollars now buys the very best chainless wheel, with the latest improvements in coasting brake and handles, while for from $25 to $40 one may purchase a durable chain wheel, which is all the ordinary rider would wish. About twenty pounds is the weight of the all-around roadster, but for lighter work, they may be had one or two pounds less in weight.

There was a large attendance in the evening, and several quaint bicycle souvenirs were distributed among the visitors.

Wee Burn Golf Club's Officers.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Jan. 14.—At the annual meeting of the members of the Wee Burn Golf Club the following Governors were elected to serve until January, 1904: A. S. Pitt, W. D. Daskam, H. L. Williams, W. N. Capen, and J. T. Williams, Jr. The Governors whose terms did not expire and who, with those named, make up the Governing Board, are: Class of 1903—John D. Crimmins, S. Merritt, A. H. Smith, M. R. Pitt, James S. Jenkins. Class of 1902—H. F. Devens, W. L. Baldwin, E. E. Brugger-hoff, S. W. Smith, F. H. White. The Board of Governors has elected the following officers: President—John D. Crimmins; Vice President—Edward E. Bruggerhoff; Secretary—Harvey L. Williams; Treasurer—Wilson L. Baldwin; Captain—Alfred S. Pitt. Delegates were chosen as follows: To the United States Golf Association, John D. Crimmins; to the Metropolitan Golf Association, Alfred S. Pitt and Harvey L. Williams; to the League of Connecticut Golf Clubs, Harvey L. Williams; to the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association, Mrs. Franklin M. Jones and Mrs. Harvey L. Williams. The President has announced the appointment of the following standing committees: Greens Committee—Edward E. Bruggerhoff, Chairman; Archibald H. Smith, and Wilson L. Baldwin; Handicap Committee—Malcolm R. Pitt, Chairman; John T. Williams, Jr., and Schuyler Merritt; House Committee—Walter N. Capen, Chairman; James H. Jenkins, and Alfred S. Pitt; Committee on Admissions—Stewart W. Smith, Chairman; Walter D. Daskam, and Dr. J. H. White. The club has now over 140 members, and is in better condition financially than at any time since its organization. The course is open for play all Winter, and while many members avail themselves of the opportunity offered by the open Winter to play golf, more are interested in trap shooting. The club installed a clay pigeon trap about a year ago, and handicap sweepstakes are shot off every Saturday afternoon, while special events are arranged for holidays.

HUDSON GUNNERS AT THE TRAPS.

Club Competitions at Clay Birds Made Interesting Races.

Special to The New York Times.

EAST HARRISON, N. J., Jan. 14.—The trap shooting competitions of the Hudson Rod and Gun Club of Jersey City, decided here to-day on the club's grounds, produced some close contests at the traps. Dr. Louis H. O'Connell, Albert A. Schoverling, Henry Bock, and Charles F. Dudley made the best scores in a series of well-contested events. All the competitions were at clay birds. A programme of nine events was decided. Bock and Dr. O'Connell tied in the first, dividing the stakes. Dudley won the next, Dr. O'Connell won the next three, and then Schoverling, Dudley, and Schoverling won succeeding events in the order named.

The annual meeting held prior to the shooting showed the club to be in splendid condition. The membership is large, and the organization has a substantial surplus in the treasury. The following officials were chosen for the ensuing term: President—Henry Bock; Vice President—William H. Wild; Financial Secretary—Thomas Kelly; Recording Secretary—James Hughes; Field Captain—Dr. Louis H. O'Connell; Sergeant at Arms—John Doran; Executive Committee—The above officers and Albert A. Schoverling, Frederick Altz, and S. Brown. A summary of the shooting follows:

Sweepstakes at Ten Birds Each.—Dr. Louis H. O'Connell, 9; Charles F. Dudley, 8; S. Brown, 5; A. A. Schoverling, 5; George Hughes, 7; Harry Lee, 6; Frederick Altz, 5; James Hughes, 5; Henry Bock, 9; Dr. James, 8; John Jones, 4.

Renewal, Same Conditions.—Dudley, 8; Dr. O'Connell, 7; Bock, 7; Schoverling, 5; J. Hughes, 5; Brown, 4; G. Hughes, 4; Lee, 4; Altz, 4.

Sweepstakes at Fifteen Birds Each.—Known Traps, Unknown Angles.—Dr. O'Connell, 12; Schoverling, 12; Hansmann, 11; Bock, 11; Dudley, 10; Lee, 8; G. Hughes, 8; Brown, 8; J. Hughes, 8; Altz, 6.

Sweepstakes, Expert Traps, Fifteen Singles each.—Dr. O'Connell, 13; Lee, 12; J. Hughes, 11; Bock, 10; Dudley, 10; Schoverling, 9; Altz, 8; Brown, 8; G. Hughes, 6; Henry Hansmann, 9.

Renewal, Same Conditions.—Hansmann, 12; Dr. O'Connell, 13; Dudley, 11; Bock, 11; Brown, 10; Lee, 10; Altz, 10; J. Hughes, 10; Jones, 7; G. Hughes, 8; Schoverling, 8.

Fifteen Birds, Known Traps and Angles.—Dr. O'Connell, 13; Dudley, 12; Schoverling, 12; Bock, 11; Hansmann, 11; Brown, 9; G. Hughes, 9; J. Hughes, 9.

Renewal, Same Conditions.—Dudley, 12; Schoverling, 12; Hansmann, 11; Bock, 11; Brown, 9; G. Hughes, 9; J. Hughes, 9.

Fifteen Single Birds, Expert Traps.—Schoverling, 13; Dudley, 11; G. Hughes, 11; Bock, 10; Hansmann, 10; J. Hughes, 7; Brown, 9.

Sweepstakes, Fifteen Targets per man, Expert Traps.—Dudley, 14; Bock, 13; Schoverling, 11; Hansmann, 10; G. Hughes, 5; Brown, 6.

Final Handicap.—Schoverling, 13; Bock, 11; Dudley, 10; Brown, 6; G. Hughes, 9; Hansmann, 12.

Trap Shooters' Match Postponed.

The private trap shooting match between Ira McKane, George Tappan, and John J. Pillion, arranged to be held yesterday at the Cedars, the grounds of the Shepherd Bay Gun Club, did not come off according to schedule. The men were slated to have shot twenty-five birds each, but on the plea that the "wind blew too hard" Mr. Tappan declined to shoot. Then Mr. Pillion declined to go on and the match fell through. It probably will come off later. Ira McKane, at twenty-eight yards, and George McKane, his uncle, at twenty-five yards, shot a match at twenty-five birds each. It was a close contest, Ira bringing down nineteen of his allotted twenty and George McKane killing eighteen.
